SUMMARY.

A mishap occurred to H.M.S. Invincible while undergoing an overhaul in dock at Portsmouth.

The cruiser's weight buckled her steel frames, and when the vessel was refloated serious injuries were disclosed.

The airship bought for the nation by a fund organised by the "Morning Post" has been wrecked at Farnborough.

The Invalidity and Unemployment Insurance Bill was introduced in the House of Commons by the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The Government is to devote £1,500,000 to assist in building sanatoriums for consumptives.

The Liberals are enthusiastic regarding the whole scheme.

The members of the Labour party generally approve the bill.

The London newspapers express satisfaction that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is to attend the Imperial Conference.

Mr. Asquith states that the Government is still divided regarding the expediency of women suffrage.

Unionist members of the House of Commons have decided to oppose payment of members.

The death is announced of Mr. Walter Savill, sen., of the shipping firm of Shaw, Savill, and Company.

The Methodist Church appeal court at Toronto has decided against female representation at the general conference.

Two thousand rebels threaten the capital of Mexico, and famine conditions prevail. The country is more unsettled than ever.

Nineteen indictments against the brothers M'Namara have been returned in connection with the Los Angeles dynamite outrage.

Large numbers of letters are being received by Mr. Knibbs correcting the ages given in the census papers.

The State vote on the referendum is now almost complete. The total vote will be close upon 250,000.

Sir James Mills has been interviewed in Auckland as to the possibility of a three days' service between Auckland and Sydney.

He said that a 15-knots service was as much as could reasonably be expected.

The first day's operations in the two-days' tactical scheme was successfully carried out at the Light Horse camp.

The action took place in the vicinity of Carne's Hill, and the supposed hostile force was driven back.

The printers' trouble in Hobart culminated in a notification that the men would cease work unless their demands were conceded.

This action meant the stoppage of the newspapers, and forced the master printers to accept the position under protest.

A deputation waited upon the Acting Treasurer to draw attention to laxity of control in the use of explosives.

Mr. Carmichael admitted that there appeared to be extraordinary laxity with reference to the storage of explosives.

The first sod of the railway from Stanley to Balfour, in Tasmania, was turned by the Governor.

The Bishop of Bathurst, Dr. Camidge, died suddenly at Bishopscourt yesterday morning from heart failure.

Labour members are to confer with the union as to the position arising out of the harvester strike.

Either the strike will be ended, or support to the strikers will be extended.

The 31 sets of instruments for use in the automatic telephone system have been placed in position at the Exchange.

A careful test will be made, the automatic principle taking its trial alongside the ordinary method of "calling."

The master hairdressers proposal to advance the price for haircutting and shaving is meeting with opposition in the suburbs.

Mr. Carmichael is considering the question of putting an end to the system of divided control at Newcastle.

The school board conference at Perth has demanded a wide extension of the Education Department's sphere.

The Tramway Advisory Committee inspected the route of the proposed Marrickville tram extension yesterday morning.

The committee later in the day visited Willoughby to gather information as to the requirements of the district.

The Labour Council executive has affirmed the principle of compulsory industrial arbitration as against strikes.

The members of the United Storemen's Union are dissatisfied with their present rate of wages.

They intend to ask the shipping companies for a conference to discuss certain proposals.

Judge Heydon has recommended the constitution of a wages board for coke-workers.

The unionist co-operative concerns at Broken Hill are reported to have proved unsuccessful.

At the coal vend case yesterday schedules of prices charged for coal in Victoria during various years were submitted.

The Crown sought to show that competition was killed and prices were raised by the operations of the alleged combine in Victoria.

Soundings on the Richmond River bar gave 10ft at high water. Some steamers bumped heavily when crossing out yesterday.

A Scottish professional golfer, who has arrived in Sydney, says that golf in England is at a high level.

The Savings Bank trustees state that depositors must be consulted before amalgamation can be effected.

They declare that the scheme is not one of amalgamation, but provides for absorption by the Government institution.

The Acting Treasurer explains that in the proposed amalgamation the interests of depositors will be safeguarded.

The Terra Nova is being refitted in New Zealand for survey work between Cape Maria van Diemen and the Three Kings.

The Albert Park (Vic.) branch of the Political Labour Council discussed the attitude of Messrs. M'Gowen, Holman, and Beeby.

A motion for an expression of opinion as to dealing with them was lost on the president's casting vote.

The Pelaw-Main miners rejected the suggestion from the conference to return to work on the old conditions.

The price of milk paid to suppliers in the South Coast district is to be raised to 8d per gallon.

The price may be expected to be advanced to 9d later in the winter.

Recent heavy frosts have given the pastures in the South Coast a brown appearance. Rain is needed for the crops.

Mr. Doolette, managing director of the Bullfinch Proprietary mine, denies that the rich ore in the mine has petered out.

He is confident that further exploration of the lode will realise expectations.

The Oddfellows' Conference at Goulburn negatived a proposal to establish a hospital fund.

The Drapers' Wages Board in Melbourne has increased the wages of male drapers' assistants from £2 10s a week to £2 15s.

The contests for the interstate eight-oar and single sculls championships will take place on the Parramatta this afternoon.

There are six crews in the eight-oar race, those most fancied being New South Wales, Tasmania, and Victoria.

Sydney put up a record for shipping yesterday. Of the 24 arrivals, six only represented the coastal trade.

In the matter of big boat departures the day also stood out prominently.

Business in the local wool market has been of moderate dimensions. A brisk market is anticipated next week.

Mining stocks were slack yesterday, and values were easier.

A good trade was done in all lines in the produce markets. Maize advanced in price.

The London wheat markets are firm, and prices have advanced. Butter is dull, with a downward tendency.

Forecast: Fine and mild generally; still a tendency for isolated thunder showers in the west, more fogs likely.

FARMER'S BLANKET LAND IS ALL AGLOW WITH WARM CHEERY COSY BLANKETS.

Now that the real cold weather is so imminent there can be no question as to the advisability of immediately purchasing ample quantities of warm Blankets.

It makes one feel warm to look at the piles of soft snug Blankets in our Manchester Room!

They represent the pick of the best Blanket manufacturers, culled from the markets of the world.

One Manufacturer may specialise in a particular make of Blanket—another manufacturer in some other kind, and the masterpieces of each mill we select for our patrons, thus ensuring the highest possible degree of Blanket perfection. We list instances.—

ON GLOVES AND THE DAVID JONES POLICY.

Our Policy is satisfaction to our Clients. It applies to Gloves just as much as to any other merchandise we sell, and we are always ready to make good any defective article that by some mischance has left our store.
Selling only dependable goods is another keynote—and when one comes to our Store to buy Gloves there is no exception to this great rule. It is just the same for the woman in the country.—Every article she buys, with but a few exceptions, goes carriage paid; and with the assurance that, should it not be satisfactory, it may be returned. Remember that on all Goods except Furniture, Floor Covering, Kitchen and Hard Ware, to any part of the Commonwealth. Only on Toys when ordered with other goods.

FOR GOLFERS.

A NEW NORFOLK JACKET.

Always on the lookout as we are for something new that will appeal to Golfers, this Norfolk Jacket of our introduction is one that fills a distinct want—and fills it well.

It is like an ordinary Norfolk Coat, but knitted just as a sweater is; this ensures warmth, lightness, and while its woollen nature protects the body from chills, its loose knit gives that freedom to the limbs so necessary to Golfers.

The colour is a Heather Brown—specially selected, as not readily soiling.

PRICE 25/, POSTAGE 1/.

RYDE BRIDGE TO SEARL'S MONUMENT.

It is hereby notified that the Interstate Eight-oar Race and Sculling Race will be rowed on the Parramatta River on SATURDAY, the 6th instant, between the hours of 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. These races have been sanctioned by the Sydney Harbour Trust Commissioners, in accordance with Regulation No. 113, which provides:—

A clear mid channel track of not less than 300 feet wide shall be maintained and preserved along the entire length of the course of any boat race specially sanctioned by the Commissioners to be held in the Port, and a vessel shall not on the day of such race be upon any part of the said track after the time of day notified in a daily newspaper (published and circulated in Sydney on or prior to the day of the race) until the finish of the race.

Attention is also directed to the following Regulation, No. 114:—

A steamer returning from any race on the Parramatta River shall not be driven at a speed exceeding 6 knots an hour until such steamer shall have passed under or through Gladesville Bridge.

NOTE.—The S.S. Koree, the S.S. Kulgoa, and the Empire's Boat Vaucluse are the only boats authorised to follow the race. All other boats shall anchor well clear of the course, and be in position not later than 3 p.m. Vessels so anchored shall not get under weigh until the completion of the last race.

THE JERSEY CITY STANDARD MARINE OIL ENGINES.

Mr. Norman Wheatley (Plantation Owner) of Gizo, Solomon Islands, writes:—
"Having thoroughly 'tried out' a 25-h.p. 'JERSEY CITY STANDARD' Engine for two years, under all conditions, I want TWO 'JERSEY CITY STANDARDS,' of 30-h.p. each, for a schooner I am building; also two 8-h.p. 'JERSEY CITY STANDARDS' for smaller vessels. In my opinion, these Engines 'STAND ALONE,' and I will have no other make."
The above speaks for itself.
These Engines are GUARANTEED to develop 25 per cent. more horse-power than rated at.

The Medical Faculty throughout the Universe agree that bodily perfection is the result of a healthy mind.

A change of scene and environment is constantly being prescribed by doctors as a PANACEA FOR MANY ILLS.

Our Photo-Play Productions prevent you falling into bad health, and are just what the doctor would prescribe.

SEATED IN COMFORTABLE and WELL-APPOINTED CUSHIONED SEATS, your body is at perfect ease when your brain feasts on comical and sentimental plays, which issue from our productions.

We dispense the prescription at the ridiculously cheap rate of 3d or 6d A TIME, for the former is the price of admission to the Stalls, and the latter pays for admission to the Circle.

If you desire the full course of treatment, it will cost you 9d or 1s 6d, which will entitle you to admission to all our theatres, and if you are not cured after the full course, you had better CONSULT A SPECIALIST in chronic ailments.

OUR PHOTO-PLAYS ACT ON THE LIVER with marvellous accuracy, but they won't obliterate a Cancer.

When Shakespeare wrote, "Throw physic to the dogs," he must have had in his "mind's eye" an idea of the shows at the Lyric and Colonial Theatres, I. and II.

Our Photo-plays DO NOT INTOXICATE, BUT THEY STIMULATE.

BE TRUE TO YOURSELF, and save doctors' bills by patronising the above theatres, and don't forget there is a different performance at each theatre.

The Thursday of the "Prometheus" was a day of storm and wind, and Reinhardt returned from a long morning at the theatre, wet through. He was in high spirits, scoffed at his wife's remonstrance, ate an enormous meal, to last him till his late supper, and fell heavily asleep in his armchair over a cigar.

"Friedheim is flushed," said Frau Bertha to Sarolta.

The two sat together in the overheated salon; the rain was streaming against the panes, and even the air-loving Sarolta could not venture out. She had promised, moreover, to help her hostess with the mending of Prometheus' tunic, which was unexpectedly discovered to be torn.

"What weather," proceeded the wife. "What a career. And my Friedheim excites himself so much over his work."

A long snore penetrated through the half-open door of the dining-room. For the fourth time Frau Reinhardt left her sewing to creep across the painted boards and look in upon her sleeping lord.

"He is certainly flushed," she repeated when she returned.

But though there was herring, salad, and Hamburg steak for supper that night, Prometheus was unable to do justice to either. He was heavy and unlike himself, thought Sarolta, though unalterably good-tempered. Finally, in answer to his wife's questions, delivered with almost irate anxiety, he confessed that he had headache.

"Thou didst catch a chill this morning. . . . I knew it," she cried tragically. "Thou wast naturally perspiring at rehearsal, and didst come forth into the wet. Ach, did I not bid thee take thy rain-coat."

"It was not raining when I left. It was not that. But to-night—nay, it is true, on the stage I was cold. They left some windows open—and thou knowest it is a heavy part."

Frau Bertha, in what Sarolta could not help think irritating and disproportionate solicitude, urged a cold packing, at which Friedheim shivered; then a steam bath, upon which he vowed he was burning hot, and in proof of it extended his hand. The wife had a fresh explosion as she felt it. She seemed unaccountably angry, Sarolta thought.

"Fever—thou hast fever," she exclaimed accusingly.

He laughed at her, heartily enough to disarm such suspicions.

"I only want bed, my little wife."

He consented, however, to camomile tea.

In the dawn Sarolta was awakened by her hostess's appearance at her bedside.

"Fraulein Sarolta, rouse yourself, for God's sake!" Through webs of tangled dreams the girl stared, not sure if this were not also a dream. "My Friedheim is ill—oh, so ill. I must have the doctor. Yet I cannot leave him. I do not know which way to turn—Rosa is so stupid."

Sarolta sat up. This was no dream. The plump, bustling, self-satisfied Bertha was trembling, and seemed quite unaware of the tears that were coursing down her cheeks.

"I will go," cried the girl promptly. "Don't be frightened—of course it's only influenza."

"Ach, he is so ill," moaned Bertha. It was the poor woman's very composure as she explained the address and the shortest road to the doctor that most impressed upon the listener the urgency of the moment. But, as soon as she felt herself understood, she broke down again.

"Ach, if we had not been exiled here," she sobbed. "No telephone . . . such a distance . . . If I lose my Freidhel—" She rushed away upon these words.

"If I lose my Friedel!" The thought pursued Sarolta as she dressed with a haste that almost defeated its own end. Surely it was not possible that such a catastrophe could threaten! Only yesterday he had entered upon them in splendour of health; had laughed and eaten and slept with all his Viking zest. It was nonsense, of course—only Frau Bertha's inborn fussiness.

Yet, as Sarolta ran down the creaking wooden stairs and out into the misty garden, where daylight was still but a lividness on the face of night, a sense of immense tragedy had already taken possession of her soul.

Although every medical authority of note in Frankheim assembled in the wooden house by degrees that day, to fight for Friedhelm Reinhardt's life, from the very beginning it was a losing battle.

To mind the little Ulrich in the attic nursery, while a distracted Rosa ran between kitchen and sick-room, was all that Sarolta could do. With the artist's horror of pain and painful emotions, she was glad enough not to be wanted below. She sat the long hours through, listening to the hurried feet that went in and out, to and fro, on the stairs and passages; to the sound of the motors that crunched upon the road. And ever and anon the cry of a voice, dreadfully hoarse, would reach her and set her shuddering; the tenor was delirious, and now would sing, in unrecognisable notes, some stave that had flowed in such golden purity from his lips only a few hours ago; now, declaring that the horn was calling him, would strive to rise from his bed in such fever strength that it was as much as Webel and the doctors could do to hold him down.

The little Ulrich, not yet two years old, was a heavy, healthy child, to whom Sarolta had never felt herself in the least drawn. His contented stolidity, however, made her task very easy. She had nothing to distract her mind from its anxiety. And all the while her heart was sick within her. She had not realised before how much Friedheim, great artist and simple kindly-hearted man, had become endeared to her! Never had she had from him anything but pleasant looks and words and helpful deeds. It came upon her now that life without his genial presence would be a cold place; yes, even to her who carried such fire in her heart.

When Ulrichchen had docilely taken his supper and as docilely laid himself to sleep in the little white cot, Sarolta crept down the stairs. The house had grown very still; the carriage and the two cars had gone away, and she knew that Webel also had left, for she had heard his voice in the garden. She was driven by the desire to ask when the Master might be expected; but she did not dare knock at that closed door, and so she sat on the lowest step of the staircase waiting. She wished that it were not all so silent; she could hear the distant voice of the torrent—so silent it was! Presently a bell rang shrilly from the sick-room, and with unusual promptitude Rosa pounded up the stairs, carrying a large block of ice in a basin. Frau Bertha came out as the heavy footsteps reached the landing. Impulsively Sarolta sprang forward; but the question died half-spoken on her lips as the other turned her face towards her. It was swollen and glazed with tears beyond recognition. But Frau Bertha was not crying now; she looked at Sarolta with a dreadful blank stare, snatched the ice from Rosa, and went back into the room.

Before the door was closed again, Sarolta caught a glimpse of the doctor she had herself fetched that morning; he was sitting at the foot of the bed, with his hands folded.

Heavily she went back to the attic, carrying the omen of that motionless figure in her heart; he was sitting with his hands folded—he could do no more. And Reinhardt lay so still.

She made no attempt to go to bed, but sat in the nursery armchair, feeding the stove from time to time, that its company might not fail her.

About midnight there was once again a stir echoing through the wooden house. It was no advent from without—the commotion came from within. Once she heard the doctor's voice crying an order on the landing. The running of feet and the opening and closing of doors went on for a little while, and then the silence fell again. Then, just as Sarolta's palpitation heart was settling into some kind of quietness, Rosa's tired slouching tread resounded on the creaking stairs, stumbling with haste.

"Fraulein, Fraulein!" she gasped, bursting into the nursery, "the Herr is dying, and the mistress says"—she struggled for breath—"the mistress says, you are to bring the little one—at once—at once!"

Sarolta heard the girl sob aloud as she tramped down the stairs again.

At once—at once! There was no time for her to pause upon the terror and the sorrow of it; to listen to the shrinking coward instinct that would bid her fly and hide. She caught the sleeping child from his bed, wrapped him in the eiderdown, and, staggering under his weight, carried him out of the room. As the light of the landing struck upon his face he opened his eyes and pulled a lip of distress; but he was a good child, and the cry was no more than a whimper. It brought Frau Bertha out upon them instantly. Much as she had snatched the basin from Rosa's hand she now snatched her child. Not knowing what else to do, Sarolta followed her into the room.

She need not have dreaded the sight of the sick man. Reinhardt lay all his great length in a wonderful placidity. His bearded head was low on the pillows, and in the shaded light there seemed little change about his grand features. Only one hand outstretched upon the coverlet was touched with the lamp rays, and Sarolta saw that it was already the colour of death, and that it was never a moment still, but plucked and plucked as if at invisible blades of grass. And the doctor sat where he had sat before—with his hands folded.

She stood just inside the door; she heard the child's whimper, louder raised, and Reinhardt's voice—his own voice once more, only very far away.

"The poor little one! . . . . Lay him close that I may kiss him, Bertha."

Frau Bertha moved in a tense silence.

"Is that Sarolta?"—the far-away voice spoke again.

Sarolta came to the bedside; but he did not seem to know that she was close to him, and spoke straight before him.

"Ach, Sarolta, wie schoen haben wir zusammen gesungen—I shall never sing Hippolytus now."

The wife turned with a fierce movement from the father bed in which she had just laid the child. She fell on her knees, and caught the plucking hand.

"Ach, Friedhelm, Friedhelm . . . hast thou nothing to say to me—to me, thy wife?"

With all his failing senses he tried to respond to that cry. The light of the deep undeviating love of his whole manhood shone upon his face. He made an effort to turn in the bed towards her.

"Mein armes, gutes Weibchen!"

The words were more breathed than spoken, and then that very breath seemed to stop. Sarolta caught her own to listen; she saw the doctor half rise from his chair, and then fall back with a single gesture of helplessness.

A low moan from Frau Bertha intensified the awful waiting. Then, all at once, the giant figure raised itself sitting in the bed. Staring with widely-opened eyes at that point of the room where Sarolta had first stood when she entered, the dying man flung out his hand towards it.

"Sarolta," he cried, in a loud, warning voice, "hute Dich . . . have a care!"

The doctor sprang forward; but it was Frau Bertha who caught her husband in her arms as he fell back. But even as she did so, she flung one look at Sarolta—a look of hatred. It was across a dead man.

"God's will!" said the doctor. His voice broke: he had been Friedhelm's close friend.

Steps upon the stairs without!—steps and a voice she knew.

"The Master is here!" said Webel, entering: a thrill of hopeful excitement in his usually level tones.

"It is too late!"

Sarolta never knew if anyone had really said the words aloud, or if it were only the utterance of her own grief; but she knew that the conductor's voice trailed off with a groan, and that, as he stood blocking the doorway, some one thrust him aside.

Then, while the great silence of Death held them all, Lothnar's presence filled the room.

The girl had no thought now but for him. She saw him stand, his rough travel cloak flung open, his rugged face set as if granite-hewn; only his eyes moved from Reinhardt's still face to the faces of those about the bed—the widow's, the doctor's, her own. In spirit she flung out her arms to him with an impulse of tenderness that had never yet come over her love; but his glance swept over her as if he knew her not, and fixed itself again on the dead man. Then he brushed his forehead as one who would sweep away a foolish dream. He took a step forward:

"Friedel."

The name fell with infinite gentleness. Frau Bertha suddenly sobbed.

"Ach, verehrter Freund . . ." began the doctor hoarsely. But both fell silent. Lothnar was blind and deaf to all but one thing.

"Friedel!" he called again, this time with a voice that shook the room. It had an awful ring of anger in its pain. The child woke and cried loudly; and Frau Bertha caught it up, her loosened tears falling like rain.

Lothnar took one of those livid hands that still lay as the last gesture had outflung them. Held by the horrible spell, the others saw him clutch and press. A moment he stood as if unable to believe that no answering pressure was to come. Then his frenzied fingers closed round the dead man's wrist.

"What is this?" His voice was so hoarse that it sounded like something torn.

Frau Bertha, hushing the child against her breast, answered:

"He is dead; leave him in peace!"

"Dead! That is a lie—idiots and fools you all are! Dead? You don't understand. How can he be dead? Friedel, thou art not dead."

Lothnar dragged down the bedclothes that lay across the tenor's mighty chest; then gave a loud and dreadful cry of laughing triumph: "He is warm, I tell you! No, no, friend of mine, thy heart could not turn cold so easily! What are you all about?—You, doctor—you, wife—bring me brandy; I will make him drink. See, I lift him up in my arms. He is smiling. Did I not tell you so. Friedel . . . my own breath I will pour into thy lungs. Cannot a sick man faint? . . . Brandy, you fools?"

N.S.W. v. VICTORIA.

The N.S.W.C.A. has received a challenge for the usual telegraphic chess match from the Victorians. The date will be either June 3 or 5. The N.S.W. executive is promptly getting into communication with the leading players, with a view to securing a representative team. We trust Mr. Spencer Crakanthorp can come from the wilds to once more do battle for the State. It is to be hoped the association will see its way to adopt the suggestion so often made by us, to devote the two lowest boards to colts—that is, promising players of a certain assured strength who have not yet represented the State. An assumed argument against this course is the weakening of strength resulting from it. This argument appears to us fallacious, as, in the ordinary course of things, there is no difference in strength between the players displaced at boards 9 and 10 and the two best new men. Even were the inference sound, we think the game as a whole would benefit enormously by an enlightened policy, which secured four new men an opening every year. After that their records would speak for them. There is too great a tendency in all sport to go by past performances, and overlook immediate "condition."

SAN SEBASTIAN TOURNEY.

The results were:—First prize (£200), J. R. Capablanca, 9½; second (£100 each), A. Rubinstein and Dr. Vidmar, each 9; fourth (£40), F. J. Marshall, 8½. Then follow: A. Niemzovic, C. Schlechter, and Dr. S. Tarrasch, 7½ each; Dr. O. Bernstein and R. Spielmann, 7 each; R. Teichmann, 6½; D. Janowsky and G. Maroczy, 6 each; A. Burn and O. Duras, 5 each; P. S. Leonhardt, 4.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE MAGIC ART.

Dr. J. G. Fraser seems to have turned aside from his revision of "The Golden Bough" to complete his "Totemism and Exogamy," with the result that there has been a long interval between "Adonis, Attis, and Osiris" and the present issue of the rewritten first part of the complete work. The two volumes, however, were well worth waiting for, and form a monument to the learning, industry, and acumen of their author. The first edition of the work, it will be remembered, appeared in 1890 in the form that might be regarded as the prolegomena to the present exhaustive treatise. It was revised and greatly enlarged in 1900, and is now in course of being swollen to several times its original dimensions. From which it will emerge that Dr. Fraser is a steady and scientific worker, who goes on for decade after decade collecting data and discovering deductions. In the end it will probably be found that no writer of any period has exercised a greater formative influence upon our ideas of the evolution of magic and religion. Beginning quite simply with the Arician Grove, the sacred kingship of Nemi, and that legend of the Golden Bough so felicitously phrased by Virgil, Fraser has slowly elaborated his central concept of the slain God until it has come to include, or to draw into sympathetic affinity with it, all things in the heaven and earth of magical antiquity. The principles of magic and the evolution of the sacred king, the principles of Taboo, the myth and ritual of the dying god—all these are only aspects of the original problem. The mysterious priest of Nemi remains in the forefront of the picture, and his place there is logically and esthetically justified. His tragic figure is the prototype of a long roll of men who have masqueraded as gods, and who have been in the end slain by their credulous worshippers—nay, before that of a long line of totem animals in turn honoured and sacrificed. It is true the discussion has grown by what it fed on, and the relevance of all it now includes to the central theme is not altogether obvious. Yet that is no drawback, for Fraser himself is the first to realise out of how strange and puzzling a complex has arisen the white and dazzling faith of some age that holds its right hand out to reason, while its left is clutched by credulity. In the long prehistoric period which must have elapsed before custom emerged the elements of that complex inextricably interfuse, nor can we hope to separate them. They lie hidden both in literature and in life. The peasant festival at spring, at midsummer, at harvest, the quaint superstitions that surround the village tree and the wayside stone take us back to days when the Aryan retained something of his primitive mental texture and embalm a more archaic interpretation of religion than we can find even in the most ancient of literary documents. Magnificent pioneer work has, of course, been done by Mannhardt, by Robertson Smith, by Tylor, and others, and they have been followed by a great army of workers who, among strange climes and amid strange surviving folk, have garnered those strange and so strangely inter-related facts that must form the fabric of any theory of the evolution of belief. But the time has come when the bricks and stones have grown into huge piles, and the builder and architect may take their turn. Among these Fraser is pre-eminent. Many problems, of course, remain in doubt. It is too soon to derive animal sacrifice in general from totem sacrament, helpful as that would be to the doctrine of the slain god. It is too soon to assert the universality of totemism in primitive belief, and it may well be that the worship of trees and crops and many another quaint and pleasant vagary of faith are independent of it. But the comparative study of belief has, at any rate, passed its initial stages, and gone far enough to show us clearly that only by its methods can we hope to solve the riddle of dogma.

Rising abruptly from the Campagna forming the last spur thrown by the Apennines to the sea, the Alban Hills now hide two extinct craters filled by dark and silent waters. Of these the lesser is the Lake of Nemi, still as immemorially embedded in forest, and so deep down that its calm surface is seldom ruffled by the wind. To the north is a little stretch of level ground: there Diana Nemorensis, moonlit goddess of the woods, had once her sacred shrine. Aricia, after which town the lake and grove are often called, was three miles away. The shrine retained its fame well down to the later days of the Empire, and the lake itself has proved a happy hunting-ground for the archeologist. Yet down to the end, in spite of Greek philosophy and Roman materialism, a custom reigned there which was ancient in the days when the lion bounded in the Flavian amphitheatre. In the sacred grove there grew a tree around which far into the night a grim figure might be seen to prowl. In his hand he carried a drawn sword: he was a murderer and a priest, the night would come when another would be priest and murderer in his stead; that was the rule of the sanctuary where dwelt the priest who slew the slayer, and should himself be slain. Nay, he was more than priest and murderer—he was also king. Now there was no parallel to this in classical antiquity; but the slayer priest and the slain king are shown to be, in effect, among the commonest phenomena of ancient ritual. There were priestly kings in ancient Italy when it was not Roman, and the doctrine of divinity of kings survived from the Spartans to the Stuarts. For the king was magician before sovereign, and through magic he becomes close akin to the mystery of nature. We should turn aside here to speak of the principles of imitative and contagious magic; but it must suffice to remind ourselves how all-embracing magic ritual became, and how, necessarily, there was a corresponding elevation from magician to monarch. Those who wish to read a fascinating story can find in Dr. Fraser endless narratives from the contagious magic of garments or of wounds, and the homeopathic magic of tides and stones and stars, to the leaf-clad boys and girls who, in India, draw rain from the bronze sky, or to the Mexican who sacrificed his captive to the sun. He can turn for the confirmation of the social importance of magicians to the anthropologist's records of Australia, of New Guinea, of Melanesia; he will be reminded of the many magical properties attributed to kings, such as the gift of healing by touch, down to quite recent times. And he will be justified in concluding that more often than not the monarch is the successor of the medicine-man. But as time goes on, and the fallacies of magic become more apparent to the acuter minds, the magician king gives place to the priest king, who appeals to the gods to do for him what he imagines he can no longer do for himself. And there is a critical point where the outlines between human and divine are blurred. The human becomes a god; the god becomes a human, and the transformation is obviously easier in the case of kings than anywhere else. The distinction between a god and a powerful sorcerer is, in any case, slight enough. In the early history of religion, in fact, deity may be innate or acquired, permanent or passing, and of this we have ample evidence in many curious practices that still survive in Asia, in Africa, and in Polynesia. The Kings of Egypt, like the Emperors of Rome, were deified in their lifetime. In China and Japan the sacred king is not extinct.

Again, kingship is intimately associated with many ancient forms of nature worship. The Priest of the Arician Grove guarded a sacred tree, and in due season cut a sacred bough. Tree worship, as we know, was long common to all the Aryan races, just as there are kings of rain in Africa, kings of fire and water in Cambodia. The tree spirit develops on the one hand into a wood deity, and on the other into a priest king. Of this we have, of course, many survivals, of which the ritual marriage of the King and Queen of May is perhaps the most fully suggestive—it must be remarked here that phallic symbolism links up closely with tree worship. The ancient Kings of Rome and Alba, even as they have come down to us, retain many traces of this ancestry. Even Jupiter himself was probably a woodland deity. Here also is the explanation of the so frequent miraculous birth of kings. Thus, magic tends to be displaced by religion, and the sorcerer by the priest. At this stage the ultimate causes of kings are conceived to be personal beings whose sharply marked individualities have not coalesced into a single substratum of phenomena. The god or priest king is midway between the age of magic and the age of religion. He is equally likely, therefore, to be the victim of both. As the argument of succeeding volumes develops through the doctrine of the totem and the taboo it will be seen that the priest king himself is very often the victim of sympathetic magic and the vicarious sacrifice of which he has been so convinced and authoritative an exponent. (Macmillan, through Dymock.)

CANADA AND THE EMPIRE.

Mr. W. R. Lawson's "Canada and the Empire" (Blackwood) is sent out with special reference to this year's Imperial Conference. He says that the United Kingdom, the United States, and Canada have to quickly make up their mind what their future relations are to be. He urges immediate and effective federation of the Empire. He points out rather needlessly that the British Empire is in transition, and desires to see a national evolution on Canadian lines. Incidentally, he gives a clear and well-informed account of the Canadian system. He takes advantage of the quarrel between the Liberals and the Lords to suggest that if we begin to make great constitutional changes it would be better to make them on broad Imperial lines than on provincial ones. He is, in fact, an exponent of Home Rule all round, with a Grand Council of the Empire. But he admits that there can be no compromise between Irish disloyalty and Imperial unity. Moreover, he hopes to see an Imperial House of Lords. All that need be done to launch a reformed and modernised House of Lords on a new career even more brilliant than its glorious past is to transform it into an Imperial council, and to add to it from time to time the cream of political and commercial life. It seems that there are many in Canada who cherish such noble ideals, and the author concludes with the hope that their efforts might prosper until the British flag floats again over a world-wide Empire as invincible as it was in the days of Trafalgar.

THE WORLD OF DREAMS.

Mr. Havelock Ellis is, as usual, subtle and suggestive in "The World of Dreams" (Constable). The treatment does not pretend to be exhaustive, but "sleep has its own world," and into that world the author makes sundry and informative excursions. The data had been accumulating beneath his hands for the last 20 years. When we fall asleep we enter a dim and ancient house of shadow, unilluminated by any direct ray from the outer world. Without conscious volition we wander through its chambers, tumble down its mouldy stairways, and are haunted by its mysterious odours or by its strange sounds. In the waking instant we catch one glimpse of the obscure house, but it soon fades into the light of common day. Nothing is so deceptive as the memory of dreams, and nothing so illusive as their analysis. Yet, perhaps, dreams throw more light than anything else on those subconscious strata, just below consciousness, and upon those vexed questions of personality that still confound the psychologist. It may be that to a large extent we logically organise our dream after sleep has ended, but on the other hand it may be that our waking consciousness itself is but a fitful gleam from the imprisoned soul. There have, indeed, been many who have believed the soul more active in the sleeping than in the waking state, and for them the explanation of dream life is merely the explanation why the bridge of memory fails us. It is, however, much more likely that there is no such psychic activity in sleep, and that dream life is the expression merely of a, so to say, disintegrated personality pulling itself together at the moment of returning consciousness. For, after all, dreams resolve themselves into simple elements of memory and sensation. Isolated impressions flow together to be welded into a whole, but at the same time these elements are drawn from a wider field than is accessible to waking consciousness. We must admit, too, that reasoning is a general characteristic of dreams, and it is rather significant that the reasoning is mostly primitive and childish. We accept the facts of dream-life presented to us without question, and we argue about those facts with a consciousness which is little better than primordial. The dream brain is contemporary in its impressions, but paleolithic in its logic. The immediate cause of dreams is, of course, to be found in a sense stimulus, though this often acts in a very indirect fashion. We are thus more violent, more immoral, more criminal in our dreams than in waking life. For dream psychology carries us behind the veneer of civilisation. The dream life is to a large extent atavistic. Thus it is curious that amongst the most common of dreams are those relating to flight: not the glad and sustained flight of the bird, but the fall which is changed into a skim like that of a flying fox or of a bat. It is rather curious, however, that we dream of flying rather than of swimming, and makers of new phylogenies must take this descrepancy into account. It is further curious that in a state of hysteria a similar feeling of flight is common. These are no doubt the sources of the widespread belief in astral bodies. The process by which dreams are formed in sleeping consciousness through the splitting up of the dreamer's personality gives a sound basis for that multiple personality which, in earlier ages, was regarded as due to possession by demons. The resemblance of insanity to dream-life has always impressed observers, and some have gone so far as to say that all forms of delirium are varients of dream consciousness. Mr. Havelock Ellis quotes many interesting examples of such theses as these.

THE NAGA TRIBES.

Those interested in anthropology will find much interesting material in T. C. Hodson's "The Naga Tribes of Manipur." The author was a political agent in that State for some time, and in addition he cites most of the available authorities. The tribesmen of this remote Assam State still use the spear and bow and arrow; and apart from combat spend their time in rice cultivation. The digging stick has not been replaced by the plough. Some of the villages engage in weaving. Society is patrilineal, and male ascendancy is complete. Exogamy prevails, marriage being always outside the clan. But ante-nuptial laxity is, of course, the rule. As may be expected, there are many survivals from remote ritual, and in particular the worship of stones is worthy of remark. Monoliths, single or in rows, avenues, and circles; cairns; and flat stones are frequently met with. The stone circles are still used for ritual purposes. The author writes in a close, compact style, and his reliability as an observer is obvious. He seldom descends to theory, but his raw material is of no little value to the scientific study of primitive races. (Macmillan.)

YUKON POETRY.

Those who like the broadest of American dialect and the most lavish adulation of the American as the greatest show on earth will appreciate "Derby Day in the Yukon" and other poems by Yukon Bill (Angus and Robertson). They are affectionately dedicated to two "pards" who helped him to carry his pack over life's trail. We do not know if this is poetry; in fact, we are almost sure that it is not. But it has a wild virile quality that will please those who are wild and virile, or would like to be. The volume is handsomely produced.

SHORTER NOTICES.

Mr. Chiozza-Money's "Riches and Poverty," which has passed through nine editions, during the last five years, thereby vindicating its claim to become a classic, has been thoroughly revised and brought in line with the most recently available statistics. Mr. Money argues that the distribution of wealth has become even more uneven than it was when he first wrote. Analysing British incomes, he finds there are 1,400,000 rich with £634,000,000 between them; 4,100,000 comfortable with £275,000,000 between them; and 39,000,000 poor with £935,000,000 between them. These figures are those for 1908. The author says that the massing of capital in large units has considerably strengthened its position, and that on the other hand the trade-unions have lost much ground. While since 1900 nominal wages have been at a standstill, the cost of living has continued to rise. In defence of his general position, Mr. Money draws attention to many official figures. Thus, out of £300,000,000 a year passing at death £200,000,000 has been the property of only 4000 people. The book is thoroughly well worth reading, even by those who dislike its conclusions, and refuse to accept the nationalisation of capital as a remedy.

A good travel book is Angus Hamilton's "Somaliland" (Hutchinson). This is one of the unpleasant corners in our African spheres of influence, for after four or five insignificant and ineffective expeditions we have practically abandoned the interior, and rest secure only in the coast ports. Nowhere in Africa, in fact, has our prestige suffered so severe a blow. The author, who was, amongst other things, a war correspondent in Somaliland, writes vigorously and vividly about the various expeditions against the Mullah, and incidentally gives a clear view of local conditions.

Angus and Robertson forward two little booklets of use and interest. One is "First Aid in Nursing," by Mrs. Thomas, specially devised for those in the bush; the other is "Notes on the Nursing of Diphtheria," by H. M. Loxton. Each writer is thoroughly capable of giving hints that are well worth while to those who have to help in the combat with disease.

Two new additions to Macmillan's excellent "First Books of Science" are "Geometry," by J. V. H. Coates, and "The Past at Our Doors," by W. W. Skeat. The first is thoroughly modern, and well calculated to import interest into a formerly abhorred subject. The second is an original and clever sketch of the progress of civilisation by an able anthropologist. It brings together much curious information, and after the children have done with it the elders will find it worth reading. There are numerous illustrations. This series can be highly commended.

Our old friend, the Rev. W. Temple, is now headmaster at Repton. In "The Nature of Personality" (Macmillan) he collects a course of lectures delivered at Oxford. They do not, of course, deal with the subject. The nature of personality is a topic which any self-respecting headmaster would do well to fight shy of. But they touch lightly on such theological topics as the will and freedom, original sin, duty and society, the Trinity, and so on, and the author acknowledges his indebtedness to Karl von Hases' "Evangelisch-protestantische Dogmatik." That acknowledgment is quite enough.

James Rossignol and William Stewart combine to write an account of "State Socialism in New Zealand" (Harrup, through Angus and Robertson). It is admirably done, and is a perfect mine of information, compactly put together. We can thoroughly recommend it, and we are glad that so reliable a compilation is available to the distant student.

Another volume of "Present Day Gardening" (Jack, through Angus and Robertson) is to hand. It deals with carnations and pinks, and well maintains the extraordinary high standard of colour printing characteristic of the series.

Murray's "Shilling Library" ads to its shelves Sir W. Napier's "English Battles and Sieges in the Peninsula," and Basil Lubbock's "Round the Horn Before the Mast." Both are established classics, and no book buyer should allow the series to escape his attention (Through George Robertson, Pitt-street).

Piano students may be recommended to Tobias Matthay's "Some Commentaries on the Teaching of Pianoforte Technique" (Longmans). The author is a well-known teacher, whose methods and ideas have been largely adopted. What he says here is very suggestive.

AUSTRALASIAN CHAMPIONSHIP.

The first tournament for the championship of Australasia was played at Brisbane in August, 1909, and was won by Mr. J. A. Boreham, was was then champion of New Zealand. The second tournament was commenced on April 14 at Dunedin, N.Z. The following nine players entered the contest:—J. A. Boreham, D. A. Brodie, F. E. Hilliker, J. A. Lucas, of Dunedin, all ex-champions of New Zealand; W. Penman, champion of New Zealand; Huntly, G. Campbell, and H. Morris, of Invercargill; C. Erickson, Wellington; and Hugh Egan, Melbourne.

Before the play started Mr. R. Caldow (president of the Australasian Draughts Association) extended a cordial welcome to the contestants, and thanked councillors Burnett and Wilson for their presence and support. The system of play adopted was the two-move restriction (48 openings) and two-life or double knock-out, that is, each player, except the winner, has to be twice beaten.

The following shows the result of play in each round:—

First Round.

Wins.		Draws.		Wins.

This round was finished on Tuesday, 25th ultimo, when Messrs. Penman and Hilliker met to contest the final round, which, after a keen encounter, Mr. W. Penman won, and thus became entitled to the first prize (£20) and the title of champion of Australasia. Messrs. Hilliker and Brodie received second (£12) and third (£8) prizes respectively.

In the same hall, and at the same time, was played an interesting handicap tournament on the all-round plan, which resulted in the following contestants being declared prize-winners:—J. Bruce, 18 points (hep. 5½); J. Lang, 17½ (hep. 5); A. Matheson, 17½ (hep. 1½); J. R. Gillies, 15½ (hep. 6½); F. Keenan, 14½ (hep. 2½); J. Edwards, 14 (hep. 8½); C. F. Moore, 14 (hep. 2½).

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Although, quite by accident, Mr. Haddon Chambers had "originally" produced for him in his native city of Sydney one drama ("The Idler," by Charles C. Wright and Olga Nethersole), which only reached London a week later, his entire literary career has been bound up with the life of the metropolis where he has so long resided. And naturally so, for it is the world's play-market. Accordingly, after an interval of silence, he has just launched there at Wyndham's Theatre (March 30) his latest art-effort, "Passers-by." The new play is warmly welcomed. The press-notices show that it opens sociologically, with smart dialogue on questions of the day between Peter Waverton's old butler, "Nighty" the driver of a "growler," and a work-shy loafer. But very quickly it becomes a comedy of sentiment—just the old story of the love of a man for a woman, and of a woman for a man. For on this foggy night in Piccadilly, the butler tells Peter that he hears a young lady "coughing 'orrible" on his doorstep, and Peter (Mr. Gerald Du Maurier) orders him to invite her in. She proves to be Margaret Summers (Miss Irene Vanbrugh), his long-vanished, long-lost, long-mourned sweetheart, who loved him when she was a governess six years before at his stepmother's, Lady Hurley's. She is now the mother of a five-year-old son—in fact, Peter's son, whereat he is profoundly touched. He happens to be about to marry Beatrice Dainton (Miss Nina Sevening). This dashing, golfing, golden-hearted, slangy young woman of the smart set, discovers the now innocent, and rather mournful, friendship newly established between Peter and his two pals (the young mother and her son), and bursts into tears. Then lights a cigarette, laughs a little, and bravely "gives him the chuck." Let the other girl have him, and God bless her! And she does; and Beatrice marries someone else; and Peter and Margaret reunite; and all ends happily. A very charming story, even on paper, more so, no doubt when dramatically embodied with all the author's well-known feeling for theatrical propriety.

Miss Florence Imeson and Miss Nell Finnis, the principal and second lady of the new "Gay Gordons" Company, arrived in Sydney during the week, and revealed themselves as girls of refinement and good looks, who still "wear the rose of youth upon them." Their joint career would, indeed, be brief, but for the amazing amount of work accomplished by the comic opera prima donna during her two years' tour of South Africa, from which country she came here last December. Miss Imeson, who was born at Harrogate, and whose father was at one time Mayor of Middlesborough, was Fifi in George Musgrove's "Belle of New York" Company on tour eight years ago, and when Miss Carrie Moore revisited Australia, she took her part as Honor in Robert Courtneidge's production of "The Blue Moon." Miss Imeson played the Belle in "The Belle of Mayfair" on tour, and was principal girl at Liverpool to the principal boy of Sydney's one-timed favourite, Ada Reeve, before leaving under engagement to Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler and George Edwardes for Capetown. At the Cape, in "Dorothy" the Yorkshire girl played the name-part to Mr. Haydn Coffin's Harry Sherwood (this original role in 1886), and that baritone was the lover to her Franzl in "A Waltz Dream." The name-parts fell to her in "Our Miss Gibbs," "Veronique," "The Geisha," "Dollar Princess," "Merry Widow," and other pieces. The company included several artists varyingly popular in Australia, notably Reginald Kenneth (baritone), Langford Kirby, and Jack Cannot (Baron Popoff), who was subsequently replaced by the Australian "Popoff" (Victor Gouriet). Ultimately, the young actress-singer studied a score of operas before going on a concert tour with some of the artists to Bulawayo, where they opened the first theatre, and to Victoria Falls, where the admission tariff was one guinea. Miss Nell Finnis, the second of these "Gay Gordons," comes from Shakespeare's Warwick, studied singing at the Royal Academy, took Miss Billie Burke's part in "The Blue Moon," played the Belle in "The Belle of Mayfair" on tour about three years ago, and then devoted herself to London vaudeville engagements for two years, followed by a long season at Jo'burg, and a return to the London Tivoli. Thence her taste for travel roused by her visit to the Cape, Miss Finnis accepted Clarke and Meynell's offer for six months of musical comedy in Australia.

When "The Balkan Princess" is produced by the New Comic Opera Company in succession to next week's "Dollar Princess," the cast will include Mr. Edmund Sherras, who has returned to Australia by the Osterley, under special engagement for the new piece. Meanwhile, the baritone is filling-in time as one of the medical specialists assembled in consultation when the curtain rises upon "The Dawn of To-morrow," which play has just been produced at the Princess Theatre, Melbourne, by the Katharine Gray Company. Mr. Sherras made his Sydney debut three years ago, in the baritone light comedy role of "The Lady Dandies," in which Miss Florence Young and Mr. Reginald Roberts made successes which they did not again rival until "A Waltz Dream" was produced. "The Lady Dandies," with a libretto, by Sardou, and fine music by Dr. Hugo Felix, was one of the finest comic operas produced here, though the general public did not long support it. In regard to Mrs. Hodgson Burnett's emotional story of slum-life in New York, in which Miss Katharine Grey is appearing in the cheerily optimistic "Glad," it may be noted that it is one of several pieces which, like "Salvation Nell," have not yet reached London. Very shortly "The Third Degree" is to be produced there by Arthur Bourchier and Violet Vanbrugh, under the title of "The Defence." The American author, Charles Klein, has made certain alterations to conform to the English ideas of police-court procedure. It is somewhat strange that although Klein has written a score of successful dramas, three of which were simultaneously running in New York in 1906, only two of them, "Paid in Full" and "The Lion and the Mouse," have hitherto reached England.

This week's cablegram from Sir Rupert Clarke, Bart., notifying that "Kismet" will be produced at the Sydney Criterion next year by the Asche-Brayton Company, is sure proof that it has "caught on" at the London Garrick. The new piece is by Edward Knoblauch, and will present glowing spectacles from Oriental life, the animated bazaar scene requiring 100 people on the stage, with Mr. Asche as an old Sheik, Miss Lily Brayton as his daughter, Mr. Ben Webster as the Caliph, and Mr. Herbert Grimwood as the villain. But this is by no means all. The orchestra is to be removed, and in its place a kind of secondary stage erected. This will not be employed while the main action of the play is in progress, but only during the intervals between the scenes. The curtain having fallen, the characters are to appear on the "apron" stage, and in dumb show will acquaint the audience with what is supposed to happen between the descent and the rising of the curtain. The orchestra, meanwhile, will be alloted places in the two proscenium boxes, from each of which, during the entr'actes, a typically Eastern performer, a singer, a dancer, or a juggler, will emerge to provide a characteristic example of his or her art.

Amongst students now abroad, news reaches us from Miss Eileen Boyd, a young contralto now with Signor and Signora Steffani in Paris, where she is continuing her vocal studies, and learning French. Miss Boyd forwards a cutting from the Paris "Daily Mail" of March 27, whose Brussels correspondent telegraphs that at a concert given by the Countess of Flanders, a Conservatoire pupil only 11 years of age, an Australian musical prodigy named Alma Moodie, made a sensation. "Her rendering of Bach's 'Chaconne' was wonderful in its expression and force." Mrs. Arthur Popplewell, a soprano known here as Josephine Jacomb, is undertaking the education of the young Sydney pianist, Winnie Purnell, and placed her some time back at Hanover (Germany), under Professor Lutter. Recently Miss Purnell gave another concert, and press notices enclosed are almost ecstatic as to her temperament, and executive power. She is now to have a Continental tour before returning to Australia next year.

SMALL BEASTIES OF THE OCEAN.

Off Glacier Tongue,
Ross Isle, January 24.

One never sees the penguins swimming on the surface. Occasionally a snake-like head pops up and looks around for a few seconds, but usually they are swimming rapidly with their flippers a foot or two below the surface, or imitating the dolphin in curving leaps through the air. On the shore near the rookeries the snow was worn into long gutters where the penguins promenaded to and fro. The winds are too strong for any economic deposit of guano to arise. We saw brown patches driven by the wind on to a snow bluff 500ft above the rookery.

About 6 p.m. on the 3rd Erebus came into sight. We approached it from the north-east—an unusual direction, and so perhaps obtained a more comprehensive view of the outer crater than previous observers. It is a wonderful "Somma" ring, like that of Vesuvius, and being composed of dark steep rock it stands out in strong contrast to the inner white cone and the outer snow-covered slopes. Ponting got a fine photograph of it, which will be of interest to vulcanologists. Having given up all idea of wintering on the north-east quarter of Ross Island, we immediately proceeded west to MacMurdo Sound.

All that night we steamed steadily west to Cape Bird, passing Beaufort Island on the starboard, and then turned south again to Cape Royds. Beaufort Isle was the scene of an exploit of one of our seamen—Paton—who was shut in by pack (some five miles away from the island) in the whaler Morning. He and a mate broke leave to try and reach the isle across the floes, but had to return without accomplishing their wish. On his return to civilisation Paton found he had become a proud father. The child was christened Beaufort Paton, on the suggestion of Captain Evans.

MACMURDO SOUND.

About 5 a.m. we came into sight of the western face of Erebus. MacMurdo Sound was closed in here by loose pack, but the ship threaded her way through fairly readily. We were keenly interested to see the condition of the ice at Cape Royds, and two of our afterguard (Priestley and Day) have a personal interest in the headquarters of Shackleton's expedition. Soon after the queer volcanic knob on the end of Cape Barne hove in view we sighted the meteorological screen, and immediately afterwards the hut of the 1907 expedition. But the bay, instead of its old-time surface of sea ice, was a sheet of open water, with two stranded bergs in one corner. Obviously it was no better as a landing-place than Cape Crozier had been. The hut looked in good order, though the door had apparently been broken in, but we could not see many details, for it was essential to push south, and see how much ice had been broken away. An hour later we reached Inaccessible Island, and here a solid wall of sea-ice prevented all further progress. Forty-eight hours of coast observation caused one watcher to retire to his bunk. On returning to the deck I found that the Terra Nova had come to a standstill against the sea-ice, about a mile south-east of Inaccessible Island, and the same distance from the shore. Here on a large area of dark eruptive rock—freed from snow at this season—we are building our hut. In the future the locality will be known as Cape Evans.

On the morning of the 4th we carried out hawsers, and put in ice anchors in the ice, over which so many journeys were to be made in the next fortnight. Captain Scott, Lieutenant Evans, and Dr. Wilson went off to choose a suitable site for the hut, and returned very pleased with their brief survey.

CAPE EVANS AND ITS SURROUNDINGS.

Let us look landward from the Terra Nova, and examine the locality where the expedition will spend more than six months of the ensuing twelve. We are drawn close to the ice, which stands about 5in above the sea, and some 15in below water level. It is variable in texture, that near the ship being rather mushy and honeycombed—while several large cracks traverse it. Further away is a belt of clear, hard ice, and then bands of snow-covered and clear ice for a mile or so, until the shore is reached. Here along the western slope of Erebus extends a belt of the dark volcanic rock, kenyte, and in consequence of the rapid heating of dark objects by the continuous sunshine this is largely free from snow. Immediately at the shore-line is a belt of very soft ice, fantastically honeycombed, and threaded by streams of fresh water. Crossing a snow-bank, we rise slightly, and reach the kenyte gravel on which our hut and the headquarters generally are placed. Walking along this gravel slope, we come to a flowing stream, falling over a little waterfall—a rarity, as may be imagined, in Antarctica. Moreover, this stream rises in quite a respectable lake—which, if not large enough for a regatta, at all events affords good exercise in chasing the skua gulls, which have been attracted by the open water. Continuing eastward, the steeper lower slopes of Erebus are reached. The lower portions are of the same dark eruptive rock; but a few hundred feet from the sea level these are covered by a pall of snow, which extends almost uninterruptedly to the summit of Erebus. The slope steepens considerably at an elevation of some 5000 feet, and when the top is clouded over the lower portion is not unlike the base of Fujiyama. On a clear day the steam cloud capping Erebus is very obvious. Usually it is seen drifting to the south from a sharp vertical column arising directly above the crater. Sometimes, however, the steam cloud spreads out fairly symmetrically, and on one occasion it simulated a gigantic cedar-tree, with a central trunk and spreading branches. To the south are two stranded bergs, which I shall describe in detail later. As a background to these dazzling white pyramids is the sombre ridge of Inaccessible Island, which some of us have already—in spite of its name—managed to conquer. To the north-east is the cliff-like edge of the Cape Barne glacier, reaching almost to the curious dark erratic outline of Cape Royds. Fifty miles away to the west, across the sound, the wonderful glacial valleys of the western mountains are seen veiled in clouds.

COMMENCING TO UNLOAD.

Now began a strenuous time for all on board. It was necessary to get the heavy cargo off the ship while the floe remained firm. Though the weather was excellent there was no telling when a heavy wind would send all the sea ice into Ross Sea. Gang-planks were run out, and the wildly-excited dogs were pulled, pushed, and tumbled into the hands of men on the ice. Then they went at a gallop over mushy ice to the bow ice-anchor chain, where they were tethered at intervals of a foot or so. We had not been at work long when inquisitive visitors turned up. These were the Adelie penguins, who waddled eagerly forward, and promenaded about, with their heads bent on one side in a very critical, not to say supercilious, fashion. Unfortunately, the dogs were as keenly interested in them, and simultaneously twenty of them rushed at the nearest penguin. A scene of wild confusion ensued. The heavy cable was jerked about so violently that the dogs were lifted several feet into the air, and hung there a moment suspended by their chains. Whips, yells, and curses were of no avail until the miserable bird had been torn limb from limb. For some hours one man had to be on the watch to warn off trespassers and prevent penguin suicide.

The ponies, with one exception, were much less trouble, and were swung out in a box on a rope from the yard with great ease. The motor-sledges were transhipped in their cases—which had hitherto formed efficient walls to the dog "hangar." Three ropes attached to the mainyard, and each manned by 10 men, enabled the case—weighing about a ton—to be swung up, outward, and downward on to the floe without a jar. The motors were then taken from their cases, and run further on to the floe, where Day and Nelson soon had them running. It was their buzzing which annoyed our high-spirited steed "Hackenschmidt." He careered about the waist of the ship, and was more trouble to land than all the other sixteen. He continued his career of uselessness during the following busy season. Ponting found much material here for his cinematograph, and had the machine clicking merrily most of the forenoon. He has literally miles of film, and it is amusing to see the way he snips off a foot or so of an exposed film quite callously to develop it and judge the result. As he says, it only represents a second, which will never be missed in the several minutes represented on a film.

TRANSPORT OVER THE SEA-ICE.

It was a large hauling contract that confronted us. Material for a hut 50ft x 25ft, with walls and roof of six or eight layers; sledging equipment, tents, etc., for 30 men; food for two years; fuel (chiefly a patent coal compound) for the same period; and fodder for the 17 horses and for the dogs. All this had to be carried nearly two miles across the sea-ice on sledges. What now were the means of haulage? We had many and varied methods. Firstly, the motor sledges; secondly, the ponies; thirdly, the dogs, and, fourthly, by man-power. Each has something in its favour. Speed of transit goes to the dogs, non-liability to accidents to the man-power, gross tonnage to the motors, and general efficiency (as regards the well-behaved animals) I should award to the ponies.

The man-sledges got to work very early in the campaign. The sledges are 9ft and 12ft long, with runners 4in wide, and upturned somewhat at both ends. There is a flexible bent prow, and six or eight vertical stanchions which support the upper frame—as simple a design as one could devise. Everything is secured by leather lashings, the abutting ends being sewn into a sort of leather bucket. A rope loop projects from the front, but is fastened to the forward stanchions, and not to the prow-piece, which serves chiefly to guide the sledge over hummocks of ice. A long rope, with broad canvas belts (attached thereto by tributary ropes), constitutes the harness. When the load has been tied on the sledge by a piece of spun yarn, the leader steps into his belt, adjusts it over the hips, and, grasping his ski-sticks firmly, gives the word, and plods on. Many a mile have we covered with bodies hanging forward over the belts, and our spiked boots and ski-sticks barely enabling us to pull the heavy load through a patch of snow-drift. But over moderately smooth sea-ice it was quite easy for four men to pull a 1000lb load on two sledges. We could manage a distance of a mile and a half in 25 minutes.

THE DOG TEAMS.

There were two dog teams in constant use, one driven by Meares and the other by the Russian youth Dimitri. Their sledges are Siberian, and somewhat higher in the frame. The chief difference consists in a high hoop or arch of wood, which is placed across the sledge 2ft from the prow. By this the driver can twist his sledge around. He also carries an iron-pointed staff, to be used as a brake, and also to guide the sledge to some extent. The dog teams consist of five dogs—one leader, who is specially trained to obey commands (and sometimes scorns to pull), and two pairs of dogs toggled to a central rope, much as in the man-harness. These dog sledges career about in long sweeping curves, and the air resounds with barbaric cries of "Ky, Ky!" or "Chui, Chui!" while the ice screeches under the impact of the driver's pointed staff. His chief difficulty is to steer clear of penguins, for awful is the result if they sight an unfortunate bird! A dog team pulls its driver, so that 150lb must be added to their load. Each dog pulls about one-quarter that moved by a man, but at twice the speed.

AN AUSTRALIAN ABROAD.

"ALL PROGRESS STOPPED."

"THINGS BLUE IN THE COMMONWEALTH."

In the New York "Sun" in March last appeared an interview with Mr. A. J. Simpson, who stated that he is the owner of 150,000 sheep in New South Wales, and, notwithstanding an admission that he has been doing excellently, he is looking out for another country to live in—all on account of the Federal land tax. His statements drew a strong protest from Mr. Alexander Knox, an Australian, who happened to be in Chicago, and who proceeded all the way to New York for the purpose of interviewing the editor of the "Sun," and obtaining space in that paper in refutation.

The following remarks are taken from the report of the interview with Mr. Simpson:—

Mr. Simpson says that since the Labour party won out in the January elections out there the way of the man of means has become hard, progress in the Commonwealth has stopped short, and the Labour members of the Commonwealth Parliament lie awake o' nights devising ways of separating the rich man from his means. They think they have hit upon it in the progressive land tax.

In fact things look so blue out there that Mr. Simpson does not know when he is going back or whether he will go back. He is now making a trip around the world. He may come back to the United States "to look over prospects in our Western country, and if they don't strike him just right he may go to Siberia and take a look round."

From statements Mr. Simpson let fall it is apparent that he must be worth at least a million and a half dollars. He engaged in what they call out there the 'pastoral industry,' which means that he is the owner of a big sheep ranch, and this year, he said, on account of that progressive land tax, they soaked him a matter of 85,000 dollars extra taxes above what he had been paying in ordinary taxes.

"The sheep business in Australia has been excellent since 1902," said Mr. Simpson. "America has been buying a lot of our wool right along, and I sold mine in December over here at 32 cents a pound, which is a good price. In Sydney we have now one woollen mill, but that goes no further in manufacture than to make 'tops.'

"A Labour Government has just come into power by an overwhelming vote. Well, one result has been that I had to pay out on March 1 85,000 dollars for progressive land tax—a new tax—which is about the first thing the new Government originated. M'Gowen, the new Premier of New South Wales, is in favour of applying the progressive land tax policy to the smaller farmers as well as the big ones.

"Outside of Australia the effect has been bad, because of the impression produced by our new legislation. We cannot get any more money from the capitalists of England.

"I have about 150,000 head of sheep on my place, and about 80 men employed. Still, Australia is offering all sorts of inducements to prospective settlers. But, for myself, I am looking about for another country to live in."

Mr. Knox, in reply, said that Mr. Simpson's statements are absolutely contradicted by the official Year Book, which proves that the country was never so prosperous as now; and he affirmed that although not a friend of the Government, its land tax was a necessity, in order to bring about increased population. Following are some of his remarks:—

"Instead of carrying sheep we want the land to carry human beings. For instance, take Mr. Simpson's ranch, on which he states he has 150,000 sheep. The average carrying capacity of bushland is four acres to the sheep. Mr. Simpson must therefore own or lease over 500,000 acres, on which, according to his own statement, he employs 80 hands.

"If this huge estate were cut up into farm areas, only part under cultivation, it would support at least 500 families, totalling several thousand human beings, instead of 80, as at present.

"After saying that since the Labour party had come into power in Australia all progress had stopped and that the outlook was so blue he didn't know whether or not he would go back, Mr. Simpson made the remarkable admission that the sheep business in Australia had been excellent since 1902. As pastoral exports constitute almost 75 per cent. of our foreign business, it is hard to square his gloomy outlook with these facts. Then he said that there was now one woollen mill in Sydney, and this only for making tops, giving the inference that we do not manufacture woollen goods in Australia. There were in 1908 21 woollen factories in the Commonwealth, employing about 2800 hands in the manufacture of woollen tweeds, rugs, blankets, etc., and four of these are in Sydney. Just before I left I installed some American machinery in a new tweed factory then being erected in Sydney by English capitalists.

"Mr. Simpson made inexcusable misrepresentation of the facts either because he is wilfully biassed or wofully ignorant of Australian conditions. I wish to assure Americans that they need have no fear about doing business with a community living under the so-called socialistic Government. The Australian people and Government stand for everything that is pure and just and upright.

"In the last eight years we have enjoyed unexampled prosperity. We have fewer unemployed than ever, wages are higher, the employed than ever, wages are higher, the confidence of capitalists both abroad and at home is demonstrated by the large number of factories that are rapidly being built, and a phenomenal record was made last year in investments in new buildings and constructional works."

SOFT, WHITE HANDS OR RED, ROUGH HANDS, WHICH?

Red, rough hands on retiring usually become soft, white hands on rising, through the simple and economical one-night treatment afforded by Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. Bathe and soak the hands on retiring in a hot lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, and in severe cases spread the ointment on thin pieces of old linen or cotton. Wear during the night old, loose gloves, or a light bandage to protect the clothing. This treatment is most effective for chapped, itching, and bleeding hands, dry, fissured, feverish palms, and shapeless nails, with painful finger-ends. Send for a liberal tin of Cuticura Ointment and the latest book on the care of skin and hair, free, from R. Towns and Co., N.S.W.—Advt.

A clear skin results through the taking of "Goleryst." "Goleryst" is the greatest of all blood purifiers, 2s, 6d, 1s.—Advt.

Hearne's Bronchitis Cure
Leader of the Crusade against Winter Ills.

THOSE who have taken this medicine are amazed at its splendid healing power. Sufferers from Bronchitis, Cough, Croup, Asthma, Hoarseness, Difficulty of Breathing, Pain or Soreness in the Chest, experience delightful and rapid relief; and to those who are subject to Colds on the Chest it is invaluable, as it effects a complete cure. It is most comforting in allaying Irritation in the Throat and giving Strength to the Voice, and it neither allows a Cough nor Asthma to become chronic, nor Consumption to develop. Consumption is not known where "Coughs" have, on their first appearance, been properly treated with this medicine. No house should be without it as taken at the beginning, a dose or two is generally sufficient, and a complete cure is certain.

The Latest Fashion Ideas from London.

For many months we have been interested readers of "A Woman's Letter," which appears on this page each alternate Saturday—interested in it first from its literary standpoint, but more particularly from the educational aspect, for we have found that the writer of this letter "hits the nail on the head every time."

Those new ideas in dress which tend to make a fashion, as forecasted in this letter, are nearly always popular with Australians.

GRACE BROTHERS aspire to be "The Leaders of Fashion," and with this in view, have made a special arrangement whereby their London Buyers can see Fashion's Forecasts in these letters at the earliest possible moment, enabling them to buy and ship to Sydney Fashion's Choicest Productions from the Fashion Centres of the world, all for your delight.

Pending the arrival of those goods mentioned in the last letter, GRACE BROTHERS have very much pleasure in quoting some of the items mentioned in previous letters.

THE LAST WORD IN COSTUMES.

"A Woman's Letter" in "S.M. Herald" of 22nd April, says:—

"You will notice that the rarest tailor-made Coats and Skirts are conspicuous by their simplicity and absence of trimmings.

"I saw a Blue Serge Coat and Skirt on Sunday last which has just been sent home by one of the most fashionable houses.

"It was of exquisite material, a fine Blue Coating Serge; it fitted beautifully. The Coat reached just to the hips, fastening well across the figure on the left side; the Skirt was narrow, but not ultra narrow."

We have this Costume in stock NOW.

Smart COAT AND SKIRT, in Black and Navy Coating Serge, collarless effect, fastening at side, with tabs of self material tastefully arranged, with oval oxidised buttons and military braid; an exceedingly smart style at the very reasonable price of 78/6.

THE LAST WORD IN RIBBONS.

SEE "A Woman's Letter" in "S.M. Herald," 22nd April, 1911.

"You hardly see a head at night without a band of ribbon or a swathing of lace or tulle."

Ribbons and Laces always have been among our best departments, and the stocks are as up to date now as ever. We have in stock now:—

STRIPED RIBBONS, Military Widths (5 inches), Pale Blue and White, and Navy and White, Brown and White.
Special Price, 10½d yard.

SCARCE LINES.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY HENRY LUCY.)

Ministers and the Peers—A Counter Stroke—Coronation Missionary Work—Westminster Abbey—Coronation Chair—Emperor William and Sir Ernest Shackleton.

WESTMINSTER, March 31.

Writing last week on the preparedness of the Government to meet possible rejection of the Veto Pill in the House of Lords, I, as then mentioned, was not at liberty to disclose particulars of the contemplated coup. But it was permissible to state that such action "would be promptly followed by exceedingly simple action, unparalleled in Parliamentary record, which will leave the Government masters of the situation, and defer by only a few weeks the addition of the bill to the Statute Book." By this time everyone knows all about the master stroke by which the Cabinet will defeat the dilatory tactics of the Peers. In accordance with these, they, having resolved to fight the matter out, are not likely to throw out the bill on the second reading. They will prefer to put off the evil day as long as possible by dallying with it in committee, introducing amendments which, whilst having appearance of honest friendliness would, if incorporated in the Act, make it ineffective. If ordinary procedure were permitted to run its course, there would follow an interval of some months during which anything might happen. It is a fundamental principle of Parliamentary legislation that a bill may not be introduced a second time in the same session. If, as was the case with the Education Bill, one be thrown out in the summer months of one session it may not have another chance till the following year.

Of course there is the expedient of an autumn session. That also means a considerable interval, putting off by so much time the period when the representatives of the people, freed from the yoke of hereditary legislators, may get about the people's business. The scheme of the Cabinet is as simple as it will be efficient, and was unexpected. The Veto Bill rejected, or otherwise destroyed, the session will be wound up as speedily as possible, and Parliament will be prorogued. But the recess will not extend beyond 24 hours. Simultaneously with decree of prorogation there will be gazetted summons for the reassembling of Parliament for a new session opening two days after the sudden death of its predecessor. Disclosure of this counter stroke has carried dismay into the Opposition camp, already rent by dissensions round the referendum and schemes for reform of the House of Lords. It may have useful results in the way of strengthening the hands of those in the councils of Lord Lansdowne who recognise the futility of further wrestling with the popular will emphatically expressed at two general elections taken within a period of twelve months.

A remarkable movement, supported in high quarters, is on foot in connection with the Coronation. In a privately circulated letter, signed by the Duke of Devonshire, it is affirmed that "there is a feeling among many men in London that at a time like the Coronation a special effort should be made to appeal to those who may be termed, for want of a better description, English gentlemen to realise their responsibilities to the nation on the social and the religious standpoint." This is perhaps a little vague. The object in view is further indicated in a passage which states that "the Coronation of the Sovereign has its message to all Englishmen, but to none should this come home with greater force than to those who have been brought up in the traditions of our public schools and universities. It has been felt that among such men there must be many who recognise the debt they owe to the community in which they live,—a debt that may be paid in many ways, but one that is too often disregarded."

The project having been communicated to the King, his Majesty signified approval and sympathy by authorising the committee to head their appeal with quotation of his own declaration, "I am profoundly sensible of the solemn significance and character of the ceremony which in God's Providence is to mark the coming summer." Arrangements will be made for a meeting at Queen's Hall on Tuesday, June 20, at which the Lord Chancellor will preside. It will be addressed by the Archbishop of York and the Bishop of London. The audience will be exclusively composed of men, attendant in response to special invitation tickets.

To the discomfort of citizens accustomed to attend the daily celebration of service, and to the disappointment of foreign visitors already flocking to the metropolis, Westminster Abbey is in the hands of the British workman. The Coronation is yet afar off, and the period of preparation seem intolerably extended. But the ways of Government departments are not those of ordinary business people. There is no appeal, though there is much grumbling at what is regarded as unnecessarily early appropriation of one of London's most precious public possessions. Meanwhile the lawns that environ the Abbey and were just putting on the greenery of approaching spring are blocked with piles of timber. The principal entrance swarms with workmen, on whose doings a shifting crowd reverently gazes through the long day. A feature of the architectural preparation for the ceremony, which gave rise to much controversy at the coronation of King Edward, was the overlaying of the entrance by Dean's Yard, at which Royalty will alight, by a porch of sham ecclesiastical design, purporting to be a portion of the ancient structure. It was exceedingly cleverly done, the colours being so manipulated that there was avoidance of the shock of newness. The man in the street was rather pleased with it. But it was spoken of disrespectfully by more learned persons jealous of the sacredness of the edifice. According to present appearances, it looks as if this little architectural fraud will be repeated next June.

The chair his Majesty will occupy during the ceremony of the Coronation is not of older date than the time of William and Mary. It was made for Queen Mary, and was modelled upon the original, built a little more than 700 years ago by direction of Edward I. It was that monarch who, during a visit to Scotland, found at Scone Abbey the stone on which Scotch kings had been crowned. Vae victis. He appropriated it, carried it to London, and since his time all the Sovereigns of England have in turn sat in a chair resting on the stone which, according to ancient tradition, was the one on which Jacob, journeying to Bethel, rested his head. King Edward's first idea was to have a bronze chair for Coronation purposes. A commission was given to his goldsmith, but when the work was nearly completed his Majesty altered his mind and had a copy of the goldsmiths' work made in wood. It is interesting to learn from ancient records that it cost £5. What became of it or its remains history sayeth not. It might with care have been preserved to this day, for it was built of seasoned oak, fastened together with pins.

Sir Ernest Shackleton, back from a visit to Buda Pesth, where he has obtained a concession pecuniarily more valuable than a section of the Antarctic Circle, has a half-formed idea of writing a book chronicling episodes of his journeying and doings on his lecturing campaign. Judging from some of the stories he tells it will be exceedingly attractive. One records an interview with the German Emperor during a visit of the explorer to Berlin. Before being introduced to the Presence he was solemnly warned that in the course of conversation he was to carefully refrain from controverting any statement the Emperor might put forward, for, as his tutor observed in hushed voice, "His Imperial Majesty doesn't like it." The interview proceeded without hitch till the Emperor, always anxious for information, made inquiry as to the habits of white bears in the region of the South Pole. "There are no white bears there, your Majesty," said Shackleton with deep humility. "No white bears," exclaimed his Majesty, regarding the explorer with withering glance, "why not?" By this time Sir Ernest, awakened to his indiscretion, took refuge in silence, declining to take on himself the duty of explaining the ways of inscrutable Providence.

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

A Menpes House.

LONDON W., March 31.

We are just concluding the much-talked-of All-British Shopping Week. The shops have been brilliant with bunting, and really the windows have made a brave show of what the mother country, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales can turn out in the way of manufactures generally. I think almost pride of place should be given to the chintzes and cretonnes, the designs and colouring being so beautiful. Printing on cotton has risen to a very high plane, for the colouring is so wonderful you would think only hand block printing would have been equal to the demands put upon the printing of the furniture coverings displayed on all sides. There is, however, a note in house decoration that I do not like to see becoming so general. Black carpets and black chintz with a florid design upon it are only fit for very large rooms, and are merely a freak in decoration at that. The black backgrounds give deep shadows in our melancholy climate. A black carpet, with a border of green laurel leaves, such as I saw at Story's yesterday, is only admissible with a bright green wall or old rose, hung with quantities of old engravings in black frames. I remember how beautifully Mrs. Campbell Praed used to decorate her rooms with her collection of old engravings framed in white, as it happened, on old rose walls. If you want black and white things on your walls, then have an old rose background. The dull parchment tints of the paper on which the etchings or mezzotints or wood engravings are printed harmonise beautifully with old rose wall papers. If, on the other hand, you like to hang in colour, a grey or a biscuit background suits water colour and oils alike. They give values to the green, make purples, and do not clash with the flesh tones of your pictures.

Mr. Mortimer Menpes, an artist of whom Australia may well be proud, always had some relation between his pictures and their backgrounds. He it was, in conjunction with Whistler, who brought in the cult of lemon-yellow and the touches of black that were fashionable in the nineties. Mrs. Campbell Praed had a house decorated by Mr. Menpes some years ago, which was much thought of, and which I always remember as being in such excellent taste. The drawing-room was in lemon-yellow, with white paint and a great deal of blue and white china. Her dining-room is always worth thinking of when people are up country, and have not many appliances for decoration. It was suitably done with a touch of savagery about it. The walls were painted in sealing wax red, and low down, like a dado, Mrs. Praed had hung great pieces of Tappa, the black and brown and white of this stuff being delightful against the full red wall. Above this, like a chevaux de frise, rose tall native spears of all kinds, and other native weapons, making a most effective decoration, the brown of the weapons softening the brilliancy of the sealing wax red. The chairs were upholstered in crimson Morocco, and on her table I remember she used to put flowers in barbaric brass bowls I brought her one myself of pierced metal on my return from British North Borneo.

The New Fashions.

The all-British week has brought out some charming coats and skirts, and thankful I am to say hardly a harem skirt to be seen. That is a fashion that will not obtain. The new coats and skirts are the acme of neatness, very little trimming on the coats, and the skirts narrow and neat. Women look wonderfully trim in them, and the marvel is that they are so universally becoming. Even the stout women seem to take up less room in the landscape in these close-fitting coats and skirts, and they are so light they do not tire one like the wider skirts. I feel sure that we shall see the narrow skirt last all through the season.

When you get away from coats and skirts your eye falls on the tunics and underskirts, which seem to be the only alternative. There is practically but little difference between last year's clothes and this. Some houses make the tunic nearly as long as the skirt it is worn with; others bring it barely to the knee. The other type of tunic is opened at the sides and laced across with cords. On the underdress a great amount of embroidery is introduced when the gown has to serve some ceremonial purpose, but the embroidery only shows fitfully through the veiling of ninon. They are fond of contrasts this season. Grey goes over blue, over purple, in fact, grey and purple are very favourite mixtures, quite as much used in the decoration of a drawing-room as for a toilette.

I saw a delightful grey toilette at the Haymarket Theatre, worn by Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who plays the title role in "Lady Patricia." "Mrs. Pat," in this play is herself at her best. When the curtain drew up upon Lady Patricia Mrs. Campbell was reclining in a large basket-work chair, robed in cloth of gold and rich with embroideries, all raised from the material. With her beautiful black hair, her wonderful eyes, the caress in her voice, she looked as though she were the rightful owner of the Garden of the Hesperides. One was reminded of Rossetti and a Burne Jones picture. In the second act of this charming play Mrs. Pat wore a beautiful grey toilette of ninon over white oyster satin, shimmering through its covering. It was made in the prevailing mode, a scant skirt with a long tunic edged with silver, and on her head a band of silver with an upstanding grey feather. At her girdle there was a great clump of purple irises. It was a marvellously beautiful gown. In the last act she wore cut black velvet, a black toque, and some dull jet.

I put down here some notes of a beautiful wedding gown just turned out by one of our leading modistes. It is carried out in satin the colour of old parchment, with long panels of fine silver lace, edged with iridescent beads, which shimmer as ethereally as soap bubbles. These panniers are slit and joined with a ladder of beads, finished with a fringe of the same. The long square train is entirely veiled in old Limerick lace, which springs from the right shoulder, and is caught in at the waist again; while from thence it falls in a cascade of folds to the feet, where it is fastened in a loose knot, and spreads out again over the train. A thick tasselled crystal girdle outlines the waist, and is tied on the left side. The kimono bodice is of silver lace encrusted with beads, suggesting with the side panels a species of coat, while it is further ornamented with ladders of crystals, the three-quarter sleeves being decorated with the same. The under-bodice is of snowy tulle illusion, while the vest is of old Limerick lace and tulle combined, with a narrow embroidery of crystals round the base of the throat.

A beautiful trousseau has been prepared for the bride by the firm who made the wedding gown. One of the evening gowns is designed in rose charmeuse satin, with a pointed peplum tunic of dull gold fish net edged with gold fringe, which in its turn was piped with the charmeuse and studded with motifs of the same, while the high ceinture is of black chiffon velvet, supplemented with a wreath of dull gold laurel leaves. Into this belt the little charmeuse corsage is tucked, while the round neck part is ornamented with a lattice-work of the material, through which a gleam of gold fish net is dimly seen. The corsage is worked with the lace, piped with charmeuse and studded with French knots; while the short sleeves are bordered with a chain of gold leaves, giving place to undersleeves of fish net, with a lattice of charmeuse.

The going-away dress may interest you. It is made of fine herringbone serge trimmed with scrolls of black herringbone braid with a semi-fitting coat and three-quarter sleeves finished with cuffs of reseda poplin, and enriched with soutache. The coat fastens below the waist, and is cut away above the fastenings into two large tabs, which are piped with reseda silk; while the black satin collar is embroidered with green floss picked out with tiny gold beads.

Table Flowers.

I have left myself little space for some new suggestions in the arrangements of flowers, but I may add that the purple cineraria is now a fashionable flower in its many shades of mauve and purple. It is used for the table, mixed with pale pink tulips or anemones, and indeed all round there are signs that purple flowers will be much sought after during the season. For table decoration, at present low gold or silver bowls of tulips are preferred before all others. Narcissi, with their pheasant eyes, standing as though growing in green pottery bowls, are as lovely as anything, and there are so many devices to keep flowers upright in shallow bowls that one gets an effect very easily. If only yellow were fashionable a wonderful scheme might be devolved with the daffodil, which is in its full season just now; and the jonquil, with its lovely perfume, in cream, white, and yellow, is much sought for, because in its case the yellowness is softened by the white petals of the flower.

RICHTER.

Hans Richter has retired. A great man, that is to say, passes from the world of action in which he has held supreme place. It is always a loss immeasurable. It is so, essentially, in the case of Richter. The foremost of living orchestral conductors, his work for some years has been concentrated upon England, in the performance there of great music in a great way. He has long been an idol of the London musical public. That public knew the value both of the man and his work. In many ways he deserved his title as the greatest of modern masters of the orchestra, even in a generation, which possesses Nikisch, and Weingartner, and Mottl. Not always suited temperamentally in the vast range and the diverse outlook of the music which made up his task, he had, nevertheless, a marvellous sweep of sympathy. The ultimate authority in Wagner, unsurpassed in his nobility of conception of Beethoven, and Brahms, himself, indeed, a classic among the classics, but for all that electrically responsive to the call of most of the moderns, Richter was less rarely out of key with his composer than any living conductor. A fine sanity marked his handling of great music. It began with his own deprecatingly modest manner in presence of his score. It had its issue in the unfolding of the mind of the composer. The certainty that one was hearing not Richter, nor the orchestra, but Wagner, or Beethoven, or Elgar, or Strauss, was never in question. It was an illusion, of course, but one possible only to great powers. The dominance of Richter over his band, however, with a view to that effect, was no illusion. It was unmistakably obvious. The men were palpably magnetised into submission. His authority was so complete as to transform the hundred players and the hundred brains into one player, with one brain, and that the conductor's.

Richter's retirement, thus, makes a tremendous difference to British music. He is so obviously without a successor. He has been in the forefront of music for fifty years, and he has lived in many reigns of many musical kings. His authority, therefore, is as final as his knowledge is wide. He is an old man, but he had come to be regarded as a permanent institution. He was well known as having been prominent in a far away past, but he was better known as a supreme figure of the living present. As long ago as 1868 he refused to conduct the first performance of "Das Rheingold" for the King of Bavaria, at Munich, because the theatre arrangements were not adequate to the genius of the work. But in respect of Wagner, of course, Richter occupies a unique position. From the beginning he seems to have come under the spell of the Bayreuth wizard. In the early sixties, he was already closely associated with him. He wrote out Wagner's scores. He trained Wagner choruses. He conducted Wagner orchestras—even then. When the little band assembled beneath the window of Madame Wagner, in 1871, to serenade her with the lovely "Siegfried Idyl," which was Wagner's way of celebrating the birth of his son, it was Richter who directed the performance. When Wagner came to London in 1877 to challenge the appreciation of the British public, Richter came with him. At the first rehearsal in the Albert Hall Wagner found himself hopelessly at cross purposes with the orchestra. Finally, in a rage, he threw down the baton. A little man seated in the auditorium was called up. He took his place at the conductor's desk. Instantly confusion merged into order, and order glowed into enthusiasm. That was the Richter touch, and thus was began the orchestral fame of Richter in England.

It was firmly established, later, when he came, periodically, to conduct "The Ring" at Covent Garden, when he took over the Halle orchestra at Manchester, and when the formation of the London Symphony Orchestra ensured his frequent presence in the metropolis as director of its chief concerts. The London Symphony Orchestra has been eulogised by one famous conductor after another as an organisation unsurpassed by any in the world. In that respect it witnesses to the wonderful development of orchestral music in England during recent years. Henry Wood and his Queen's Hall orchestra have done a great work in that regard; but the presence of Richter in England has done more. With the London Symphony players at his disposal he established as a commonplace performances that were as near perfection as might be imagined; performances, that is, illumined by the gleam of interpretative genius, and weighted with an unrivalled authority of knowledge and experience. Richter's London Symphony programmes were always finely eclectic in their devotion to the great utterances of musical genius. But they were rarely without a wise consideration for the new music and the untried composer. It was an inspiring thing to watch the old man's fatherly care of a new work. Faced with a young composer's score in manuscript, he brought to it the whole wealth of his masterly gift of exposition. He drew out from it whatever spark of beauty was in it, and however hidden amongst its detail; and any portion of it which sounded ineffective under Richter was ineffective indeed. He had a bravely open mind for the new music and the untried musician, and many a man is under debt to Richter for a first hearing in public. It was he who established the fame of Elgar by his first performance of the "Enigma Variations," which, in constant performance since, were always conducted by Richter with a splendid enthusiasm. Elgar's Symphony is dedicated to the great conductor, with the inscription "True artist and true friend." The writer well remembers the first performance of that noble work, when, after directing the orchestra to a superb performance, so that the Queen's Hall rang with the cheers of an excited audience, Richter used to stand aside at the end of each movement and himself lead the ovation to the composer. That was fine, but finer still was Richter engaged in handling a classic master-work. His performances of Beethoven—of the Eroica Symphony or the Fifth Symphony in particular—were as noble a manifestation of music as may be hoped for. In such moments, as also when he rose into the empyrean with Brahms, there was that in the grandeur of the utterance of his hundred-voiced instrument which enveloped it and him in a mist of noble sound, so that players and conductor alike dissolved, were no more seen, became an invisible medium through which the mighty emotions of genius throbbed almost visibly.

But it was as the greatest of all the exponents of Wagner that Richter has done his most famous and his best-loved work for England. His long association with the composer was one of his unique qualifications in this regard. His profound knowledge of the Wagner scores was another. Both were at the height of expression at Covent Garden in a Wagner cycle. The public faith in Richter was absolute. Once it was known that Richter was to conduct a Wagner drama, no one asked after the singers. No singer was so poor, indeed, but Richter could silence the great orchestra and let the voice through. No singer was so finely equipped but Richter could spur the band into splendid support of him. Every Wagner night at Covent Garden, the appearance of a stout little man climbing into his place in the orchestra was the signal for a roar of cheers from the theatre. At the close of every performance the shouts of "Richter, Richter!" drowned all else. Richter himself, always imperturbable, always modest, rarely responded. At the beginning he seated himself, quietly, and raised his baton. The theatre was hushed. The players were already within range of the most masterful eye in contemporary music. Thereafter, with but casual attention upon the book, the little man with no gesture of command commanded; commanded everybody and everything, commanded especially the actors on the stage in every detail of their work, and the orchestra to the slightest phrase buried in the depths of the score. In fear of Richter's frown, every person engaged was at uttermost tension of effort; in hope of Richter's smile, every singer coloured every phrase for the sake, not of himself, but of Wagner; the trumpets pealed unerringly the sword theme of Siegfried, the trombones breathed out the rich chords of the Walhalla motive, the wood-wind phrased exquisitely the plaintive eloquence of Brunnhilde, the strings caressed the love-music of Isolde. And at the end Richter quietly laid down his baton and disappeared, the theatre roared for him in vain. The triumph of Richter was in his loyalty to an ideal, his modest subordination of himself, and his thoroughness. A wonderful man, and an incalculable loss to music.

GUINEA GOLD.

(BY BEATRICE GRIMSHAW.)

V.

In the fading yellow sunset, stemming the death-like stream with our incongruous cargo of Christy-Minstrel-playing niggers, we began once more to look for a camping ground. It seemed no easier to find to-night than last night; true, the swamps were far behind us, but the trees crowded each other right to the verge of the river, and there did not seem a spot the size of a table where a tent might be pitched. But the miners, familiar with this kind of travel as a "drummer" is familiar with ticket-offices and platforms, settled everything with the utmost ease. They got out on the edge of of the primeval forest, climbed up the steep banks; set twenty "boys" to work with tomahawks, and had the flies for the natives, and the tent for us pitched in the middle of a neat little clearing before the light was out of the sky. That night the nurse and I had a floor of clean earth and leaves to our tent, and when the flap was opened after turning in a dim view of drooping boughs and pillared trunks, stretching away into the depths of the unknown forest where never a white man's foot had trod. All round us was unexplored country; the Kukukuku alone, that ghostly night-wandering tribe, known and feared by all the western natives, but never seen in broad day, might tread the dense recesses of the jungle now and then; the wild boar might crash through the lianas, the crocodile bellow in the creeks—other life there was none.

The next day was only the third, but we felt as if we had been travelling up the river for weeks, and after lunch (since the miners told us we were nearing the landing-place) the nurse and I kept a sharp lookout for the end of the journey. About 4 o'clock the Bulldog drew in to the left-hand side of the river and stopped. We were at Tiveri, the landing-place for the goldfields.

That celebrated schoolboy "howler"—"Le mille Romaine etait de mille pas"—"The Roman mile was not a mile"—came into my head as I looked. The Tiveri landing-place was not a landing-place. There was no jetty, no stage, not even a piece of bank cut level. There was no house, on visible track. You simply made a long jump from the Bulldog's gunwale on to a muddy slope as steep as a roof, scrambled up it, and saw your goods thrown out after you and conveyed on carriers' backs up to the store. And yet all the food for thousands of natives and hundreds of whites, all the material for a field hospital, roofing iron, furniture, and miscellaneous property of every kind, had been landed on that absurd mud-slide during a year and a half past.

Half a mile of wet forest track brought us up to the store, fronting on a creek which was bridged rather ingeniously by a light raft tied to a hand-rope of native creepers. The store itself was a "bird-cage" building of the type familiar in the Papuan bush, made of saplings and very narrow slabs set fairly close, quite transparent, unless where the inmates had nailed a little calico for privacy's sake, boasting but two rooms, one of which was the bedroom of the store-keeper and his wife; the other, the bar. At this place all the goods for the goldfield are landed, and stacked in rude sheds, to be conveyed later on by carriers up to the small branch store on the field.

There were several miners down here, dressed in the universal costume of dark flannel shirt, khaki trousers, and soft felt hat, worn by all the diggers of Papua. They eagerly greeted their companions who had come up with us, and immediately all the flannel shirts retired from the bar, while the dogs—one to every man—got up fights outside the store, and the engaged labourers squatted on their haunches about the verandah, and exchanged opinions about their masters. Tents were pitched for the nurse and myself on the patch of clear ground in front of the store, and we enjoyed the luxury of a change and a wash, before walking round to see what sort of a place we had got to. It was a mere handful snatched out of the bush; a wall of dark tall forest surrounded the little clearing on every hand. There was a bit of garden, a fowl-yard, one store, and outhouses—no more.

We did not sleep early that night; there was nothing uproarious about the behaviour of the miners, but the keeper of the store had a peculiarly blatant gramaphone, and a large stock of music-hall songs; and for what seemed an interminable time Harry Lauder was made to bellow forth to the silent night his philosophy of life. If a gramaphone is more objectionable in any one place than in any other, surely a clearing in the remote quiet bush, with a river running by, and the stars overhead, is that place. There have been millions of men, in the last four centuries, who have cursed the names of Gutenberg and Faust, despite the good things they gave for mankind. There will be millions more, during the next century or two, who will curse the name of Edison—as I did, that night in the starry clearing beside the little river.

Next morning carriers by the dozen were streaming all up the track to the field, conveying the cargo of the Bulldog piece by piece, in 40 or 50 pound loads, strapped on their backs. The nurse and myself, guided by the Government medical officer belonging to the district, got away after lunch. We had prepared ourselves for a rough walk, and wore short skirts and puttees; the latter meant to protect us against leeches, and far worse evil, "scrub itch"—the scourge of the New Guinea bush. This annoying affection is caused by a microscopic insect, inhabiting low scrub. It burrows under the skin, and raises small, torturing lumps, which often take weeks to disappear. Surveyors, who spend much of their time out in the bush, are sometimes actually lamed by this unpleasant affection.

The track from Tiveri to the field is a Government road—so we were told. I had been long enough in Papua not to expect a macadamised highway fit for motor cars, but that seven miles tramp was really, really . . . .

Well, the Government had done a good deal. They had cut down all the big trees along a strip some yards wide, and some miles long; they had bridged the creeks, and they had corduroyed the swamps. But the bridges were single logs, spanning creeks that were torrents half the time; sometimes they boasted a very loose swinging finger-guide of native liana on one side; sometimes they did not. Occasionally the log had sunk to a fearsome angle; once it was partly under water. Luckily, my companion and I owned good heads, and steady feet . . . . It did not require a special revelation to explain why two men whom I met coming up to the field from Tiveri, weeks later, carried an uncorked bottle of whisky, almost full, at the end of that hot, tiresome walk. A man who attempted the journey in any condition short of absolute sobriety might justly be arrested as an intending suicide.

Most of the track was swamp, and practically all the seven miles was imperfect "corduroy" laid endwise, which is a wicked way of laying it, though logs are saved, because you must balance along all the time with your toes turned out, watching for rolling and tilting logs. We had started rather late, and we could not hurry over the corduroy; so when the afternoon thunderstorm came on (there is one practically every day at 5 o'clock) we simply had to take it as it came, only praying that the terrifying flashes should not catch us in the middle of a single-log bridge. As for the rain—well, we were as wet in five minutes as we could be in five hours, so the worst was known at once.

Streaming water at every fold of clothing, we reached the last bit of the track, where a rise of 300ft has to be taken all in one gulp, up rough log steps part of the way, on semi-perpendicular slides of greasy clay the rest. There are fine views from this bit, but the mountain mists blanket everything about the Lakekamu in the afternoons, and we could only see white cloudy air, dripping trees, and slippery, root-bound track. Over the crest of the hill we dropped in the sudden way that is usual among these highlands. There are many ridges, and this is one where a tall man could sit astride on the highest part. Past the doctor's little birdcage bungalow, down a nightmare stairway of 271 great logs, laid widely apart across a greasy slope of some 45 degrees, on into a brief niche carved out of the hill, where another little stick house clung like a swallow's nest—and we were there. Ten days out from Port Moresby; a hundred and ninety miles—good travelling for Papua.

With the exception of Woodlark, the Lakekamu is by far the easiest to reach of the Papuan goldfields. This fact gives some idea of the barriers that have been overcome by mining pioneers. And here I will have to pause and tell something of the past history of New Guinea goldfields.

LAWN TENNIS.

MODERN SERVICE METHODS.

(BY DR. L. O. S. POIDEVIN.)

It was interesting information that the cables ticked off to us a few days ago about the All-England covered court championships at Queen's Club. Wimbledon, of course, is the Mecca of lawn tennis players: from all parts of the world players make their pilgrimage to these historic courts, and naturally the championships decided there rank first in importance in the lawn tennis year. We are apt in consequence to hear a great deal more about these championships than those at Queen's Club, still, in the eyes at least of English players, the latter championships rank very high, and, indeed, second only in importance to those at Wimbledon. The success of the young Frenchman, Andre Gobert, in the final of both the singles and doubles at Queen's Club last week; therefore, is an event of no small significance to the lawn tennis fraternity. It certainly bears appropriate testimony to the truth of my comments a fortnight ago concerning the defeat of Wilding by the French youth, W. Laurentz, in the championship of France final. That result having its setting in Paris was bound to be regarded as a great triumph for the French school, but even more so will the success of Gobert in London be hailed with national delight.

A fortnight ago, in commenting on the French school, I gave a personal appreciation of Gobert and the possibilities in his game, so that I need not repeat myself in this respect. He is a tall young man, barely 20 years of age, the foundation of whose success is the possession of a very powerful service. It is a service built essentially on modern lines, and his success may very appropriately be taken as a text for some reflections upon modern service methods in general—a topic that is arousing no small amount of attention in lawn tennis circles here at present. The almost universal absence of such service methods in our play is one of the most noticeable features of our tournaments as I have seen them recently, and affords a most striking contrast with that to be observed at any Continental tournament, such as, for instance, in France, Germany, Belgium, or Austria—places where the standard of play is advancing most rapidly. In the hands of the foreigner or the American the service is his strongest weapon of attack, as it should be. He reckons upon winning his service games as a rule both in singles and doubles. This is true not only of the "top-notch" American or Continental player, but also of the average player; indeed, even the very poor class player has a good service because of the method which he adopts. With the average Australian player the service is nothing much more than a mere opening of the game, to follow which up towards the net into a position of attack would be to court disaster. It is in the subsequent exchanges that he hopes to gain his winning advantage; consequently he finds it no easier to win his service than to win his "return of service" games. Generally speaking, the rest of our game, our volleying, our return of service, our play off the ground, will bear very favourable comparison with that of any other set of players that I have seen. No one, for instance, could wish for cleaner, crisper, ground strokes than those of Sharp or A. B. Jones, or more neatly executed volleys. When, however, you see a good Australian player of the orthodox type, let us say, Stan. Doust, playing a young Continental player, Gobert, for instance, the contrast in service is most marked. Gobert makes use of the American variety, with plenty of pace and spin and life, and if he misses with his first, his second is hardly less swift or hostile in intent. It gives him a distinct advantage over his adversary, and he advances towards the net after either service unhesitatingly, and invariably in order to take up the strong position of offence, whence he pounces upon and kills everything that is not played with extreme accuracy and resolution. Such a service alone is of course not sufficient; it needs to be backed by good volleying. In Gobert's case it is, and that is why he has come so rapidly to the front, but the strength of his volleying and his ground play generally was not, when I saw him at the close of last season, by any means comparable with that of Doust. Presumably, it has improved during the winter practice. It only needed to do so, and for Gobert to learn to thoroughly appreciate the meaning and value of "position" for him to take the highest honours at the game. Doust, with his plain, straightforward little service, which he also follows to the net, to the casual onlooker might appear to be outclassed by the Frenchman, but his fleetness of foot and remarkable quickness and deadliness on the volley help to restore the balance so heavily weighted down by his opponent's service methods. With that service, however, no matter how magnificently he otherwise played, Doust, could never hope to attain to the highest honours, but give him Gobert's service, and he might be champion, and probably would be, at the earliest opportunity.

To realise what the modern service means we have only to reflect how the portals of success were opened unto Norman Brookes. In the play of his friend, Dr. Eames, though but a very mediocre exponent of the service art, Brookes was quick to see and appreciate the value of modern service methods. He set himself assiduously to acquire and develop them by dint of hard and constant practice, and to remodel his game accordingly, and we all know that the remarkable command he acquired over the modern service is the real foundation of his game and his success. Note, it is not his whole game, as some suppose; it is merely the foundation. It makes all things possible to him. Volleying and "position" make up the superstructure. Brookes has thoroughly grasped the value and importance of "position" in the court. Just as the high-class billiard-player plays for every shot with due regard to the next and succeeding one, so Brookes plays for position in much the same way. It all seems so easy to him. This service gives him the initial advantage, and enables him to get into a commanding position near the net. His return of services and ground strokes generally are usually made slowly enough to give him time to assume the "position" for volleying, whence he can dominate the game. His play may not so nearly attain the ideal as does that of the billiard-player, and mistakes are more frequent on the court than on the green cloth, and necessarily so; but he has shown the immense possibilities of these methods. Without his superb volleying powers, however, his methods would be totally inadequate.

There are many players quite as expert as Brookes on the volley, and perhaps more so in their ground strokes, whose service methods do not give them a reasonable chance of displaying that skill or of reaching the highest honours. Relatively, I fancy the number of those players is greater in Australia and in England than in any other countries where lawn tennis is played. The reason for this in England is, perhaps, because of the too long and too slavish adherence to the methods of the famous Doherty brothers. "Laurie" Doherty held the highest honours against all-comers for many years, and tacitly, if not otherwise, English disciples come to look upon newer methods with the typical English conservatism expressed in the words "what 'Laurie' Doherty does is quite good enough for us to copy." But "Laurie" Doherty was a genius with the racket; I have never seen his superior. His game was one of remarkable evenness and strength at all points. His service was never severe, but particularly well placed, and full of length, and there was no appreciable difference between his first and second. He used to put just a little cut on the ball, which brought it to the ground a trifle shorter than its flight in the air made it appear likely to do; over and over again have I myself been taken in with that service, when, judging in the ordinary way by the flight, it appeared certain to be a "fault," at the last moment the ball would drop and clip the chalk mark with persistent and annoying regularity. On the volley he was perfection itself; his ground strokes were faultless on either side, and overhead he was about as deadly as anyone can be in quite an unostentatious way. He was a model of orthodoxy, but, as I have said, he stood alone. At the same time, it is easy to understand how he should influence the rising generation during his time of ascendency. More recently, however, the newer methods of service and the type of game they foster are taking hold of the younger players, and there is hope for the standard of English lawn tennis to emerge once again from its recent period of comparative stagnation. Here our young players have seen comparatively little of the modern methods as employed by the best exponents. Brookes has given few illustrations in Sydney, and the American Davis Cup players could not, in their short visit, give more than a hint or two; what is needed is a permanent example or two for studious observance. The more established players, of course, cannot be expected to make the changes in their game that these methods demand. It takes time, patience, and perseverance to do so. It is for the younger players to adopt them, and it is encouraging to see some of the younger players giving expression in their match-play to their appreciation of the modern methods of service. It is in that way that greatness lies; with a good modern service the value of your volleying is enhanced beyond recognition, and anything is then possible.

COAL VEND CASE.

AN OFFICIAL THREAT.

TO PURCHASE AGAINST VEND.

THE NEWCASTLE CONVERSATION.

The prosecution in connection with the Coal Vend was continued before Mr. Justice Isaacs in the High Court yesterday.

Thomas Colebatch, chief storekeeper of the South Australian Government, was cross-examined by Mr. Lamb, K.C. (for collieries).

Witness said that on the occasion of his visit to Newcastle to discuss further contracts he had no knowledge of coal-mining. His experience was confined to the commercial side. He had refreshed his memory of the conversation with coal proprietors at Newcastle from the report which he made to his Government on his return to Adelaide. He based his report on rough notes which he made immediately after the interview. They had accepted a tender for Southern coal at 21s, and paid for it without complaint; and up to that time had had no experience of Southern coal for railway purposes. The idea of calling for separate tenders for coal and freight originated at a meeting of his tender board.

To Mr. Campbell, K.C. (defence): He had been connected with coal supplies for the South Australian Government for the last 22 years, and had never inquired the prices of coal other than New South Wales coal. The short supplies which he had spoken of the previous day were deficiencies on requisitions that had matured.

Is it not a fact that your requisitions frequently fell below the estimated quantity, and sometimes to the full extent sanctioned by the contract?—I am not aware, and have never had my attention drawn to such a fact.

Do you know anything about the comparative results of coal consumption in respect of the qualities of Southern and Newcastle coal?—No.

Mr. Mitchell, K.C. (for the S.S. owners): You have pretty onerous conditions in your contracts in the case of the contractors making any default, haven't you?—Just so.

Supposing there were 20,000 tons short, that would be worth about £15,000?—It would be a very large amount.

Did you ever fine them during the course of these contracts?—I have threatened them, but have never carried my threats into execution.

When did you first threaten them?—At my interview at the office in Newcastle.

What did you say?—I told the representatives of the two companies that if they didn't increase their delivery the penalty clause would be given effect to at once.

What did they say?—They said they would try and deliver the coal. They said nothing about the threat.

Tell us the conversation?—I said I had come over 1100 miles to see what means could be adopted to increase the supplies under the contract. I said: "I have come to help you if I can. I want you to tell me what the difficulties in the way are." Huddart, Parker's representative said that there were two special reasons. One was that ships were not available at that time to increase the delivery. The second reason was that the South Australian Tender Board had restricted the number of pits, and that they could not obtain the coal from the restricted number of pits. My reply was that it was not so; that we had offered them 15 pits, and that they had taken seven. I undertook to wire to the tender board, and said I felt sure that before 4 o'clock it would reply, and allow them to supply from any pits, except seven or eight. I said, "Now, gentlemen, I will give you a fortnight or three weeks to increase the supply. But if you don't at least double the supply in that time, and treble it a little later on, as you can get hold of the vessels, I shall certainly purchase coal against you." They laughed when I said I would purchase against them.

They did increase the supply considerably?—Admirably. In the first fortnight or three weeks they doubled the quantity, and in four weeks they tendered us more coal than we could receive at Port Adelaide.

That meant they would either have to keep the ships waiting or put it out to prevent double handling?—No doubt.

On any other occasion, did you threaten them before or after 1906?—On no other occasion, from 1907 up to the present.

Did they tell you there was a tremendous demand at that time, owing to the foreign trade?—I have no recollection.

To Mr. Starke (for Crown): Witness said that they had found southern coal specially suitable for bunkering purposes. He told the two representatives at the Newcastle interview that on the way up he had seen the Victorian Railway Commissioner; that in the Victorian contract they were only 14,000 tons behind, as against 20,000 tons to South Australia, whose contract was 2½ times larger.

John Goldsworthy White, acting-secretary of the Victorian Tender Board, was called.

Mr. Bavin (for the Crown) read out a mass of scheduled matter relating to the prices charged for coal in Victoria during various years. The Crown seeks to show by the figures that competition was killed and prices raised by the operations of the alleged combine in Victoria.

The Court adjourned till Monday.

OVERLAPPING UNIONS.

ARBITRATION PREFERRED TO STRIKES.

LABOUR COUNCIL VOTE.

With the multiplication and growth of new unions the encroachment on organisation of one union upon another has become a difficult question at the Trades Hall. It mainly hinges on the relative merits of industrial and trades unionism, the advocates of industrial unionism maintaining that where existing unions had been unable to organise workers in industries in connection with which industrial unions had been formed, they had a perfect right to enrol these workers, even if they were eligible for membership in trade unions. Recently the matter was referred to the executive of the Labour Council for report. The executive on Thursday night reported:—

In the opinion of your executive the overlapping of unions is due to the fact that industrial unions are formed in industries where craft unions exist. We, therefore, decided to deal with the question of which form of organisation should be approved of by council—industrial unionism or craft unionism.

In the opinion of your executive committee the decision of council on this question will largely depend upon the mode of settling disputes and the regulation of conditions that the council favours. If it favours the adoption of the strike as a means of regulating our conditions, etc., then your executive would advise the adoption of industrial unionism, whereby the whole industry could be stopped at one and the same time. If, on the other hand, the council favours industrial arbitration, then your executive advises that unions be formed of trades and callings.

The executive further recommended that council affirms the principle of compulsory industrial arbitration as a means of settling industrial disputes and the regulation of the hours to be worked, the wages to be paid, and the general conditions under which the workers shall work.

Mr. Bagnall said that the whole question was whether the unions were to rely upon the method of strike or upon arbitration. The executive of council thought council would favour the latter course, and therefore recommended that unions should be organised on craft lines.

Mr. Thyer (Furniture Trades) said that the right to cease work was the principle upon which they opposed "Wade's" Act. Unless there was a provision compelling both parties to arbitration, he considered the strike method best, but he favoured industrial arbitration if it was compulsory.

Mr. M'Farlane (Ironworkers' Assistants) opposed. There were periods when the method of the strike was the only method by which workers could obtain their full rights.

Mr. Morrish, M.L.A., said that in the absence of such a complete organisation of the unions as would make the strike method an effective one, he thought that compulsory arbitration was the best thing for the workers. He thought that any penalty embodied in an Act of Parliament should only be a monetary one, and should not involve imprisonment.

Mr. W. O'Brien (Furniture Trades) saw no necessity for affirming the principle of industrial arbitration. By endorsing compulsory arbitration they surrendered all their control of industrial matters. Arbitration had not been altogether to the workers' advantage. He moved to delete the word "compulsory."

Mr. Bryant (Typo.) thought that under present conditions no strike could succeed.

Mr. Tom Miller (Storemen) said their ideal was that he who does not work neither should he eat. They should therefore oppose the principle under which men could leave their work and live on the rest of the community.

Mr. H. Caunter (Shop Assistants) declared that the strike was a barbarous method.

Mr. F. Glynn (Furniture Trades) said that by arbitration the workers had secured immense advantages.

Clause 1, affirming the principle of compulsory arbitration, was eventually carried by 77 votes to 22. The council then adjourned.

When You Were Twenty.

Do you remember when you were twenty, and you sprang from your bed each morning glad that another day had dawned; lithe and limber; every muscle pliant and every sinew taut, mind and body eager to test the savour of the day's happenings? What would you not give to experience similar sensations again? The procession of the years and the wear and tear of life have probably left you suffering from

Rheumatism	Indigestion
Gout	Biliousness
Neuralgia	Jaundice
Lumbago	Sick Headache
Backache	General Debility
Sciatica	Gravel
Blood Disorders	Stone
Anæmia	Bladder Troubles

or from some other of the many ailments due to defective action of the Kidneys—and—Liver.

Well, we cannot make you twenty again, but we can put you in the way of making life easier when we tell you that is a wonderfully restorative medicine in cases where the kidneys and liver are inactive or diseased, and in complaints such as those mentioned above, due to retention in the system of uric and biliary poisons, which would be eliminated were the kidneys and liver acting effectively.

Warner's Safe Cure is sold by storekeepers and chemists in the original (2/9 and 5/) bottles, and in the cheaper (2/6) Concentrated non-alcoholic form. It is readily obtainable, and there is therefore no reason why you should continue to suffer unnecessarily.

BEAUTIFUL LIZETTE PARKES

—EXTOLS—

DR. SHELDON'S NEW DISCOVERY.

MISS LIZETTE PARKES (from a Photo).

Miss Lizette Parkes is an Australasian favourite. Her career is a triumph of both beauty and brains. She recently won two beauty competitions in New Zealand—one in Christchurch (a beautiful gold bangle), and the other in Wellington (a silver jewel case, which was presented to her by Sir Joseph Ward and Lady Ward). Her stage career has been a singularly versatile and brilliant one with the J. C. Williamson and Meynell and Clarke firms. At present she is with the Hamilton-Plimmer-Denniston Co., and is greatly delighting her admirers, particularly in the sweet character of Simplicity Johnson in "Lovers' Lane." New Zealand loves Miss Parkes best as Peter Pan—a role in which Australians have not yet been fortunate enough to see her. "At the close of 'Peter Pan' at the Opera House," said the N.Z. "Times" (28.8.10), "Miss Parkes had to respond to the record number of twelve curtain calls." Respecting Miss Parkes in the same role, the N.Z. "Triad" said:—"She was a dearly loved Peter Pan. She impressively had the proper spirit, the fairy grace, the melody of voice, the lissom feet." Congratulating itself on its foresight, the Sydney "Bulletin" just recently said:—"Some years back the "Bulletin" prophesied a big future for clever Lizette Parkes, and the prophecy is materialising daily." In the following letter Miss Lizette Parkes points the way to perfect freedom from Coughs and Colds to all sufferers from Chest Complaints:—

Sheldon Drug Co., Ltd.,

Sydney.

Dear Sirs,—

I am writing to tell you what a strong advocate I am of Dr. Sheldon's New Discovery. It is the only thing that does me any good when I have a bad cold and cough, or when my throat feels sore or strained. During the past two years I have used it on numerous occasions, and always with the best results. It is an excellent remedy, and I never feel safe to start on a trip without having a bottle of it in my bag.

With very best wishes for "New Discovery,"

I am, sincerely yours,

(Sgd.) LIZETTE PARKES.

NURSE URE SAYS YOU CAN'T BEAT IT.

In a recent letter from the Lake View Hotel, Ballarat, Vic., Nurse Ure writes:—"You can't beat Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for children. It is absolutely the best I have used in my professional career, extending over 20 years. Numerous cases of croup, which is a most dreadful complaint for children, have come under my notice, and I never hesitate to recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, for it means absolutely the end of the disease after three or four doses."—Advt.

SCIENCE NOTES.

W.G.P.

SOLID BITUMENS.

Mr. S. F. Peckham writes an excellent volume on the technology of the solid bitumens, substances to which he has devoted his attention for more than forty years. Mineral pitch had an industrial application in very early times, having, in fact, been used to fix the alabaster slabs in the palaces of Nineveh and Babylon. The substance was often found on the shores of the Dead Sea, and sold to Egypt, where, among other things, it was used for embalming the dead. During the middle ages it does not seem to have been much in use, and we have to leap to the nineteenth century to find bituminous materials, got by destructive distillation of shales and coals, as prominent commercial products. Concurrently many bituminous minerals were discovered, especially limestones and sandstones, which are often impregnated with the substance. Trinidad pitch, one of the principal commercial sources, is a very complex mineral mixture inflated with gas. In the early part of the 18th century bitumen was classified with sulphur. In reality it consists principally of carbon compounds, though sulphur and iron may be present. Solid bitumens occur in various places, filling thin seams and veins in eruptive rocks, and these are worked like any other minerals. Important deposits are found in Utah, Barbadoes, Cuba, Sicily, and elsewhere; and they may occur in nearly every member of the geological series. The most prolific periods, however, appear to have been just after the deposition of the coal measures, during the Cretaceous and during the Tertiary. As to the origin of the substance, the discussion is obviously bound up with that of the origin of petroleum. Some hold it is the product of chemical reactions between inorganic materials, and others suppose it to be a distillate from organic matter. This last is a process that is roughly imitated by technology, which is so far an argument for an organic origin; but very much the same sort of thing can be done with inorganic minerals, so that the issue of the problem is still in doubt. There is, of course, no reason why all bitumen and petroleum deposits should have arisen in the same way.

THE FUTURE OF ELECTRICITY.

M. Lucien Poincare is generally worth listening to. Discussing the future of electricity he remarks that the mechanism which in the Hertz waves transmits a very small amount of power can also in principle convey hundreds of kilowatts. He foresees that in the not distant future we shall thus have motors actuated by "wireless," and also "wireless" electric lighting; as the respective instruments have to be in tune avoidance of payment would be difficult. Another line of development lies in the possibility of obtaining electrical energy by heat or chemical means on the large scale. Electricity, moreover, promises to help us to the production of "cold" light. The luminous radiation of the best incandescent lamps is hardly more than 1 per cent. of the total, and this extravagant expenditure on unrequired heating effects already makes us feel somewhat ashamed of the crudity of our resources. It would seem by no means impossible to communicate to the ether vibrations of frequency suitable for lighting which would not include a useless procession of the infra-red waves. The only approach to this so far, however, is the Tesla tube, in which high-frequency currents flow without electrodes through a very rarefied gas, and give a kind of glow-worm light. The luminous vapour of mercury in the mercury lamp is, of course, not raised to incandescence, and this lamp makes a great stride in efficiency; but there is still great loss of energy, and the tube tends to become overheated, to say nothing of the cathodic resistance. However, we are a long way ahead of 1873, when on the occasion of a visit of the Shah of Persia to Paris the hosts had to fall back on 4000 candles to make a brilliant show. Turning to recent advance in other direction, the electrical production of ozone on the large scale may be mentioned. It is used for the bleaching of fabrics, the ageing of alcohol, and the sterilisation of town water supplies.

CONCERNING WASPS.

The true wasps constitute the division of Hymenoptera known as Diploptera, from the fact that the front wings are longitudinally plicate in repose—doubled over lengthwise. They may be solitary or social, and the three forms—male, female, and worker—may be found. Of solitary wasps about 800 species are known, showing considerable diversity of structure and habit. A characteristic species constructs with clay a vase-like vessel, which it stocks with a dozen or more caterpillars. In such a mass of food material its delicate egg would be quickly crushed. The egg is therefore suspended from the dome covering the nest by a sort of spider thread. After being hatched the young larva still lives in the shell, and eats its meals from its house, which is gradually lowered, by a splitting up of its sides, as the larder becomes diminished. Finally the larva is big and strong enough to go down to its cellar, and it then completes its metamorphosis in the usual way. Other species build groups of similar cells. Others again merely live in holes or cracks. A few form burrows in sandy ground. The caterpillar-catching habit is pretty general throughout the division. Whether the wasp first stings the caterpillar is, however, still in doubt, though that legend is firmly established in popular natural history. In any case the caterpillars would soon be sufficiently weakened by starvation. Other insects, of course, take advantage of the careful housekeeping of the frugal wasp. Some wasps carelessly leave their door unlocked, but even when the opening is properly closed certain insects will manage to pierce it, and deposit an egg. Some Australian solitaries construct large nests with funnel-shaped entrances—the insect itself is about an inch long. The social wasps construct elaborate nests, but it seems that these are only used for a single season. Usually the nest is begun by a single female. It builds cells, deposits eggs, and rears a brood of workers. These then take up the task, and from the later eggs males and females are produced. The former are usually killed off by winter cold; but the females hibernate, and each is the potential founder of a new nest. This routine is probably modified in tropical countries, where social wasps that store up honey are known. Tropical species often construct exceedingly durable nests that may be upwards of two feet in length. They are enclosed in a paper-like tissue impervious to rain, and are usually suspended from a branch. There are five or six hundred known species of social wasps. The genus Vespa is one of the most widely distributed, and includes many species. It comes down as far as Java, but, curiously enough, is not known in Australia. We have, however, a sufficiently abundant supply of other social wasps, and some of them are very formidable insects. The last family of wasps include the Masseridae, or shining wasps, a group of fifty or sixty species with few genera. The wings are only imperfectly folded in repose. Most of the species are rare, and little is known about their habits.

ANCIENT STEEL.

There are many remains of prehistoric forges and smelters, and some of the very earliest ancient monuments known to us must have been cut by steel instruments, for soft iron would have been powerless against the hard rock of which they are built. The fragment of an iron tool at least five thousand years old was found in the Great Pyramid, and there are various indications of the use of steel about 3000 B.C. The iron appears to have been made in crude catalan forges, and as the metal remained long in contact with the fuel it is probable that it took up a certain percentage of carbon; and experience would show that such iron was the most suitable for tools. Meteoric iron is said to have been so used among the very ancient Egyptians. Tempering, no doubt, arose from the accidental dropping of the instrument into water. Metal-cutting was a more difficult achievement, but a rough form of lathe seems to have been in use in the days of Solon, in the sixth century B.C. The Toledo steel that later on became so famous is now said to have contained strong traces of tungsten, nickel, and similar elements now used to give a hard alloy.

APRIL REVIEWS.

DEMOCRACY AND INDIA.

A "Fortnightly" writer quotes an old article of Lord Morley, in which that political philosopher points out that the government of India, though theoretically perfect, is practically fallacious, inasmuch as the Secretary of State is responsible, not to India, but to his party in the House of Commons. In another article, published, if we remember rightly, in the March reviews, Lord Morley successfully demolishes his former position. The writer proceeds to criticise Lord Morley's latest views in some detail. He rightly points out that one of the main difficulties of Indian government is the practical impossibility of getting British democracy to realise the enormous weight, complexity, delicacy, and hazard of all the obligations that arise from our connection with the great Asiatic continent. The rulers of an empire won by force can best afford to be tolerant when they stand in such an attitude of strength that mildness cannot be mistaken for cowardice, or forbearance for weakness. However, the writer is idealist enough to believe that the situation in India may be saved by creating intellectual leaders, who will spread the true Imperial spirit among their countrymen.

THE JOURNALISM OF ADDISON.

The "Fortnightly" reminds us that we are not celebrating the bi-centenary of the birth of the only newspaper that ever became literature. In 1711 the taunt that journalism is unreadable and literature unread was not applicable at either end. Even in its own day the numbers of the "Spectator" were bound up in volumes, and collected editions of it have appeared ever since. It is remarkable to contrast this with the fate, say, of the Shakespeare quartos. How was it that Addison achieved immortality for very discursive writing on subjects of no importance? Still more perplexing is it that he should have won popularity from a generation that scoffed at morals and sneered at intelligence. No doubt Addison played on their curiosity for all it was worth. The vogue of Addison, apart from the immediate sale of his paper, was doubtless due to the curiously average character of his judgments. He never surprises his reader, and his anxiety for morals and good sense is what all his readers felt, however far they fell short of their ideal in practice. Until the end of the mid-Victorian period, in fact, Addison remained distinctly en rapport with the average consciousness of Englishmen; but it may be doubted whether more than a few now turn to him except as a literary curiosity.

THE SERIOUS DRAMA.

Lawrence Irving writes in the "Fortnightly" on the plight of the serious drama. He says the English public is a sorry master to serve. Provincial theatres that have not yet been turned into music halls are mostly kept solvent by pantomimes and musical comedy. Mr. Galsworthy's "Strife" was a failure in the provinces, though it is utterly provincial. Gorki's "The Lowest Depths" ran for a year in Berlin. It was played twice in England. Other world-famous plays are prohibited by the censor. The writer says the only hope lies in concentrating in every town a permanent body of actors who only present plays of merit, and who maintain a personal bond between actor and audience. He does not believe much in a national theatre, which, he thinks, would soon sink into mediocrity. Cynicism and flippancy, he says, are the two worst enemies of serious art.

THE INFLUENCE OF LATIN POETRY.

The Romans had no imagination, and in a celebrated passage Virgil himself admits that they were not likely to be poets. Yet, as Professor Tyrrell shows in the "Nineteenth Century," our debt to Latin verses is by no means slight. But how far, asks the writer, can Latin literature be regarded as non-Hellenic. Much, indeed most, of it was frankly imitative. The comic poets are professedly Greek. Catullus is largely modelled on the Alexandrian school. Virgil is Homer in powder and patch, though he now and again attains a haunting melody all his own, while he has a Wordsworthian eye for natural beauty by no means Greek in the light behind it. No one disputes the Quintilian dictum, "Satira tota nostra est," but satire is not poetry. We owe much to Lucretius; but to Lucretius the Epicurean rather than to Lucretius the poet. Professor Tyrrell deals with Lucretius at some length, and is then led away into a little excursus on forgotten Latin poets, those whose mere name and local fame have come down to us, fate scattering with indifferent hand the laurel of triumph and the poppy of oblivion.

NAVAL ESTIMATES.

Lord Brassey emerges from obscurity to discuss the Naval Estimates in the "Nineteenth Century." He remarks that in aggregate expenditure we are not far below the two-power standard. In number of men we have a large excess. But in new construction we have not kept pace with Germany. Nevertheless, for the last decade we have spent nearly twice as much as that Power. Lord Brassey is not a great believer in Dreadnoughts; he thinks them far too open to the attack of the destroyer. One sensible point he makes is a protest against indiscriminate scrapping. Many ships that have been ruthlessly broken up would have been a god-send to colonial navies as training ships, and by no means negligible quantities in action. More particularly does this apply to cruisers, which have lately been scrapped wholesale.

THE SEAMY SIDE OF TRAVEL.

Sir Harry Johnston, in the "Nineteenth Century," assures us that travel is not undivided bliss. He speaks not of lions and jungles, but the harmless necessary trip to Paris. He is vicious in his denunciation of Charing Cross. Dover also arouses his indignation, for it has no proper shelter or refreshment rooms. The boat trains, of course, run straight to the pier, and you get only a fleeting glimpse of the subdued glories of the railway refreshment room. Marseilles is another place that arouses his ire—a dirty uninteresting town that will not connect its express trains with the boats for Algiers. As for ocean travel, Sir Harry's experiences have been most unfortunate. He shared a cabin with a dipsomaniac, a consumptive, and a man who never took his clothes off—and that was not the worst of his experiences. He naturally holds that it should be made illegal for a company to oblige persons to share their sleeping compartments. Worse things still befell him at Dublin, where a flea, coram populo, jumped into the marmalade. Germany, he says, has the best and cheapest travelling facilities. Finally, Sir Harry admits writing his article under the influence of a severe chill.

THE GERMAN NATIONAL IDEA.

F. M. Cutlack, in the "Contemporary," says that it is a fair complaint that the English do not know Germany. That is one main reason why they suspect her and are frightened of her growing power and prestige. But we ought to make allowances for the high spirits of modern Germany; energetic, bold, self-sufficient, and successful as she is. The national pride of Germany at this moment is like a shining morning face, and she does not creep like a snail, unwillingly to school. The author says that constant criticism of the German menace naturally makes the Germans talk big in reply—and that talk is more in the nature of an advertisement for triumphant German industrialism, than anything else. In the circumstances a good deal of self-conscious and flamboyant patriotism is inevitable, and must be discounted until it is no longer a source of misgiving to Little Englanders. But should it? Anyway the author is convinced that an Anglo-German exhibition would cement eternal friendship.

IN THE GARDEN.

THE FLAG IRIS.

Flag iris, flag flower, and fleur de lis are the popular names of Iris germanica, a beautiful flowering species indigenous to Central and Southern Europe. There are numerous elegant varieties of this robust-growing plant, some of the earlier raised ones having long been cultivated in Australian gardens. But the newer creations of the germanica group are not so well known to the general cultivator as their merits entitle them. They have been aptly described as the amateur gardener's orchids, so rich and varied are the colours in their curious and remarkably showy flowers. Many of the varieties have large blooms, displaying a wonderful combination of colour, some being delicately and beautifully pencilled in brilliant colours, while others are spotted, mottled, and blotched in a singularly effective manner. These hardy, easily cultivated herbaceous plants grow from 2ft to 3ft high or more, and as their flowering stems are rather taller than the foliage the blooms, which are produced in great profusion mostly in spring and early summer, are seen to great advantage. In the coast districts the season has arrived for planting flag irises, but in the cooler parts of the State July or August will be early enough. These plants thrive in a position well exposed to the sun, but sheltered from wind, and in almost any kind of well-drained, deeply and thoroughly worked, friable, good soil. If the ground where it is intended to grow these irises be poor, it should be made fertile, but not rich, with decomposed natural manure, leaf mould, or similar decayed vegetable matter, all thoroughly incorporated with the soil before the plants are set out. When planting the fleshy stems (rhizomes) should not be buried too deeply; indeed, they should be left only very lightly covered with soil, which should be made firm about their roots.

DAISY, POLYANTHUS, AND PRIMROSE.

It is the time to plant daisies, polyanthuses, and primroses in order to have them in flower in winter and early spring. There are many charming varieties of these hardy, easily-cultivated, perennial plants, and they thrive in deeply-worked, rich soil, and in almost any situation, though a fair amount of sunshine is necessary to ensure success. The beds or borders where these harbingers of spring are to grow should be prepared for their reception forthwith, if not already done. Last year's plants that have been resting in nursery rows during the summer will now be commencing to put forth new growth, and should be lifted, divided, and replanted in the positions where they are to flower. Daisies should be planted six inches and polyanthuses and primroses nine inches apart, to allow them room to grow into good flowering plants. If seedlings of any of these plants, raised from seed sown earlier in the season, are now sufficiently forward they may be transplanted at once to the positions where they are to flower. With ordinary care and attention such plants will flower freely in the ensuing late winter and early spring. Although all these plants do well in the cooler coast districts, they flower more profusely and for a longer period in the colder parts of the State.

NOTES.

Ipomoea versicolor, or, as it is sometimes called, Mina lobata, is now flowering very freely in several gardens. This is a luxuriant twining plant of annual duration, with handsome foliage and singularly attractive flowers borne on long stalks. At first the flowers are bright crimson, changing to orange, and then to creamy white. This plant is worth a good position in every garden where sufficient trellis work is available to support its twining stems. It is easily raised from seed sown in spring, and thrives in any good garden soil.

Dahlia imperialis, a very remarkable Mexican plant, is now flowering very freely. Under favourable conditions, it attains a height of 12ft or more, and produces large spreading branches, on which are disposed numerous drooping, bell-shaped, beautiful flower heads of a white and lilac colour, striped with bright red at the base. It does best in well-worked, deep, rich, rather sandy loam, but must be planted in a sheltered and sunny position to attain perfection.

Some of the early varieties of violet are now beginning to flower freely, and those that have been growing in the same bed or border for two or three consecutive years will, if the soil in which they are growing is not too rich, be much benefited by receiving an occasional watering of weak liquid manure. The result will be a larger and more continuous display of bloom. When applying the fertiliser to the roots care must be taken not to wet the foliage or the developing flowers.

GLASSHOUSE.

In the middle of bright, sunny, calm days a little shading may still be necessary, and the sashes should be opened a few inches to admit air, but be closed again very early in the afternoon to impound as much sun heat as possible without, however, allowing the temperature to range too high. The necessary watering and syringing should be done early in the day. On cold or cloudy days neither shading nor ventilation will be necessary, and water should only be given to those plants that are absolutely in need of it. The early flowering cinerarias, cyclamens, and primulas should now be placed in the lightest part of the structure, and if their pots are well filled with roots they should be given an occasional watering of weak liquid manure. Plants that are being grown for succession should, when sufficiently forward, be transferred to the pots in which they are to bloom. The winter-flowering begonias and gesnerias will be greatly benefited if they occasionally receive a little stimulant in the form of weak liquid manure. This will result in a greater display of flowers in the former and in the development of the handsome foliage of the latter. Wet days are favourable for cleaning with some reputable insecticide any insect-infected plants not in flower.

FRUIT GARDEN.

Strawberry runners that were selected and allowed to remain attached to the old plants after the crop was gathered will not be sufficiently strong and well rooted to bear transplanting to the positions where they are to bear fruit next season. When selecting a site for a new bed or plantation it is necessary that it should be an open one. Strawberries should never be planted near or among established fruit trees, for the latter will rob the land of its fertility, and the plants will not crop well when grown under shade or partial shade. Strawberry plants will grow well and yield abundant crops on a variety of soils, except very sandy ones, provided they are of good depth, and that an abundance of well-decomposed natural manure, or, failing that, a good dressing of some commercial fertiliser that is rich in potash, is thoroughly worked into them if they are not fertile. The heaviest crops and the best developed fruit, however, are produced on deep, rich, strong loam, overlying a well-drained clayey subsoil. Avoid close planting, for it often results in the fruit being small and the fruiting season a short one, and the plants become quickly exhausted, except where a good system of irrigation is possible. Where the plants have to depend upon the natural rainfall the best and largest crops of fruit are obtained from those that have plenty of room to grow. If strawberries are grown for home consumption only, a good plan is to set the plants 8in apart in beds 5ft wide, with shallow pathways, 1ft wide, between each bed, to facilitate the necessary cultivation and gathering the fruit when ripe. When planting, the greatest care must be taken not to cover the crown of the plant with soil, and the roots must be spread out evenly and set firmly in the earth. Under such conditions the plants will soon become established in their new positions.

Some excellent varieties of strawberries to grow are:—Annetta, a variety with large fruit, of a bright red colour, and delicious flavour; Aurie, a very early and constant cropper, fruit above medium size, of scarlet colour and good flavour; Creswell—this variety has large, long, bright glossy red fruit, and is suitable for the warm districts; Glenfield Beauty—the fruit of this variety, produced in bunches, is highly coloured, and has a rich flavour; Marguerite, a very prolific bearing variety, producing a large, elongated red fruit; Trollope's Victoria—this is an abundant cropper, having a light crimson-coloured fruit of a rich, aromatic flavour, and excellent for preserving.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Fairfield.—Your birds have chicken-pox, or what is more generally termed warts. It is a blood disease, and not attributable to the cause you mention. For every 10 or 12 birds mix a packet of Epsom salts in the morning meal. They should also be liberally supplied with green food. In each Saturday's issue of the "Herald" in the business column relating to poultry you will see a remedy advertised which is reliable and effective.

Baffled.—If in addition to the cough the fowls have a discharge from the eyes or nostrils with a disagreeable smell you are safe in assuming it is roup, and if without this symptom the fowls are what is known as "going light" or, in other words, have tuberculosis. Ducks frequently lose the use of their legs from various causes. At all times they should not be kept in the same run with poultry. You do not mention how your birds are kept, fed, or otherwise managed. The trouble may arise from improper feeding or housing, but with your vague particulars it is difficult to determine.

It should be distinctly known that all business matters in relation to poultry should be addressed to Messrs. John Fairfax and Sons. During the past three weeks, letters with enclosures and business announcements have been addressed to "Ancona," and in more than one instance the advertisements were obliged to be held over to a later date than was intended by the senders.

There is no better-known or more popular poultryman than Mr. J. Hadlington, manager of the Grantham Stud Poultry Farm. Mr. Hadlington judged on the Friday of last week at the Western Suburbs Show, and casually remarked about one of his sons being ill. Later, however, pleurisy set in, the patient, who was but 22 years of age, succumbing to it on the 1st instant. Mr. and Mrs. Hadlington have the sympathy of the entire poultry fraternity.

The hon. secretary of the Goulburn Poultry and Pigeon Society forwards the schedule for the seventh annual show, which will take place on the 26th of the present month. All the breeds are provided for, and the prize money is on a scale so liberal that those who win should be amply repaid for their outlay. Sydney and suburban breeders usually respond well to Goulburn, and it is believed the forthcoming show will again command a big outside entry.

As mentioned in last week's notes, the Western Suburbs show was one of the best held by that society. Orpingtons, Wyandottes, Leghorns, Plymouth Rocks, and Minorcas formed the bulk of the exhibits, and in every class the quality of these was of the best. With a guessing competition, and a gift class provided by many well-wishers of the society, the financial ends should, as expected by the secretary, be in favour of a continuance of the good work of the society.

Apart from the Royal and Sydney suburbs shows, Bathurst, for poultry, comes next, and while suburban fanciers did not exhibit so largely as formerly, the support accorded, and interest in the winnings, still continues. At the late show many of our best breeders exhibited, all participating in one or other of the first prizes. Messrs. Pitt, Thornton, Pollard, and Power monopolised the firsts in the respective classes of Orpingtons; Hemsworth, Jones, Wood, Hicks, Power, and Pollard doing most of the winning in Wyandottes.

The title "champion" in a poultry show is often a vague title, much less an honour, seeing that in many shows almost every first-prize winner is placarded to that extent. The Royal Agricultural Society is no exception, the first prize blue card in many instances being for some reason supplemented with an additional one of champion. What the judges' instructions are in regard to what constitutes a champion is not generally known, but in some shows the champion Leghorn is the best of all the first-prize winners in the respective classes and sexes. In others it means the best of the sex; while in not a few shows every first prize bird has, if not the honour, at least a card on which the word champion is printed. The Royal Agricultural Society's poultry show is overwhelmingly the best in Australia, and can afford to be strict in the distribution of what are known as champion cards. In relation to Leghorns, of which there were about 16 classes, rather than a champion card given to each class, it should be for the best of the 16 first-prize winners. When this becomes the definition, champion, to those who secure it, will have both intrinsic and honorary value.

It is said bad reading means bad rehearsing, and in regard to a paragraph in this column two weeks ago, both have been at fault. It was shown that this State was far ahead of all others in the Commonwealth in regard to big poultry plants, and the financial results accruing from them. It was also remarked that despite the low price of eggs in South Australia, a two-acre poultry plant was being established there, and described in that State as the most extensive privately-owned poultry plant in Australia. The manager of a big poultry farm takes exception to the remark "the largest privately-owned poultry plant," claiming that he was in charge of such a place, and that it was in this State. It is simply a matter of faulty reading. The whole paragraph was to the end of plainly showing that the poultry farms here were ahead of anything in the other States, the correspondent missing the point that the South Australian poultry expert had designed this spacious two-acre farm, and the Minister for Agriculture honoured the opening of it with his presence. Plainly the point was, there are scores of privately-owned poultry farms in this State a dozen times the dimension of the one referred to, with no ministerial patronage, but actual well-paying concerns, rather than prospective prosperity.

The lecturer in chemistry at the Hawkesbury College, Mr. Cuthbert Potts, in a late lecture to the students on the feeding of poultry, said some people have good results from an exclusive diet of wheat, and others from maize, but the best food given in the best way pays every time, and the best in the best way was soft or mash in the morning, and a grain diet at night. Some Americans had opposite ideas, but the tests at the college were convincing that the soft food was best. The birds, after a long fast during the night, come off the roost with an empty crop, and require an easily assimilated food to appease the hunger, and keen healthy appetite. On the other hand, the birds going to roost in the long nights, and, particularly in cold weather, require hard grain, slow of digestion, and containing a greater concentration of fats. Most poultry men, the lecturer continued, used about two parts of pollard to one of bran, but the experience at the college was, that owing to the laxative nature of the bran, rather less than the above quantity was required. Of all the cultivated grains, wheat and maize were best, and while a variety might be judicious, wheat will always be used in wheat districts, and maize in localities suitable for its cultivation. Mr. Potts said meat was of next importance, this being in lieu of the insects, etc., which the birds secure under natural conditions. Bullock's livers are far and away the cheapest form of meat food, and the best for laying hens, being easily mixed in any food. The lecturer concluded by saying that in regard to meat-feeding, we are convinced it is absolutely necessary for heavy egg production. The above simple formula has been in use by practical poultry men for ages, and it is well to have its confirmation by a master of science.

Mr. Kuhne, one of the several poultry experts attached to the Department of Agriculture in South Australia, was in Sydney during show time, and visited several of the large suburban poultry farms, and also the salerooms where poultry products are disposed of. Mr. Kuhne had previously heard about our 2/3 per dozen for eggs, but realised it better when he actually saw them fetching that figure by public auction. The visitor got an additional surprise when the proprietor of but a moderate-sized poultry farm in Rockdale showed him his egg account sales for the previous Friday, which was £8 15s for the week. Mr. Kuhne was the officer in charge of the egg-laying competition at Kybybolite, in the south-east portion of South Australia, the only record made being that of the poorest laying at any of the Australian competitions, cold winds and wet weather being, it is stated, the contributing causes.

The United States of America, according to the latest census, has a population of over 90 millions. With such a number to cater for, it can readily be understood that any popular paper would have a great circulation. None were, however, prepared for a one and a half million readers for a poultry paper. This is the number the business manager credits to one journal, and to his own satisfaction figures it out as follows:—A lady reader wrote the following, and he based his calculation on the ground that every subscriber had the same experience. Here is her contribution:—"I think the January journal is fine. After our family had read it I gave it to Mrs. S., my near neighbour, and after they finished with it she sent it to friends in Ireland (farmers), who, when they are through reading it, will send it to sons and grandsons in Australia." In the first family there were six readers, in the second at least four, in Ireland not less than 10 readers, and in Australia there will doubtless be as many more.

THE CHURCHES.

In connection with the Coronation, the Primate is arranging for special services in the Cathedral and the parish churches of the diocese. The clergy have received intimation that the registry will cable for extra copies of the adapted form of the Coronation service that will be held in England on receipt of orders from parishes.

At the 55th annual meeting of the Church Society (Home Mission Fund), to be held on the 23rd inst., in the Town Hall, some good speeches may be expected, the list of those who are to deliver addresses including the Archbishop of Sydney, Bishop of Goulburn, his Excellency Vice-Admiral King-Hall, the Acting Prime Minister (Mr. W. M. Hughes), and the Rev. W. L. Langley, of Newtown. Sir William Cullen will preside.

Archbishop Wright's engagements this month include Castle Hill, confirmation, on the 10th; Jamberoo and Shellharbour, on the 14th; Newnes, on the 17th and 18th; St. Mary's, Waverley, on the 21st (morning); Hunter's Hill, on the 28th (morning); and St. Saviour's, Redfern, on the 31st.

The Anglican Cathedral collections on Easter Day were given to the new bishopscourt. Before his sermon, the Archbishop pointed out that he was able to plead for this object, since the residence to be provided was not so much for himself as for the Archbishops of Sydney in their long succession. He announced that the committee had begun the work, but had wisely determined not to go beyond money in hand or promised. It was therefore, important that churchmen should waste no time in raising the £900 yet required, inasmuch as it would never do for Melbourne churchmen, who possess a very completely-fitted bishopscourt, to be able to twit the churchmen of Sydney with only being able to afford wire-fencing and slip-rails for the residence of their Archbishop. Several small sums have been received during the current month, and an effort is being made to bring the amount to a successful close as soon as possible.

At the monthly meeting of the St. Stephen's Willoughby branch of the Church of England Men's Society, a discussion took place upon the question of a free and open church as opposed to the present system of a portion of the church reserved. The general opinion of the meeting seemed to be in favour of the abolition of pew rents, which, it was pointed out, were frequently in many parishes a source of irritation to many good church people, were a very poor means of raising revenue, implied reserving the majority of the church for a minority of the parishioners, and were directly contrary to Christian teaching. No resolution was come to, but it was decided that the matter should be further considered.

Archbishop Wright and Archdeacon Gunther both referred, at the meeting at Parramatta, to the excellence of America's Sunday school buildings. The Archbishop said they were in advance of England in that respect, and he regarded the Parramatta building as a model for the diocese. The design was excellent. The Archdeacon, when referring to the value of religious education, stated that the old schools and colleges of England had a religious foundation, and also that at Oxford provision was made in all the statutes of the colleges for poor scholars.

On Friday night the annual reunion of the Girls' Mission Band, in connection with the C.M.A., was held at St. Barnabas' School. The girls are supporting a mission in German East Africa. There are about 400 members. The Rev. Mr. Brewer gave a lecture on Uganda, illustrated by lantern slides.

On Monday evening last a gathering of the parishioners of St. Thomas' Church of England, Enfield, was held in the school room, to bid farewell to the Rev. F. and Mrs. Elder and family, who are about to take up work at St. Michael's, Surry Hills. Mr. W. Wines, who presided, expressed the appreciation and effectionate esteem in which the departing rector and his wife were held, and handed Mr. Elder a purse containing 40 sovereigns subscribed by the parishioners. Other presentations from the different organisations were made at the same time. Mrs. Elder was also the recipient at the hands of Mesdames Wilkinson and Goodchap, of several handsome gifts from parish institutions. The Rev. A. C. Mosley, of Moss Vale, will be inducted by Canon Boyce into the charge of the parish on Wednesday evening.

The Rev. R. H. and Mrs. Pitt-Owen were the recipients of many presents at a social gathering, at St. John's, Bishopthorpe parish hall on Monday evening, on the eve of their departure for the South Coast. Among the gifts were a purse of sovereigns, from the parishioners, a handsome bag, from the children, and a silver pocket communion set from the young men of the parish.

The Rev. R. Stephen, the new superintendent of the Leichhardt C.M.M., was publicly welcomed at a large gathering in the Central Hall on Wednesday evening. Mr. C. Stratford, circuit steward, occupied the chair. Addresses of welcome were given by Mr. H. E. Shaw (senior steward), and representatives of different departments of mission activities. The sister Churches of the district were represent by the Rev. Messrs. Begbie (C. of E.), Hoskin (Cong.), and Pike (Baptist). The Rev. P. J. Stephen and F. W. Hynes also delivered congratulatory addresses. Mr. Stephen briefly returned thanks for the welcome extended, and also for the pledges of loyal co-operation and support from the officers of the mission.

Mr. Elder was inducted to St. Michael's on Friday night by Archdeacon D'Arcy Irvine. He succeeds Rev. C. Hughesdon, who has gone to Berrima cum Moss Vale.

The Rev. S. H. Denman, of the Church Missionary Association, leaves to-day for the Clarence River district for a fortnight's deputation work. The deputation is preparatory to a missionary exhibition, which is to be held in Grafton on May 17, 18, and 19.

To-morrow afternoon Cardinal Moran will open the Presentation Nun's Convent, at Domremy, Haberfield.

The conference of the clergy of the Roman Catholic Church takes place on the 17th inst., at St. Mary's.

The 46th annual session of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Australia in New South Wales, will be opened at St. Stephen's, Phillip-street, on Tuesday next. The Moderator (the Rev. R. Jackson, M.A.), will preach the opening sermon.

Three memorial stones were laid in the building now in course of erection for a new Baptist Church at Granville by Mrs. W. Buckingham, and Revs. J. Barker (president of the Baptist Union of New South Wales) and C. T. Way (minister of the church) respectively. There was a large gathering, over which Mr. Wm. Ardill (vice-president of the Baptist Union) presided. Addresses were delivered by Revs. J. Barker, Way, and A. J. Waldock. The church, which will be a brick one, is estimated to cost £1100. The site is at the intersection of South and William streets, and the land was given as a present to the church by the Rev. C. T. Way and Mrs. Way. Mr. W. Allen, of Burwood, is architect and builder.

The work in connection with the alterations to the Sydney Great Synagogue, which will provide considerable additional seating accommodation in the ladies' gallery, has been commenced. Nearly 40 additional seats will be available. They will be situated in the space now occupied by the choir, directly facing the Ark. The choir will be accommodated in a new gallery built over the present minister's robing-room, and entered through the upper schoolroom. The gallery, which will be slightly higher than the front of the general gallery, will be behind the top of the Ark in a corresponding position to the choir gallery in the new West End and Hampstead synagogues, London, and many continental synagogues.

The secretary of the Christian Literature Society for India, the Rev. J. Passmore, is now in Australia for the purpose of getting a young man, supported by Australians, to go back to India to assist him in South India and Ceylon. The work is rapidly increasing, and the demands for literature of various kinds are so great that it is impossible to meet them without greatly increasing the resources.

His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor has consented to preside at the Y.M.C.A. annual festival on June 8, at the Town Hall. The chief speakers on the occasion will be Rev. W. Sweyn Macqueen and Mr. W. Gillanders, B.A., general secretary-elect.

SELF-REDUCING CORSETS.

A MISNOMER.

To say that any Corset is "self-reducing" is an absurdity. The simple fact is that there never has been and never will be invented a corset capable of reducing the figure ever so slightly. What is worse is, that when the fat is there the best corset in the world only serves to throw it into greater prominence.

What fat folk require is to actually remove the fat already formed, and to prevent more fat accumulating. No Corset can do this. But Formettes, a pleasant vegetable tablet, will. They are the only known, tested, and approved remedy for reducing fatness. They remove excess fat easily, quickly, and permanently, without causing a wrinkle or having the slightest injurious effects on the health. No person can afford to be fat, for stout people not only look older than they really are, but have a coarser aspect than slim people. Formettes strengthen the whole system, increase the appetite, and allow you to enjoy your meals. No dieting or exercising necessary when they are taken, and not only do they reduce weight, but will be found to be a splendid remedy for dyspepsia, sick headaches, and stomach troubles, besides rendering breathing easy, and banishing palpitation of the heart. Formettes are sold at 5/3 (fortnight's supply) by all chemists in the Commonwealth, or obtainable direct from S. H. Henshall, Chemist, 246 Clarendon-street, South Melbourne. Stocks held by Anthony Hordern and Sons, Patterson Bros., and Washington Soul, Chemists. Elliott Bros., Wholesale.—Advt.

USE OF EXPLOSIVES.

LAXITY OF CONTROL.

RAILWAY WORKERS' GRIEVANCES.

A deputation representing the "Railway Workers and General Labourers' Association of New South Wales," waited upon the Acting Treasurer (Mr. Carmichael) yesterday, and was introduced by Mr. Stuart Robertson, M.L.A., who said that its object was to bring under the notice of the Minister the number of fatal accidents that had occurred, owing to the alleged bad manner in which explosives were used on the public roads of the State. The association had an enrolment of about 4000 members.

Mr. O'Sullivan (secretary of the association) handed the Minister a list of 25 persons who had been either killed or injured on railway construction works by powder accidents during the past three years. The latest fatality was that at Wyee, but as it was the subject of further proceedings, he would not refer to it further. The deputation asked: "That powder monkeys should hold certificates of competency; that a stipulated length of fuse should be used when building and firing holes; that when batteries were used to explode charges, a primer should be inserted along with the electric delineator, to be used in cases of misfire; that magazines should be built a safe distance from cuttings, and kept securely locked; that a proper equipment for loading holes be supplied to powder monkeys; that no one be allowed to approach cuttings after firing until the expiration of 10 minutes in the case of misfire; that an inspector be appointed to see that the regulations were observed on all railway works; that regulations be drafted dealing with the carriage of explosives on railways; and that it be made an indictable offence to use improper implements when engaged on explosive works. He pointed out that so far as powder monkeys were concerned, anyone possessing a rudimentary knowledge only, could obtain the job. Powder monkeys should be required to pass some qualifying test, as in their hands were the lives of many men. When firing with a battery one hole out of four usually misfired, and it had given rise to numerous accidents. At Myee the magazine was undoubtedly too close to the cutting, therefore provision should be made so that they occupied a site further away. He contended that the drilled holes should not be closer than three feet, and that a reasonable time should elapse after misfire before the hole should be visited. If these safeguards were adopted, and the Act amended, or new regulations drafted, many accidents would be prevented.

Mr. Jas. Dick said that explosives of a dangerous character were often found lying about. Recently on the third section of the north coast railway works there was an old camp, in which was found 25 plugs of gelignite, and several caps. In fact, a child was found chewing a detonator.

Mr. Carmichael said, in reply, that some of the matters mentioned were very serious—it was terrible to think that twenty-five serious accidents had happened among such a limited number of men, in three years. With regard to powder monkeys, he would have the matter investigated to see if an amendment of the Act were necessary, or whether it could not be dealt with by regulation. A large number of the grievances could be dealt with, he thought, by regulation. With reference to the storage of explosives, there appeared to be an extraordinary laxity. Mr. Williams, who controls the department, had told him that there was no power under the Act for inspection in the use of explosives. It was a matter that would have to be attended to. It was a serious thing that a child should be found chewing one of the detonators, and that such dangerous things should lie scattered about. He would have the matter looked into at once. He thought all the other matters mentioned could be remedied by regulations, and he undertook to bring the matter under the notice of his colleague, Mr. Griffith, and the Chief Railway Commissioner, and see if the wishes of the deputation could be given effect to.

THE ROUND TABLE.

The second issue of the new Imperial quarterly, "The Round Table," confirms our previous impression that it is likely to combine a good deal of didacticism with useful and informing work. Some of the articles in this number reach a very high level. The opening contribution on the Anglo-Japanese Alliance discusses that problem in all its bearings, and is particularly well informed as to the colonial point of view. The question cuts itself down to two points. The first is that Japan cannot afford to be without allies, and if we denounce the alliance Germany will take it up—which means a redistribution of the factors in Imperial defence. The second is that the policy of a "white Empire" which the Dominions defend so keenly, touches Japan on the raw. The writer brings these apparently irreconcilable aspects of the problem clearly into focus. The article on British Politics suffers from its determination not to take sides, and is rather invertebrate in consequence. The writer escapes from his dilemma by insisting on the ultimate necessity of divorce between local and Imperial affairs; but he makes no suggestion as to how the House of Commons is to be superseded. The best colonial article is that on Canadian affairs, which is very full, thorough, and systematic. The Australian article is very disappointing. It is too meagre and too general in treatment to be of any value in elucidating the political position for those at a distance, and it gives a quite untrue representation of the attitude of the bulk of the population towards the Labour party. The gross excesses of that party are carefully toned down, and the somewhat stale aphorism that we are all socialists nowadays is insidiously insisted on. The account of South African politics is much more instructive, and is of special interest in view of the many problems, here clearly expressed, that the Union Parliament has to face. The concluding article on New Zealand is quite amateurish in treatment. The trail of an ill-defined Imperial Federation seems to run over most of the contributors, but, as a whole, the Review is well worth while.

THE PROTESTANT C. OF E. UNION AND VESTMENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—One does not wish to begrudge the members and friends of the P.C.E.U. their apparent triumph in the matter of the suspension of the use of the proper Eucharistic vestments in Sydney, nor their right to "crow" over the supporters of what they consider a defeated cause. It is a very cheap and safe triumph to "mob the minority, and then to strut heroically when all the breath is supposed to be gone out of it." But the cause is not lost, and we are not going (as the chairman piously hoped) "to say goodbye to the (proper) Mass vestments in Sydney altogether." It is easy to see how precarious the ground gained is felt to be from the frank avowal of the necessity (from the P.C.E.U. point of view) for petitioning the King for a "proper Prayer Book"! Further evidence is surely not needed that the Prayer Book as we have it, to which our priests are bound, gives the case away to the "law-breakers" and "Romanisers," as we are politely dubbed by the P.C.E.U., and that the alleged victory is one of "might," which is proverbially not always synonymous with "right." As a matter of fact, the happenings in the diocese of Sydney during the last year or so have led to a large increase in the number of churches in Australia using the vestments, and Sydney has simply succeeded in isolating itself more and more from the life and genius of the Church of England, not only in the Commonwealth, but throughout the world.

We do not desire to discuss or criticise the Archbishop, but if his only title to "glory" is that he has succeeded in less than two years in distressing and harassing the united and devoted congregations of the two best worked city churches in the diocese without any apparent advantage in any single particular, then it is a "glory" that most men will be quite willing to forgo. The effect of what has been done has been to intensify party feeling a hundred-fold, and to make the diocese of Sydney still further a byword throughout the Anglican communion. And all for what can, after all, be only a temporary party triumph of intolerance and prejudice.

The aim of the Church Defence League is by all legitimate means to seek to overcome prejudice and remove ignorance; and its plans are being carefully laid for an active campaign for this purpose. Without any special claim to be called a high churchman, any man may stand for fair play; and to the neutrals, as well as to all unbiassed churchmen interested in the welfare of the Church in this free Commonwealth, one way of helping on a wider vision and a larger charity in the life of the Church is thus presented, and it is hoped that many such will enrol themselves as members of the league and help forward its work.

To quote the words of a wise priest of our Church some four years ago, "high churchmen, and those who sympathise with them, have submitted patiently for many years to description as Romanisers, Jesuits, conspirators, perjurers, and generally lawless persons, and it is not for their good, for the good of their assailants, or for the good of the Church, that this shall go on for ever. Peace may be bought at too high a price. Even St. Paul found an unjust blow on the face a bit too much for his patience, though it was by order of the high priest. I need not quote his words on the occasion, but commend them for a study to all concerned."

I am, etc., C. F. HAWLEY.
President Church Defence League.

ODOL CHEMICAL WORKS LONDON S.E.

Wherever civilization has penetrated Odol has remained, incomparable, inimitable, irresistible. The use of this famous liquid dentifrice means sound, clean teeth firmly fixed in hard, healthy gums. Odol, and Odol alone, possesses the remarkable power of impregnating the entire mucous membrane of the mouth, leaving a microscopically thin but thoroughly effective antiseptic coating, which maintains its protective influence for hours after the mouth has been rinsed with it.

It is the feeling of absolute and unassailable purity of the mouth, teeth and throat that makes Odol users so loyal to, and so enthusiastic about, this unique dentifrice and mouth-wash.

It is to be hoped that with the invention of Odol the proper care of the mouth may become as general as the universal habit of washing the face and hands.

It should be borne in mind by purchasers that the full-size flask at 2/6 is more advantageous to them than the half-size flask at 1/6, as it will last TWICE as long.

WINCARNIS

THE WORLD'S GREATEST TONIC WINE.

The glorious blessing of lasting robust health is not vouchsafed to all in these days of strenuous work and endeavour; and even those who can afford to follow a life of pleasure are liable to become fatigued and below par, losing appetite, energy, brain-activeness, nerve-balance.

WINCARNIS
Coleman & Co Ltd NORWICH

To the workers and the pleasure-seekers alike, Wincarnis, the matchless brain and nerve tonic, comes as a priceless boon when they are "run down" and "tired to death." Wincarnis is nourishment, nerve food, stimulant, and tonic in one, and the taste of it is delightful. It restores appetite, and is truly beneficial to the digestive and assimilative processes. In convalescence it is simply wonderful in its action; with every wineglassful there comes a grateful, glowing feeling of renewed vitality.

Wincarnis makes rich, red blood, and with the recovery of organic activity sends the revitalising stream pulsing through the arteries to restore the tissues wasted by fatigue or illness. Brain power and nerve force are renewed in full measure, and the healthy glow in the cheeks and the light, alert step proclaim the vigour-restoring work of Wincarnis accomplished.

WINCARNIS

Used in Hospitals and Nursing Homes everywhere. Over 10,000 Doctors recommend it. Try it to-day. Wincarnis is sold by all Wine Merchants, Licensed Chemists, and Grocers.

THE BEEF TRUST.

After what has been heard of the operations of the Beef Trust in America and in Great Britain, and a knowledge of the manner in which it has squeezed both producer and consumer, it is a surprise to find some pastoralists in Australia advocating that the trust should be welcomed with open arms. Why? Merely because it is believed that the pastoralists will get a little more for their stock. Even if this were likely to be the case, we are to understand from past experience that this would only be done for a time, and until the trust had the strings so far within its own control that it would not longer be liable to interference. Then would follow the policy of squeeze all round, and in this little procedure the pastoralist would get as much hurt as the consumer—perhaps more, because the consumer can please himself whether he consumes beef or not.

This advocacy of the trust's appearance comes not from the obscure pastoralists or graziers, but from some of the largest stock operators in Australia. It is not necessary here to mention names, except so far as these men have publicly advocated the course outlined. One of these is Mr. A. J. Cotton, a big buyer of stock—he has just bought 8000 head of female cattle on Inkerman station, Northern Queensland, which is going under closer settlement—a man who has travelled much in Australia and in other lands. "I can't see what we have to be afraid of," he said, recently. "Personally, I would be pleased to see such firms as Swift and Armour established here. It would be a benefit to the producer, and no harm to the consumer. They would introduce up-to-date methods, and open up channels of trade not touched by us now. Look what the establishment of the American meat companies has done for Argentine. They have raised the price of cattle to the producer by about £2 per head. The American companies, in any case, could not make a monopoly here, for the State controls the means of transport. The conditions are altogether different to America. If they came you would find that they would tap the Northern Territory, where there are thousands of cattle with very little chance of markets, and room for thousands more. I believe it would benefit Australia generally, as they would open up producing centres now lying dormant. The day the American combine arrives here the pastoralist should be very thankful. We have not sufficient competition in Australia generally—I am not speaking of just a particular portion of the Commonwealth. We have not sufficient works to deal with all our products."

As against this argument one need only quote from the "Buenos Ayres Herald," which, in dealing with the manner in which the American trust was swamping the London market, and temporarily paying good prices in Argentine to undermine the English companies which had refused to sell shares to the Americans, said: "The outlook is grave for both the English consumers and the Argentine producers. Both are gaining at the moment, but are being allowed to do on the principle that 'Give a man sufficient rope and he will hang himself.'" In other words, the combine was endeavouring to reduce the profits of the English companies by selling cheap goods in London and the provinces, and at the same time an attempt was being made to get the Argentine producers dissatisfied by giving them higher prices than the English companies could afford to pay. This may explain where Mr. Cotton got his £2 per head. Then, as to whether it is likely to be without harm to the consumer, one need only recall the strike against the consumption of meat in the United States about a year ago owing to the exorbitant charges by the various units of the trust.

In a land of such plenty as Australia, consumers in cities have to pay quite enough for beef as it is without any further squeezing from a foreign combination of great wealth. The trust is said to have collected from American consumers last year just under 200 millions pounds in English money. Australian meat eaters would have a poor show once the trust got in its fine work, Mr. Cotton, notwithstanding. It is said the Americans would introduce up-to-date methods. There is nothing to prevent this being done by Australian companies already operating in the Commonwealth. In fact, many of them are doing so. Most of the works have been in operation for a considerable time; since they had to pass through the drought period there has been no encouragement for them to launch out until last few years. Most of the works are now being properly equipped, and they will soon compare favourably with anything to be seen in America—north or south. There are some of the works already which are not behind American works.

It is not at all conclusion to say that the trust would be powerless for evil in Australia because the States control the means of transit. That is only true so far as internal carriage is concerned. There would be nothing to prevent the trust getting possession of all the cold storage space on the steamers leaving Australia—anything is possible with a combine controlling millions of pounds of capital, and with men not altogether scrupulous about business methods. Where then would the other works stand when they wanted to export produce? And after all it must be remembered that any capital earned would not be distributed in Australia but mainly, at least, to people in America. Perhaps, some money would be welcomed for developing the Northern Territory; but here, again, it must be remembered that steps are now being taken by the Federal Government to deal with that neglected territory on different lines, and as it is opened up there may be more inducement to people to invest their money. The construction of the Transcontinental line will, at any rate, give a market for such stock as may be raised in the Territory, even if in the natural order of things works are not established in that region.

The fact is that Mr. Cotton has probably some complaint to urge against the existing meat companies. Some such dissatisfaction was expressed in the northern State last year, and a serious proposal was put forward for the establishment of new meat works. The pastoralists, however, were not sufficiently united to take the matter in hand, and it dropped. The substitution of American companies for concerns called into existence with local capital, with local men at the head, and with local aspirations, is a very dangerous one. If the pastoralists are not satisfied with what the Australian companies offer them there should be some way out of the difficulty rather than the way suggested by Mr. Cotton. The remedy should lie in effective co-operation amongst stockowners, with the object of establishing country meat and chilling works.

THE WOOL TRADE.

STRONG SUPPLY POSITION.

With important offerings in Brisbane, and practically only local scoureds available in Sydney, business during the week locally has been within very moderate dimensions. Next week, however, the Sydney selling houses will be cataloguing some 16,500 bales, and a brisk market is anticipated. The skin-wools of good length offering for sale have been in strong demand at firm rates, but the short and inferior have been dull. A smaller proportion of short-woolled sheep have been marketed this week, giving promise of a larger proportion of good length skin-wools than of late.

The outlook for wools of combing length at the present time is exceedingly bright. Ten months of the 1910-11 statistical wool year have passed, and the "enormous" increase in the exports from Australasia that British wool-users were "warned" against, cannot be found, even by the aid of the most powerful microscope. The table of exports, compiled by Dalgety and Co., Ltd., for the 10 months ended April 30 last, show a net increase of only 634 bales; and as there is no wool stored away anywhere, the figures show practically that there has been no increase in the 1910-11 clip over that of the previous year.

It was not evident in September last that there would practically be any increase, but it was abundantly clear that there would not be the tremendous increase so glibly talked of by English wool writers. Men on the other side, doubtless familiar enough with the English wool business, persistently wrote of a 200,000 to a 500,000 bales increase this season, and thus managed to turn the scale of values against Australian wool growers till near the close of the weekly selling season. Wool receipts and wool shipments then began to reveal the true state of affairs; and as manufacturers found trade still healthy in the United Kingdom and on the Continent, they knew that they had to come in and buy on a firming market, or be left and confronted later with less complaisant sellers. The table of exports referred to is as follows:—

	1910-11. Bales.	1909-10. Bales.	Incr. Bales.	Decr. Bales.
New South Wales	875,786	879,227	—	3,441
Victoria	494,917	494,730	187	—
South Australia	173,728	159,846	13,882	—
Queensland	200,295	194,550	5,745	—
Western Australia	72,092	62,000	10,092	—
Tasmania	19,818	17,304	2,514	—
Commonwealth	1,836,636	1,807,657	28,979
New Zealand	449,407	477,752		28,345
Australasia	2,286,043	2,285,409	634

Net increase, 634 bales.

THE BRISBANE SALES.

With that supply position in view, buyers assembled in Brisbane this week in force, when some 34,000 bales were catalogued. On the opening day five catalogues aggregated some 15,988 bales, and, according to Brisbane reports, the offerings came from all the principal wool-growing districts of the State, and formed an attractive selection for the time of the year. It seems that a number of the clips were light, owing to heavy rains early in the year, and it was, again, noticeable that a considerable quantity was discoloured. For greasy wool competition was exceedingly keen, particularly by the Yorkshire section, who were well supported by the Continental buyers for the finer class of wools. Prices for all greasy were from 5 to 7½ per cent. higher than the March rulings. Scoured wools did not show any improvement, and the selection of these was not very good. The highest price for greasy was 14d for 19 bales, Umbercollie, and 22½d for 14 bales scoured, marked Eulolo. All the best features of the opening day were reproduced on Wednesday; the offerings were representative of some noted central district clips, including the well-known GF wools. The wools generally were well-grown, and in nice condition, a considerable proportion, however, was canary stained. Continental buyers were keen, and Yorkshire had to be alert. The advance of the previous day was well maintained; all classes of greasy selling exceptionally well; odd lots showing fine quality experienced an even greater rise. Medium greasy fleece showed he full extent of the advance, also all good broken, and pieces. Good lambs also sold well. Faulty second pieces, stained pieces, and locks were about on a par with March prices. Scoured wools were very firm at the best of March rates, some lines, well got up, showing a slight advance. The highest price for greasy was 14d for 6 bales GF/Peak Downs, of the Fairbairn Pastoral Company; and for scoured 23½d for 31 bales, ML/Mexico. On the closing day, 8563 bales were catalogued, including a good display of scoureds. Values being reported at an average rise of 5 to 7½ per cent. above March levels for greasy, and firm for scoureds.

THE AMERICAN WOOL TARIFF.

One of the best items of wool news was the cable this week stating that, although the Democrats in the United States House of Representatives are divided as to the advisableness of putting raw wool on the free list, a majority of the committee is in favour of no tax on wool. This, however, seems to be too drastic for those on the tariff wall, they having sufficient power in the House to block such a proposal. The proposed way out seems to be by a 50 per cent. reduction for the first year, or a tariff of 6 cents per pound, with 1 per cent. reduction yearly until 1916, when wool would become free. The Ways and Means Committee commences the revision of the wool schedule in the House on Monday next. When settled, the United States wool trade will doubtless move on sounder lines; and if even the modus vivendi of a reduction, as stated in the cable, is found, that will improve matters very considerably for American wool users as well as Australian wool-growers. All American wool reports for a long while have shown that trade in worsteds and woollens has been uncertain owing to the political aspect of the wool question. On March 18 last the Boston "Commercial Bulletin," summarising the position at that time, said that there seemed to be a disposition on the part of many buyers to await the opening sessions of Congress, in order, if that be possible, to get a line on what is likely to be accomplished on tariff matters. So far as wool is concerned, it is probable that the effect of any reasonable tariff reduction has been more or less discounted in the reduced prices, but unfortunately the wool market does not suffer alone nor directly from the uncertainty in the proposition of tariff revision and the New York goods market is holding up the manufacturers primarily. With one or two exceptions, the "woollen" mills are in a maze of uncertainty, according to the statement of a prominent dealer, who interviewed during the past week some of the most important of the woollen manufacturers in every section of New England, and who stated that in every case he found a distinct reluctance on the part of these manufacturers to even make a firm bid on offerings that would be within the range of possible 'dicker.'"

RAW WOOL AND MANUFACTURERS.

A fortnight later the American "Wool and Cotton Reporter," trying to size matters up, seemed to think that a lowering of the tariff on raw wool was all right, but that the manufactured article was a factor to be reckoned with; saying: "Woollen men continue to talk volumes about the tariff, and the belief is now strong that the Democrats will try something very radical, though, as a matter of fact, few are anticipating anything so drastic as free-trade measures. As stated last week, some still believe that, owing to the reported statement of the President that he would wait until the tariff commission had had a chance to report, there is little fear of any change in the tariff until December. It is a well-known fact, however, that President Taft is not in favour of all parts of Schedule K, and on account of this some believe that he perhaps would be in favour of some measure which would not be too radical. The wool men, as a matter of fact, however, do not appear to fear a cut in the tariff on wool itself so much as they fear a reduction in the manufactured product, for wool on its present basis can stand a reduction in the tariff, whereas were anything radical to be done with the schedule on the manufactured product, the competition which would be developed with the foreign manufacturers might bring about much idle machinery in this country, and this, of course, would result in a relatively stagnated condition in the wool market."

NEXT SYDNEY AUCTIONS.

On Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday next the 12 firms of selling brokers will submit catalogues aggregating about 16,250 bales. The selection will be fairly attractive for the time of the year in both greasy and scoured; there will be some lines from Queensland, and a number of autumn shorn clips from the north-west and west of this State, which should open out in nice order—as well as a fair proportion of crutchings and station oddments. The roster of sales for large lots is as follows:—

Tuesday, May 9.—(1) Co-operative Wool and Produce Company, Ltd.; (2) Australian Mercantile, Land, and Finance Company, Ltd.; (3) Winchcombe, Carson, Ltd.

Wednesday, May 10.—(1) Hill, Clark, and Co., Ltd.; (2) Pitt, Son, and Badgery, Ltd.; (3) New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Company, Ltd.; (4) John Bridge and Co., Ltd.

Thursday, May 11.—(1) Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Ltd.; (2) Goldsbrough, Mort, and Co., Ltd.; (3) Schute, Bell, and Co., Ltd.; (4) Pastoral Finance Association, Ltd.; (5) Dalgety and Co., Ltd.

Included in the brands to be offered are the following:—

Greasy: Bogamildi, Keelendi, Kinimo; Kooroogama/RR conj., K and S/Weelamurra, DD/Lisgar, GJ/Muttabun, AEH/Austin, C rev D rev/half circle, Glentowan/LJH, JMcR/Ardlair—New England, New Park, M/Binneguy, JG/Welfare, ANS/Balurang, J Peacock/Warrigan, DF/Sekurboo, CHK/Frankston/Collarenebri, AAB/Malvern, S Angle Nemingha, M McL Clyde, GC/Lily View, B rev B conj/Brindley Park, Bonanga/Moree, half-circle/WW, Wilgar Downs (Nyngan), Cannonbar (Nyngan), HG/Gragin (Warialda), CY/Downs (Moree), JH/Willowglen (Moree), B and M Huntley (Clermont, Q.), Peisdenois (Wee Waa), CF/Auteuil (Saltern, Q.), Garches/F (Saltern, Q.).

NEXT LONDON SALES.

The third series of London sales open on Tuesday next. According to cables, when the list of new arrivals for the third series closed, 366,000 bales were received, of which 203,000 were forwarded direct to manufacturers, leaving available, with 38,000 bales of held-over wool from the March series, 201,000 bales, as compared with 177,000 bales for the corresponding sales last year. The tone is expected to be a very strong one. Messrs. Wens and Co., remarking on the position towards the close of the March series, said that "despite a rather meagre selection in merinos a very brisk spirit prevailed throughout the series, and prices gradually stiffened, so that merinos are 5 to 7½ per cent., fine and coarse crossbreds 5 per cent., above the initial level, medium crossbreds being the only sorts remaining at par with January. Although English and German manufacturers operated heavily, the large requirements manifested from the beginning seem far from being covered. In the strong belief that raw wool is likely to continue dear, holders have decided to carry to the May sales about 30,000 bales which will swell the net fresh arrivals, limited at 160,000 bales."

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

A fair quantity of wool for the time of the year has been received by rail during the week, and only small proportions by boat. The increase in the importance of the Brisbane sales tends to lessen the quantity coming from Queensland to Sydney for realisation. The figures for the week and season to date, compared to the corresponding period last year, are as follows:—

BY RAIL.	Apl. 29-May 5. Bales.	July 1-May 5. Bales.

BRADFORD TOPS.

Our London cable of yesterday's date states that the Bradford market is firm, and that prices are unchanged. On the corresponding date last year the market was cabled as quiet; merino descriptions were quoted ½d higher (which put prices at the highest point for the season), and coarse crossbreds 1d. The course of prices for the current season compared to last has been as follows:—

Messrs. Wenz and Company, Rheims, reporting at the close of March last, said that the demand could not be reported as active, and yet needs are being felt in all descriptions; the turnover remained satisfactory on the whole. Prices were unchanged, but very steady. In noils business was rather slow, without any change in prices. Good clean lots, both merinos and crossbreds, continued in fair request. The combing mills were busy in merinos, but insufficiently supplied with crossbreds.

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

Shipments have been on a light scale of late, only two vessels having cleared the Sydney Customs for the United Kingdom, and none for foreign ports, since last week's review, with a total of 2801 bales. We are now in the eleventh month of the 1910-11 statistical wool year; and, according to the Customs figures (which include transhipments since October last), 856,565 bales have been shipped direct from Sydney and 16,032 bales from Newcastle. From July 1 to September 30 5039 bales were cleared as transhipped wool, a total direct and transhipped from Sydney of 861,544 bales. During the corresponding period last season 836,863 bales were shipped from Sydney, 28,503 bales transhipped, and 12,861 bales from Newcastle. The aggregate figures for the ten months of the current season are 877,576 bales, as compared with 878,927 for the corresponding ten months of the 1909-10 statistical wool year. The vessels, with quantities, for the week, and totals to date, are as follow:—

	Bales.
Orestes, April 29, for London	1,790
Geelong, May 2, for London	1,011
Total from Sydney since last review	2,801
Total from Sydney and Newcastle (including transhipments) from July 1, 1910, to date	878,587
Corresponding period last season (including transhipments)	886,964

PIG-BREEDING.

"Breeder" writes:—I am interested in pig-breeding, and was naturally a little bit elated on receiving a prospectus from the above company, after reading the particulars given on the results expected from their first four years' operations. There are, however, one or two lines of profit shown that I am somewhat staggered with, in connection especially with the approximate cost of establishment. Take the item 700 sows for the fourth year to begin with "Pig runs, £250." Very recently I visited the Hawkesbury College, and was much interested in going through the whole breeding establishment with one of the managers. He pointed out the necessities in connection with the sties for pigs during the breeding season, and mentioned the sum of £13 per sty as the cost of providing the necessary accommodation and water and paddockages. Query: What expenditure would be necessary for 700 (fourth year) sows. The prospectus has put the cost down at £250 for pigs and poultry.

Then their is the item of goats, which are mentioned as 2000, at 5s each, in the establishment with goatskins 1000 at 2s 6d for the first year, running up to 11,375 skins for the fourth year. Where are the animals to come from. Leaving out the ducks, turkeys, and poultry, the whole business appears to be very much in the clouds—without reference to the provision which is foreshadowed in the prospectus for fencing, building, etc.

CLARENCE CANE CROP.

GRAFTON.—The following particulars have been made public with respect to last year's crop of cane on the Clarence River. The yield of ratoons for 1910 was well above the average, while the yield of plant cane was the highest but one in 20 years. The average tonnage of the ratoon crop was 20.8, and the plant cane 35.2, the average for the whole area being 28.2 tons per acre. The amount of cane purchased under the different methods of payment was as follows:—A scheme (individual analysis), No. 1 district, 16,542½ tons; No. 2 district, 1468 tons; No. 3 district, 1624 tons. Total, 19,634½ tons. B scheme (part), No. 1 district, 28,147 tons; No. 2 district, 6285 tons; No. 3 district, 2243 tons. Total, 34,675 tons. C scheme (individual analysis on sliding scale according to price of sugar), 1154 tons, making the total tonnage for 1910 55,466½.

LARGE PINE TREE.

GRAFTON.—A pine tree cut by Mr. T. Maxwell, of Kangaroo Creek, measured 90ft to the first limb. Five logs have been taken out of the tree, giving over 4000ft timber.

STRANGLES IN HORSES.

WINCHAM.—Strangles in a rather severe form have broken out amongst horses in the Upper Manning district. Several have died.

P.P. BOARDS.

GLEN INNES.—At a meeting of the Glen Innes Pastures Protection Board it was agreed to urge the Minister to give the boards locus standi before land boards when the revocation or curtailment of stock reserves is being considered. The board agreed to take steps to compel all owners to destroy noxious weeds on their properties. The rabbit inspector's salary was increased from £150 to £200 yearly. The stock inspector reported that pastures were being burnt up by frosts and continued dry weather. Rain was badly needed to replenish dams and tanks. Stock was in fair condition and healthy. The rabbit inspector, in an extensive report, stated he had visited Red Range, Shannon Vale, Glen Elgin, and Bald Nob, and in the majority of cases rabbits are on the increase, although owners were making every effort to cope with the pest. Rabbits had doubled themselves on Central New England during the past six months, and they were more numerous in cattle country than in any other part. The retiring directors are Messrs. John Sinclair, Fred. Broadbent, A. O'Hara, and W. A. Cramsie.

MOLONG.—At the monthly meeting of the Molong P.P. Board, Mr. M. D. Day was appointed secretary. There were five applicants. A letter from the Carcoar P. P. Board, soliciting co-operation in a test case to compel the Commissioners to destroy rabbits on the railway enclosures was received. Numerous applications for wire-netting were granted. The stock inspector reported that he had visited the north-eastern portion of the district. Although rabbits were still plentiful they did not appear to be on the increase. He was afraid that now trappers had commenced work owners would rely too much on them, and neglect running their own poison carts, unless specially urged to do so. All stock inspected appeared healthy, and in good condition, although several sheep flocks were affected with worms. There was an improvement in the grass as the result of recent rains, but more was required to ensure good winter feed, and also for farming operations. During a discussion which followed the question was asked if it was not possible to prevent trapping. The chairman remarked that it would be as well to publish the fact that trapping was not a means of destroying rabbits if they were on the increase. The general opinion was that there were larger quantities of rabbits after than before trapping. The rabbit inspector reported that he had visited holdings in the central and south-western portions, and found that owners and holders were doing good work in the suppression of rabbits. With regard to the area reported against by the Forbes inspector, he found that good work has been, and was being, done. Most of the runs were netted, with the exception of the Lachlan River side. There was a great shortage of grass in the north, south, and west, and a shortage of water in places. Certificates for 63 dogs, 5 foxes, and 58 fox cubs, and 2006 crow scalps were presented, costing £71 9s 8d. Attention was drawn to the fact that many other boards were not paying for crow scalps; but it was pointed out that there was a noticeable diminution in the number of birds during lambing.

DAIRYING.

PRICE OF MILK.

WOLLONGONG.—Suppliers have received notification from various milk companies to the effect that the price of milk as paid to producers, will be risen to 8d per gallon, to take effect from the 12th inst. It is stated the executive of the milk association endeavoured to obtain 9d per gallon from May 1, but on account of the refusal of one of the companies to accede to that request, the executive had to accept 8d per gallon from the 12th inst. The price may be expected to rise to 9d later on in the winter.

TEMORA.—Temora Butter Factory Co-operative Company last month manufactured 4 tons butter, compared with 2 tons 2cwt the corresponding month last year. Considering this is essentially a wheat-growing district, the result speaks volumes in favour of the recognition of men on the land of the value of mixed farming.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

DAPTO.—Mr. J. B. Fairley has been re-elected president of the Agricultural Society, and Mr. H. J. Hessel Lindsay, treasurer and secretary. It was decided to ask the Department of Agriculture to allow Inspector Makin to deliver a lantern lecture on maize, under the auspices of the society. Recent heavy frosts have given pastures a brown appearance. There is abundance of grass, and on nearly every farm fodder has been conserved in silos. Rain is needed for the young crops.

COOMA.—Applications for 1760 acres of land were lodged with the local lands office this week.

LISMORE.—The news of a further discovery of ticks in the Dunoon district is rather disquieting. Additional inspectors are being put on. Experienced men from the Tweed and Kyogle areas are to be brought in, so that farms in the other parts might be inspected.

WAGGA.—A suggestion was made by the Wagga Municipal Council that it should urge the Railway Department, in view of the enormous damage done to wheat stacks at the local railway station, to provide proper shelter from the weather before the next harvest. The view was expressed that the matter was outside the province of the council, but a motion was agreed to that the sheds ought to be built.

YOUNG.—In this district the outlook for the coming winter is not very promising. The rains in the early part of the year caused a very satisfactory growth of grass, but this was eaten off by the grasshoppers. Then the dry spell set in—last month only 12 points of rain fell—the result being there has been no further growth of grass, and the majority of the paddocks are looking very bare. The dry state of the soil is also impeding agricultural work, as it is hardly possible to plough in some parts, though some of the farmers are getting a little ploughing done. There is still time for a revival in most parts, as, owing to the warm days and very few frosts, the ground is still warm. But unless rain comes soon there will be no winter feed. On the whole, the trouble is chiefly due to the grasshopper plague. It was hoped that the early rains would have wiped a good number of them out, but it seems to have had little or no effect on them. It would appear that only copious rains accompanied by cold have any checking influence on the pest.

MARRICKVILLE TRAMWAY.

EXTENSION ASKED FOR.

The Tramway Advisory Committee, consisting of Mr. F. Flowers, Acting Chief Secretary, Mr. J. Kneeshaw (Tramway Superintendent), and Mr. Conyer, drove through Marrickville yesterday morning on their way to Wollongong, and inspected the route of the proposed tramway along the Illawarra-road, from Marrickville-road to Undercliffe bridge, at Cook's River. The committee was met at the starting point, and taken over the proposed route by the Mayor, Alderman Thornley, and several of the aldermen of Marrickville. The State members for Canterbury and Marrickville, Messrs. Varney Parkes and Crawford, several of the aldermen of Canterbury, and Mr. H. B. Linthorn (president), and members of the local Tramway Extension League; also Rev. Dr. Roseby and other residents.

After the route had been traversed, speech-making was indulged in. It was pointed out to the committee that this extension had been approved of by the late Mr. E. W. O'Sullivan when he was Minister, and would have been carried out by that gentleman but for the fact that the Government ran short of funds. Then when Mr. Lee assumed office he practically promised that the work would be gone on with. As to the necessity for the line, it was mentioned that last year 456 new houses were built in Marrickville, and many more this year. This line of tramway would be the means of opening up large tracts of building land, and it would give easy access to the new Marrickville Park at the river side.

Mr. Flowers said he was favourably impressed with all he had seen. He promised to submit a report to the Minister early next week.

THE ENORMOUS DEMAND FOR PHOSPHATES.

Comparison of the Government figures showing the importation into Australia of Phosphates during 1905 and 1908 indicates the enormous extent to which they are now used.

	1905. cwts.	1906. cwts.	1907. cwts.	1908. cwts.
Guano	534,573	818,580	606,603	606,680
Rock Phosphate	306,592	547,070	769,630	1,267,665
	841,165	1,365,650	1,376,233	1,954,385

Taking the values of the importations for 1908, viz., 1,954,325cwt, at £5 per ton, a fair value for the goods by the time they reach the farmer, there is imported into Australia £488,580. New Zealand figures also show rapidly expanding imports, and Japan yearly uses £8,000,000 worth of Fertilisers, largely consisting of Phosphates.

A large Company is now forming to acquire the Phosphates on the Island of Walpole, 100 miles south-east of New Caledonia. Estimates show that 700,000 tons of Guano and Phosphate rock are actually in sight, containing 60 per cent. tricalcic phosphate, that can be easily worked and shipped. As the outlet for the product of the proposed company is practically unlimited, they have a veritable gold mine in Walpole Island. Labour is cheap and easily obtained, the island has an excellent water frontage, and is right in the regular trading route to the islands. The company's capital is to be £75,000, divided into 300,000 shares of 5s each. 160,000 are offered for public subscription, payable 1s on application, 2s on allotment, and the remainder within six months. £32,000 clear profit per annum is estimated for the first two years, enabling a 40 per cent. dividend to be paid on the issued capital. Prospectus and full particulars are procurable from Mr. R. J. McDougall, 1 and 4 Imperial-buildings, 16 O'Connell-street, Sydney.—Advt.

EVERYBODY SPEAKS WELL OF KOKO FOR THE HAIR.

A DOCTOR:—
"Koko is superior to any other dressing I have ever tried. It keeps the head cool, eradicates Dandriff, and gives the hair a fine glossy appearance. I always recommend Koko to my friends and patients."

A CLERGYMAN:—
"Koko is all that you represent, one of the best, if not the very best dressing for the hair obtainable."

A MAGISTRATE:—
"I am a Magistrate of this State, so have nothing to gain by writing this letter, but I consider it my duty to let you know that Koko is, beyond all question, the very best Hair Preparation I have ever used."

AN ACTRESS (Miss Ellen Terry) WRITES:—
"I have used Koko for years, and can assure my friends that it stops the hair falling out, promotes growth, and is the most pleasant dressing imaginable."

A NURSE:—
"I found Koko most refreshing, exquisitely clean, and marvellous for falling hair and dandriff."

A PRINCESS (Princess Hohenlohe) WRITES:—
"Koko is the best dressing I know; it keeps the head cool, promotes growth, and is in every way excellent."

DATED this fourth day of May, A.D. 1911. D. J. WALLACE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that application is intended to be made to the Parliament of New South Wales during the next ensuing Session thereof for leave to bring in a Bill to continue the provisions of the "Warwick Farm Railway Act," whereby EDWIN ERNEST ALLAN OATLEY, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns were enabled and authorised to construct and control a Railway from and connecting the line of Railway from Sydney to Liverpool with the Warwick Farm Racecourse, commencing at a point between the Liverpool and Cabramatta Railway Stations, distant in a southerly direction about one thousand three hundred yards from the Cabramatta Station, and thence along the land as now fenced and used for the purposes of the said Railway from the Great Southern Railway line to the Warwick Farm Racecourse, situate at Warwick Farm, and to use, work, and manage the said Railway, and to carry passengers and goods thereon, and to charge fares and make charges in respect thereof, and to do all such acts and things as might be necessary for constructing, controlling, and working the said line of Railway, and for purposes consequent thereon and incidental thereto.

By the terms of the said "Warwick Farm Railway Act" the provisions therein contained authorising the construction and control of the said Railway in the manner therein provided were thereby limited to a term of twenty-one years from the passing of the said Act.

The aforesaid period of twenty-one years has now expired, and an Act of the Legislature is necessary to authorise and enable the said Edwin Ernest Allan Oatley, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns to continue the construction and control of the Railway aforesaid.

Dated at Sydney this 21st day of April, A.D. 1911.

P. J. HOURIGAN, Solicitor for the said Bill, and the said EDWIN ERNEST ALLAN OATLEY, Temple-court, 146 King-street, Sydney.

SOCIAL.

His Excellency the Governor-General has been in camp at Liverpool with the Light Horse Brigade during the week. Thursday was review day, and the troops were inspected by Lord Dudley and General Gordon, and by the Inspector-General, Major-General Kirkpatrick, who, with Major Paterson, arrived in the morning from Melbourne. Her Excellency the Countess of Dudley motored up to the camp from Sydney, and upon her arrival mounted a beautiful black charger, and was an interested spectator of the proceedings. An al fresco luncheon was given by Lord and Lady Dudley, and was served beneath some shady trees, their Excellencies entertaining many of the commanding officers.

The Lady Mayoress will be glad if the holders of collecting cards in connection with the "Marics" fund will kindly return them to her not later than Tuesday next, the 9th instant. The final meeting in connection with the movement will be held in the Lady Mayoress' rooms at the Town Hall on Friday morning, the 12th instant.

One of the most beautiful balls held in Sydney for a long time was given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wigram Allen last Tuesday evening "to introduce their daughter Joyce," who, with Mrs. Allen, returned from a visit to England and the Continent last week. "Carrara," Rose Bay, was the site chosen for the ball. The place was transformed for the occasion into a veritable fairyland, and a most perfect night added considerably to the success of the evening. The long drive leading to the house and the approach from the water's edge upwards were both alike outlined with hundreds of Chinese lanterns. The scene across the harbour was most picturesque, especially when viewed from the large ballroom, which had been built on from the verandah for the occasion, and which, though enclosed overhead, had the sides open. Mr. and Mrs. Allen received their guests in the large drawing-room, beautifully decorated with arches and festoons of white perennial aster, intermixed with posies of pink roses; the mantelpieces were banked with a profusion of exquisite roses, and baskets of white chrysanthemums filled the fire places and every nook and corner. Blue and pink formed the colour scheme, all the lights being shaded with pink. The verandah and the ballroom were draped with pale blue art muslin, covered with a lattice of smilax; pink roses and tiny asters ornamented the pillars and gaseliers, whilst tall palms and pot plants added further beauty to the whole scene. Supper was served in a large marquee on the tennis lawn, which was approached by a broad flight of steps, leading from the upper lawn and the house. The supper room was draped with pink, and the tables decorated with masses of the small pale-pink single chrysanthemum, which is coming into favour so much this season. Small tents were erected about the grounds and on the lawn in front of the house. A display of cinematograph pictures was given, whilst another "divertissement" was created by a gentleman who made some clever silhouette pictures of the guests, so that the non-dancers were provided with plenty of amusement. Nothing that could conduce to the enjoyment of the guests had been forgotten. Mrs. Allen, who is looking remarkably well after her trip to Europe, was warmly welcomed back by her numerous friends. She wore pale blue satin, with an overdress of fine black Chantilly lace, embroidered with gold, and pearl and diamond ornaments. Miss Joyce Allen's charmingly simple debutante's dress was of soft white satin, veiled with a tunic of beautifully embroidered white chiffon, finished with a white satin sash. A small wreath of tiny pale pink roses was arranged at the back of her head, beneath the hair. She also wore a diamond and peridot pendant and diamond and pearl brooch, gifts presented to her as a souvenir of the occasion, and carried a posy of choice white flowers. There were two other debutantes, Miss Hope Lamb and Miss Elwyn Macarthy, both of whom looked dainty in their white dresses, and carried bouquets of white flowers. Dancing was carried on with the greatest spirit all the evening, many "extras" being asked for. About 280 friends accepted invitations, and amongst those present were Mrs. H. C. Dangar and Miss Dangar, Colonel Foster, Captain and Mrs. Rolleston, Mrs. E. W. Knox and the Misses Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Hemsley, Mr. A. A. Dangar and Miss Grace Dangar, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Fairfax, Mr. and Mrs. Shepheard Laidley and Miss Laidley, Mrs. T. F. Knox and Miss Nell Knox, Captain and Mrs. Verney, Captain Dumaresq, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Macarthy, Mrs. Trude, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Knox, Dr. and Mrs. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. H. Levy and Miss Levy, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Allen, Mrs. and Miss Burdekin, Captain and Mrs. Clive Dangar, Mr. and Mrs. David Anderson, and the Misses Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. R. Allen, Miss Fairfax, Miss Dibbs, Miss Learmonth, Miss Lumsden, Miss Leeper, Mr. and Mrs. W. Macarthy, Mr. and Mrs. David Dickson, Mrs. W. Macfarlane, and Miss Valerie Willis, Mr. and Mrs. Colin Stephen, Mr. A. F. Robinson and Miss Robinson, Mrs. Macarthur Onslow, Mr. and Mrs. Rothe, Mr. and Mrs. C. Parbury, Miss Donkin, Mr. and Mrs. C. Cape, Mr. and Mrs. C. Rundle, Captain Bruen, R.N., Captain Norton, R.N., Mr. and Mrs. S. Levy, Mr. and Mrs. A. Turnbull, Mrs. Arthur Macarthur, Mr. and Mrs. Edwyn Ryrie, Miss Blanche Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Hay, Mr. and Mrs. Rabett, Dr. and Mrs. W. Fairfax, Mr. and Mrs. Warry, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Hordern, Mr. Walter Callen, Captain Fletcher, Mrs. H. Marks, Miss Clara Manning, Miss Bowker, Miss F. E. Stephen, the Misses Gordon, Miss Warry, Miss Bayly, Miss Dorothy Farran, the Misses Morton, the Misses Griffiths, Miss Brennan, Mrs. Hubert Fairfax, Miss Lord, Miss C. Mort, Miss Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Neville Dangar, Mr. and Mrs. A. Rankin, Mr. Consett Stephen, Mr. Norman Dangar, Mr. P. T. Robinson, Mr. P. Maxwell, R.N., Mr. and Mrs. Bayly Macarthur, Mr. Holland, and Mr. Wright.

The Forbes Picnic Race Club ball, which is one of the social events of the season, was held in the Town Hall on Thursday night, April 27, when the large hall was prettily decorated. There was a large attendance. The trophies won at the races during the day were displayed on the stage, and shortly before the supper adjournment they were presented to the winners by Mrs. Rawlins, wife of the president of the club (Mr. R. E. Rawlins, of Riversleigh). Among the ladies present were noticed Mrs. Broadbent, Mrs. Cook (Melbourne), Miss Curr, Mrs. F. Edols, Miss Gatenby, Mrs. R. Gilmour, Mrs. R. E. Rawlins, Miss Harnett, Mrs. C. S. MacPhillamy, Miss MacPhillamy, Mrs. R. Reymond, Mrs. L. Reymond, and Mrs. H. W. Stitt.

On Monday afternoon, May 1, the members of the Morpeth Tennis Club met to wish Mr. and Mrs. Broadfoot good-bye, previous to their departure for Moree. Afternoon tea was served on the court, and Mr. Beatty, on behalf of the members, presented Mrs. Broadfoot with a solid silver salad bowl and servers.

About 90 ladies tendered a farewell tea at the Australia Hotel on Wednesday afternoon, May 3, to Mrs. S. Maguire, of Neutral Bay, on her approaching departure for a trip to England. A presentation was made to Mrs. Maguire of a pendant of coral and pearls and earrings to match, also an autograph book, which was signed by all the ladies present.

About 135 guests assembled at Piedmont, Barraba, on the evening of Tuesday, April 25, in response to an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. D. Capel to be present at the marriage of their daughter Verlie to H. Shiell, son of the late Mr. John M'Master and Mrs. M'Master, of Croppa, Warialda. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Thomas May, vicar of St. John's, Bingara, in the ballroom, which was beautifully decorated with white roses, white chrysanthemums, palms, and ferns. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore ivory satin charmeuse, with an overdress of white silk ninon, hand-embroidered with crystal seed pearls and silver, a beautiful Brussels lace veil, and a wreath of orange blossom. She also wore a necklet of garnets and pearls, and carried a white shower bouquet, the gifts of the bridegroom. She was attended by four bridesmaids—the Misses Gwen and Elsie Capel (sisters) and the Misses Una and Lily M'Master (sisters of the bridegroom). They wore dresses of white ninon over white satin, trimmed with silver, and Juliet caps of silver and pearls, and carried bouquets of pink chrysanthemums and roses, which, with Nellie Stewart bangles, were the gifts of the bridegroom. They also wore gold brooches, the gifts of the bride. Mr. Stanley M'Master (brother of the bridegroom) was the best man, and Messrs. A. Mack and F. and L. Capel acted as groomsmen. Miss Bertha Capel (cousin of the bride) played the Wedding March. After the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served in a large marquee, which was prettily decorated with palms and ferns, and illuminated with coloured lanterns. Later Mr. and Mrs. H. S. M'Master left by motor for Tamworth, en route to Sydney, the bride's travelling dress being a purple cloth coat and skirt, and a motor bonnet of purple straw. An enjoyable dance terminated the evening.

At St. Philip's Church, Church-hill, on Thursday afternoon, May 4, the marriage was solemnised of Raymond Carbery, youngest son of the late G. W. F. Addison, stipendiary magistrate, Sydney, to Ida, seventh daughter of Thomas Salter, of Brynallt, Hunter's Hill. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Canon Bellingham, assisted by the Rev. E. Owen. The bride, who, in the absence of her father in England, was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. F. A. A. Russell, wore a white satin dress, veiled with bugle net and ninon, and trimmed with Limerick lace. A girdle of crystal and pearls completed her toilette. She was attended by two bridesmaids, the Misses Agnes Dosby and Ethelwyn Downes, who wore white crepe de chine veiled with rose-pink ninon and silk fisher net, and large black hats with pink satin roses. Two little nieces of the bride, the Misses Patty and Audrey Russell, acted as pages, and wore white muslin dresses and white straw bonnets. Mr. W. Russell French was best man, and Mr Charles G. Addison groomsman. After the ceremony, at the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Manning, a reception was held at Petty's Hotel. The presents, which were numerous and beautiful, were arranged in the smaller reception room, and the wedding breakfast was served in the large dining-room. Amongst the guests present were Sir Francis and Lady Suttor, Miss Suttor, Mrs. G. W. F. Addison, Mrs. F. Alison Russell, Mrs. A. H. Simpson, Mrs. J. Russell French, Mrs. Langer Owen, Mr. and Mrs. G. Campbell Addison, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Betts, Dr. and Mrs. MacKinnon, Mr. J. T. Lingen, Mr. F. W. Downes, M.L.A., and Mrs. Downes, Mr. C. R. Walsh, Miss Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. Glentworth Addison, Mrs. Buckland, Mrs. A. C. Buchanan, Mr. R. Copland Lethbridge, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barton, Mrs. John Manning, Miss Beatrice Walker, Mrs. Crawshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Docker, Mrs. Finlayson, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. Denison Miller, the Rev. and Mrs. Allnutt, Mrs. Lawrence Addison, Mrs. Jamieson, Mrs. T. Rolin, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Makinson, Captain Yorick Smith, Mrs. H. M. Suttor, Mrs. Frank Spier, Miss Spier, Mrs. Shelley, Miss B. Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Walsh, Mrs. and Miss Weedon, Messrs. Norman M'Carthy, L. M. Addison, Guy Manning, N. Downes, A. J. Simpson, J. and W. d'Apice, F. and A. Du Boise, A. H. Hicks, and M. Blaxland.

A marriage was solemnised on Wednesday April 19, at St. John's Church, Parramatta, by the Ven. Archdeacon Gunther, between Mr. Arthur D'Urban Hewitt and Miss Berta Davidson, niece of Miss Davidson, Ellangowan, Parramatta. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Bruce Davidson, wore a tunic dress of ivory crepe de chine, with trimmings of ninon and Irish crochet lace, and her long tulle veil was arranged over a coronet of orange blossom. She carried a white shower bouquet, and wore a gold flexible wrist watch bracelet, the gifts of the bridegroom. She also wore an aquamarine necklet, the gift of her aunt, Miss Davidson. The bridesmaids were the Misses Marjorie Sheridan and Milson, who wore dainty frocks of white chiffon muslin, inlet with Valenciennes insertion, over silk, and white satin sashes and quaint net caps, with wreaths of pink satin bebe roses. They carried posies of pink bebe roses, and wore circular pearl brooches, the bridegroom's gifts. Mr. Hewitt, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. A reception was afterwards held at Ellangowan, where Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt received the congratulations of their friends. Amongst those present were Miss Davidson (aunt of the bride), Mrs. Sheridan (aunt of the bride), Mrs. Hewitt (bridegroom's mother), Miss C. Davidson, Mrs. Trevannon Rodd, Miss Rodd, Mrs. Sharpe and the Misses Sharpe, Mrs. Brennand, Mr. and Mrs. A. Knox, Mrs. Alec. Learmonth, Miss Learmonth, Mrs. Brisbane Rodd, Mrs. Nicholson, Miss Milne, Miss Hewitt, Mrs. Campbell, Miss Stewart, Mrs. and the Misses Betts, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Brown, Dr. and Mrs. Brown, the Misses Brown, Messrs. C. J. Sheridan, R. Sheridan, Hewitt, Keith Brown, W. Cowper, S. Milson, N. Milson, Taylor, Kenny, L. Brown. Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt left by motor for Katoomba, where the honeymoon was spent. The bride's travelling dress was a navy blue coat and skirt, and a nattier blue hat, trimmed with panne velvet and hyacinths.

At St. Paul's Church, Chatswood, on Saturday last, Miss Olive Carr Hordern, eldest daughter of Mr. E. Carr Hordern, of Chislehurst, Chatswood, was married to the Rev. G. Harvard Cranswick, eldest son of the Rev. E. G. and Mrs. Cranswick, of St. John's Rectory, Glebe. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms and flowers, and the walls were artistically festooned with greenery. The ceremony was performed by his Grace the Archbishop of Sydney, assisted by the Rector (Rev. G. H. Howe) and Rev. E. G. Cranswick, father of the bridegroom. The bride was given away by her father, and wore ivory crepe de chine over satin charmeuse, and draped with point lace, with the new square-cut train finished with lilies of the valley and orange blossoms. She wore a beautiful veil of Honiton lace, which was embroidered by her mother, and carried a shower bouquet with long white tulle and satin streamers. The four little bridesmaids were Miss Editha Hordern (sister), the Misses Doreen and Aubrey Hordern (cousins), and Miss Isobel Wright (daughter of his Grace the Archbishop). They were dressed in fine white muslin, inlet with Malines insertion and Irish crochet, over shell pink satin, and hats of fine white muslin and lace, with pale pink ribbon. They wore moonstone pendants (gifts of the bride and bridegroom), and carried dainty baskets of pale pink roses and autumn leaves. Mr. Hugh Cranswick (brother of the bridegroom) acted as best man, and the brothers of the bride and bridegroom as ushers. A reception was afterwards held at Chislehurst, where a large number of guests assembled, and were received by the parents of the bride and bridegroom, and the happy pair, who subsequently left for the Mountains. The bride travelled in a coat and skirt of navy blue and black, and a picture hat of vieux rose velvet, trimmed with roses and lace, and lined with white satin. The wedding breakfast was served in a large marquee on the lawn, and a brief speech was made by his Grace the Archbishop.

A wedding took place on Thursday evening, April 20, at St. Paul's Church, Burwood, when Miss Beryl Allard, second daughter of Mr. H. B. Allard, The Priory, Burwood, and of the late Mrs. Allard, was married to Mr. Mark Alexander Traill, eldest son of the late Dr. Traill and Mrs. Traill, Burwood. The church was beautifully decorated by girl friends with palms, cactus dahlias, and cosmos, the ends of the pews being tied with white ribbon and choice flowers. The Rev. Harry Bryant officiated. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a beautiful dress of white charmeuse, veiled in tulle, and a tunic skirt trimmed with Honiton and Limerick lace, and a wreath of orange blossom and bridal veil. She also wore a pearl chain bangle and carried a shower bouquet, the gifts of the bridegroom. She was attended by Miss Doris Allard (sister) and Miss Ella Traill (sister of the bridegroom). The bridesmaid's dresses were of white crepe de chine with Limerick lace, and crystal and silver trimming, and hats of powder-blue charmeuse and blonde lace. Each received from the bridegroom a gold bracelet and shower bouquet. The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Gordon Allard (brother of the bride) as best man, and Mr. Reginald Roberts as groomsman. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends present, amongst whom were Mrs. H. B. Allard (stepmother of the bride), Mrs. Traill (mother of the bridegroom), Miss Cowlishaw (aunt of the bride), Mrs. Ramsay (sister of the bride), Mrs. Windeyer, Miss Daisy Windeyer, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Cadell, Mr., Mrs., and Miss F. J. Allard, the Misses Cowlishaw, Mrs. Traill, Mr., Mrs., and Miss Harold Traill, Mr., Mrs., and Miss N. G. Traill, Mr. Ramsay, and Dr. Windeyer. After the ceremony a reception was held by Mr. and Mrs. Allard at The Priory, Burwood. The large reception rooms were decorated with palms, dahlias, and cosmos. During the evening Mrs. Allard's beautiful voice was heard with pleasure in "The Birds at their Matins" (Adelina de Lara). Later the bridal couple left for Avoca, on the Hawkesbury River, the bride's travelling dress being of mole-grey crepe-de-chine, with touches of Coronation blue. Her hat was of grey squirrel fur and velvet of the same shade, the toilette being completed by a beautiful set of squirrel furs. The presents were numerous and handsome.

St. John's Church, Kirribilli, was the scene of a wedding on Wednesday evening, April 5, when Miss Gladys Natalie Pitt, fourth daughter of Mr. C. B. Pitt, of Trevellyn, North Sydney, was married to Mr. Clive R. Moffat, son of the late Mr. J. J. Moffat and Mrs. Moffat. The bride who was given away by her father, wore a beautiful dress of ivory crepe de chine, the bodice and tunic being trimmed with duchesse point; the former also embroidered with tiny pearls; also a wreath and veil. The bridesmaids were the Misses Elaine and Enid Pitt, in pale blue charmeuse, veiled with ninon of the same shade, and deeply embroidered. The Rev. R. B. S. Hammond performed the ceremony, and the chancel was decorated with large palms and white flowers. Mr. J. P. Moffat was best man, and Mr. J. M. Maughan acted as groomsman. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Pitt held a reception at Trevellyn, where a number of relatives and intimate friends were entertained. The bride's going-away dress was a green coat and skirt, and drawn satin hat to match.

At St. James' Church, King-street, Sydney, on Monday, April 17, George T., eldest son of Mr. T. Fowler, of Wicklow Downs, Norwich (England), was married to Louie, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hanson, of Newcastle. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Watson Leigh, assisted by the Rev. W. James, of Newcastle, an old friend of the bride's family, and the church was beautifully decorated. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore ivory duchess satin, simply designed, but beautifully cut, the only trimming being Limerick lace applique, the skirt having a panel of Limerick lace embroidered in pearls. Master Jack Benjamin (nephew) was train-bearer. The bride also wore a wreath of orange blossom, from which fell a handsome lace veil. Her shower bouquet and a diamond and emerald ring, were the gifts of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids were Miss Lily Hanson (sister) and Miss May Houseman, dressed in ivory silk crepe tunic skirts, trimmed with jewelled lace and satin, and white velvet caps, with lilac chiffon streamers. Their bouquets of lilac and gold brooches were the gift of the bridegroom. Mr. A. Castles acted as best man, and Mr. E. Benjamin as groomsman. A reception was subsequently held at Baumann's Cafe, where the wedding breakfast was served. The numerous and costly presents were on view. Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Fowler left by motor for the mountains, the bride's travelling dress being a tailor-made French lawn cloth with black silk braid, and hat with black feathers; she also carried a silver bag, the gift of the bridegroom.

A wedding took place in St. Peter's Cathedral, Armidale, on Saturday, April 8, when Gladys, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Cyril Higinbotham, of Tilbuster, was married to Mr. William Saunderson, Bachelor of Science, Armidale School. The cathedral had been prettily decorated by girl friends, and the Ven. Archdeacon Lewis, M.A., officiated. The bride was given away by her father, and her handsome dress was of ivory charmeuse satin, trimmed with Brussels lace. She also wore a coronet of orange blossoms and the bridal veil of her mother, and carried a shower bouquet, which, with a tourmaline and pearl pendant, was the gift of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids were her sisters, the Misses Enid and Leila Higinbotham, who wore pretty dresses of ivory crepe de chine, with pearl trimmings, and mob-caps trimmed with mauve ribbon, and carried staffs of mauve flowers, which, with their gold and amethyst brooches, were gifts from the bridegroom. Mr. F. C. Wright, of Guyra, acted as best man, and Mr. Howard Higinbotham as groomsman. After the ceremony the bridal party drove from the cathedral to Tilbuster, where the guests were received and entertained at tea, served on the lawn. Subsequently Mr. and Mrs. Saunderson left by train for their honeymoon in the south. The bride's travelling dress was of wine-coloured cloth, trimmed with black fur and satin, and a hat to match.

At Holy Trinity Church, Orange, on March 15, Roy George, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Moore, of Cowra, was married to Ada Effie, fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gain, of Orange. The ceremony was performed by the Right Rev. Dr. Camidge, Bishop of Bathurst, assisted by the Rev. W. Walker-Taylor. The bride wore ivory crepe de chine, with a wreath of orange blossoms and a tulle veil, and carried a white prayer book. She was attended by her sister, Miss Gain. Mr. W. J. Moore (Sydney) acted as best man.

Palms, ferns, and flowers prettily decorated St. Philip's Church, Church-hill, on the evening of the 30th March, when the marriage of Mr. Leslie Brittain, of Longreach, Queensland, second son of Mr. and Mrs. William Brittain, of Balmain, with Miss Laura M. Jowett, of North Sydney, youngest daughter of the late Joseph Jowett, of Yorkshire, was solemnised by the Rev. Canon Bellingham, M.A. The bride wore a beautiful dress of ivory crepe de chine and ninon, the bodice draped with Limerick lace, finished at the side with a girdle of pearls. Her veil, which was held in place by a coronet of pearls and lillies of the valley, was embroidered by a friend, who also embroidered a white satin cushion on which the bride knelt. Her beautiful bouquet of choice flowers and a handsome dressing case were gifts from the bridegroom. There were two bridesmaids in attendance—Miss Dora Jowett and Miss Dora Brittain. Four girl friends held white satin streamers (to which were attached posies of small white flowers down each side of the aisle as the bride entered the church. The ushers in attendance were Messrs. F. Hiddle, W. Derrin, and J. Lennon. During the signing of the register Miss Ethel Tuck sang "Beloved, it is Morn." After the ceremony a reception was held at Baumann's by Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Frecker. The presents were numerous and useful.

A wedding took place at the Methodist Church, Mosman, on March 22, when Mr. George Henry Garnock, of South Bukalong, Bombala, was married to Miss Ethelwyn Carruthers, second daughter of the Rev. J. E. Carruthers, of Ardross, Mosman. The church was decorated for the occasion, and the ceremony was performed by the father of the bride, assisted by the Rev. F. W. Hynes, brother-in-law. The bride wore soft silk crystalline, with wreath and veil, and carried a shower bouquet of white heath. Her gift from the bridegroom was a gold watch and chain. Miss Edith Garnock and the Misses Ruby, Winnie, and Dorothy Carruthers were bridesmaids. The bridegroom was supported by Mr. K. N. Carruthers and Mr. F. Hynes. A reception was subsequently held in the Mosman Town Hall, where the wedding presents were also on view.

A large gathering of relatives and friends assembled in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Drake, on Easter Monday, to witness the marriage of Henry John, second son of Mr. H. J. Fitzell, of Sydney, to Mabel Veronica, only daughter of Mr. G. H. Doyle, Drake. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Clancy, of Tenterfield. The bride wore a dress of ivory satin brocade, trimmed with chiffon, pearls, and malines lace; also a hand-embroidered Brussels net veil arranged over a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet, which, with her diamond and ruby ring and amethyst and pearl brooch, was the gift of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids were the Misses Annie and Ida Hankins, cousins of the bride. Mr. H. Doyle was best man. A reception was afterwards held at the residence of the bride's parents.

ENGAGEMENT.

The engagement is announced of Harold, third son of Captain Liley, Victoria, to Hilda, fourth daughter of James Mackie, Esq., Waratah, Newcastle.

Y.M.C.A. AND MILITARY SERVICE.

The Young Men's Christian Association has added a new branch to its long list of activities, with a Field Service Department. The enterprise was initated in Australia by the Melbourne Association in January 1910, when it took part in the Seymour military camp. Benefiting by this experience the necessary permission from the authorities was obtained, and provision was made for the undertaking on a generous scale at Kilmore, where a large marquee for general use was put up, and a special constructed canvas building, with wooden frame, for the officers. These were furnished with tables, chairs, newspapers, magazines, books, etc. In the evenings entertainments were arranged, and church services on the Sunday night. In a report to the board of directors of the association, it is stated that the average daily attendance was 1350 (4608 of all ranks were at the camp), the large marquee being overcrowded each night. The entire organisation, supervision, and conduct of the department was controlled by a staff of four officers, consisting of Messrs. W. Gordon Sprigg (the general secretary), H. Langham, (of the board of directors), J. Dawson, and J. W. Adams. The cost totalled £150. "It requires no extraordinary foresight on our part," says the report, "in order to catch a glimpse of the vastness and importance of this military service, upon which the association has mbarkedd. We venture to affirm that the Young Men's Christian Associations of Australia are faced with one of the greatest opportunities for national service ever presented to any organisation." It is proposed to still further extend the scope of the department, the Kilmore equipment having proved insufficient.

HERE IS A LETTER ALL WEAK, ANAEMIC, OR VITALLY EXHAUSTED ADELAIDE WOMEN SHOULD READ. IT TELLS THE STORY OF A WONDERFUL CURE.

A Hobart Citizen Thanks Clements Tonic for Saving her Life, and writes thus:—
"132 Liverpool-street,
"Hobart, 21.11.10.

"CLEMENTS TONIC, LTD.

"It is with gratitude I write to tell you Clements Tonic is a remedy of most marvellous powers, the most wonderful medicine known.

"I have been for 28 years in business in Hobart, and years ago I was operated on for Hydatids of the Liver, which led to continuous ill-health. Like a sick woman will, I tried doctors and medicines, without regaining strength.

"I suffered from LOSS OF MEMORY, NERVOUS BREAKDOWN, CHRONIC LOSS OF SLEEP, POOR APPETITE, AND INDIGESTION. I could not walk across the room, I was so weak. I thought I would never see my business again.

"Seeing Clements Tonic advertised, I decided to try a bottle, and found it to act like magic in giving me an appetite and better nervous strength, so I decided to continue it. This is the result. To-day I am alive and well. Although this critical period happened years ago, I am here in the flesh to-day, thanks to that splendid medicine, which cured me of the ailments specified in this letter, NERVOUS BREAKDOWN IN PARTICULAR. I had no more sleepless nights, and in a few weeks after taking it I was strong and well, and used to rise in the morning as happy as a lark. I can give you the names of dozens of Hobart citizens who know these words are true, also the name of the chemist there who sold me the tonic, Mr. A. P. Miller, Liverpool-street, Hobart, and from whose pharmacy I have often bought it since.

"I always recommend Clements Tonic to persons in ill-health, because I know what it is and what its use means for women, and I hope you will use this letter in the great cause of suffering humanity.

"(Signed) (Mrs.) MINNIE NIETOM."

Life is so short, even at its longest, yet thousands yearly shorten life by neglect to keep a good medicine when the system and stomach are out of order. Unhealthy people should remember that good health and Clements Tonic go hand in hand. It may be described as twin brothers of health and strength. Send for it to your nearest chemist or store. They all sell it for the public need.—Advt.

Facial Treatments

To Obtain and Retain Beauty of the Skin.

FOR A DRY SKIN. Dryness and harshness of the skin are due to the lack of natural oil in it. To increase or restore the fat-content of the skin, the following home treatment is essential: Valaze Skin Food for night use, and the Novena Cerate during the day; Valaze Skin Tonic for bathing the face in the morning, and Novena Sunproof and Windproof Cream, as a protective agent, should be thoroughly rubbed into the skin and some Novena Poudre dusted on before leaving the house.

Washing the face with soap and water had best be stopped till the condition of dryness has improved. The cleansing properties of Novena Cerate will prove quite sufficient for every purpose of hygienic cleanliness.

FOR A TENDER SKIN. This requires substantially the same treatment as the dry skin, except that Valaze Soap and Voskpasta may be used once or twice a week, at night only, before retiring, to be followed by an application of Valaze Skin Food. If it is desired to wash the face during the day the Daleihne should be used in place of soap, but Novena Cerate will be quite effective as a means of cleansing without water.

Valaze Skin Tonic should be used three times a week, chiefly in the morning, and Creme Promenade may be rubbed in, followed with a dusting of powder, with much benefit, before leaving the house.

FOR A GREASY SKIN. A skin comes within this description when it is abnormally oily and shiny. The remedy is frequent washing in warm water with Valaze Soap and Voskpasta, and the application three or four times a day of Valaze Liquidine, which has a direct influence on the pores, and, stimulating them, frees them of over-abundant secretion. In addition Valaze Blackhead and Open Pore Cure should be used at night, followed by a slight application, by means of a hot towel, of Valaze Skin Food, in accordance with special directions given for the purpose. Allowing the Blackhead and Open Pore Cure to remain on the face for about a quarter of an hour before rinsing produces more effective results. A suitable Face Powder is Valaze Complexion Powder, while Snow Lotion is to be recommended as a liquid powder.

FOR A NORMAL SKIN. This treatment preserves the good appearance of the skin, and prevents injury, within reasonable bounds.

The yielding oneself to preservative treatment, by which the face is enabled better to withstand the strain of modern life, and to retain the colour and brightness and the delightful velvet surface typical of youthfulness, requires but the merest fraction of the day's routine.

Ladies who for reasons of their own are unable to come to Madame Rubinstein, and who are just as desirous of retaining their good looks as are those who frequent this fashionable establishment, require the following preparations for home treatment:—

Valaze Skin Food, Valaze Complexion Soap and Voskpasta, Valaze Complexion Powder in summer and for night functions generally, and Novena Poudre in winter; Novena Cerate for cleansing the skin when it has been exposed, and Valaze Liquidine for use once a day in the summer, or generally when the face is inclined to perspire. The preparations which should be used as protectives against atmospheric attacks will be found in a subsequent paragraph.

LINED WRINKLED SKIN. The use of Valaze Skin Food combined with the usual hygiene of cleanliness, with an occasional stimulating application of Valaze Skin Tonic, and a little massage to retain the natural tautness of the skin of the face, is practically all that is ordinarily required to ward off Time's dreaded tracings on the face. But when they begin to appear, the relaxed tension of the skin can be restored, and further inroads checked, by the combined action of Novena Extrait, Valaze Skin Food, and Novena Cerate, which last should be massaged into the skin with regular persistence, and afterwards carefully wiped off. Special directions for massage will be supplied, and the exercises can be performed either with the fingers or by means of specially constructed Massage Rollers, by the use of which every undue stretching of the skin can be avoided. The stretching of the skin is the grave drawback that must always remain to the discredit of unskilled hand massage.

To counteract and prevent lines near the eyes, or "crowsfeet," Novena Extrait is warmly recommended, and with it explicit directions for eye massage will be sent along, especially devised to heighten the circulation, and add nourishment to the lined, relaxed parts.

BLACKHEADS, PIMPLES, AND BLOTCHINESS. The use of Valaze Soap and Voskpasta is essential every morning, to be followed with a rub of Valaze Liquidine. Blackhead and Open Pore Cure No. 1 is to be used at night on retiring, and should be left on the face for about a quarter of an hour before rinsing. Afterwards apply a small quantity of Valaze Skin Food according to special directions which are sent with the preparation.

In more obstinate cases Valaze Blackhead and Open Pore Cure No. 2 is necessary, and a little Valaze Skin Food should be rubbed in immediately before going to bed, according to special directions.

ENLARGED OR DISTENDED PORES. Perhaps nothing deserves greater blame as a producer of this undesirable and unpleasing condition than the frequent application of inactive, bland, face creams. Such occurrences are entirely impossible with an active preparation like Valaze, which, when penetrating into the skin, carries its stimulating ingredients with it, and these, in turn, compel the skin's constant healthful activity. The condition of enlarged pores requires rather vigorous treatment with Blackhead Cure No. 1, and sometimes with the stronger quality, No. 2, in conjunction always with Valaze Liquidine, and the frequent use of Valaze Soap and Voskpasta. By this treatment the sluggishness of the skin is overcome, till by continued stimulation, normal functions are re-established, causing the pores to contract and the skin's texture to refine.

FRECKLES, SUNBURN, AND SALLOWNESS. In this branch of treatments great progress has taken place, because not only can one totally rid oneself of them when they have once made their appearance, but—and this is more to the point—these blemishes can now be virtually prevented.

By that new and, as a scientific achievement, almost marvellous specific, Novena Sunproof and Windproof Cream, those particular rays of the sun which cause the pigmentation or freckling of the skin are made ineffective and become paralysed, as it were. The cream is applied by thoroughly rubbing it into the skin before going out, after which some powder should be dusted on.

Now as to removing freckles, sunburn, and sallowness, there again the stimulating properties of Valaze Skin Food come into play, by which, after penetrating into it, the skin is enabled to throw off the pigment deposited in it by the sun's chemical action. For more obstinate freckles and sallowness the Valaze Freckle Pasta is recommended.

PROTECTION FROM SUN, COLD, AND WIND. Before leaving the house rub in thoroughly some Novena Sunproof and Windproof Cream, and dust on some Valaze Powder or Novena Poudre. When returning home the face should be cleansed with Novena Cerate in winter, and with Valaze Skin Food in summer, or bathed with Tonique Speciale.

FOR REDNESS OF NOSE AND CHEEKS. For home treatment the use of Novena Red Nose Ointment and Powder as well as Valaze Liquidine is recommended as a first resort, to be followed, if necessary, by a special Astringent and Bleaching Pasta. In the more advanced stages of the trouble, when small veinlike blood vessels become noticeable, home treatment is more difficult, and more radical and special treatment should be taken at the Valaze Massage Institute by one of the three methods practised and devised by Drs. Unna, Lassar, and Kapp.

Valaze Skin Food, 3/6, 6/6, 6d postage. Valaze Soap, 2/2 posted. Valaze Powder and Novena Poudre, 2/ and 3/ a box. Valaze Skin Tonic, 3/6, 6d posted. Novena Sunproof Creme, 3/6. Novena Cerate, 2/ and 3/6. Valaze Voskpasta, 3/. Valaze Liquidine, 5/ and 8/6, 6d postage. Valaze Blackhead and Open Pore Cure, 2/10, posted. Valaze Snow Lotion, 3/6, 6d postage. Novena Extrait, 7/6, 6d post. Valaze Massage Rollers, Single 8/6, set of two 18/6, full set of three in case 25/.

The above treatments are especially for the home. At the Valaze Massage Institute, 158 Pitt-street, Sydney, opposite the Strand, a method of facial massage is carried out, by which the skin is given back its erstwhile natural humidity and sap. It is restored to its natural fresh colour, freed from all disfigurements, and the skin assumes a healthy, clear, beautiful appearance. Where it is possible, ladies should have a course of the Valaze Face-Massage. It has a wonderful effect on the complexion, rejuvenating, purifying, and beautifying it. No charge is made for advice. All information concerning the restoration and preservation of good looks is willingly supplied.

All orders accompanied by remittance, for advice, and for appointments, should be addressed to Mlle. Rubinstein, Dept D. 158 Pitt-street, opp. Strand, Sydney, and 274 Collins-street, Melbourne.

50 Prizes of 5/ each for next largest series of Collectors	12 10 0
200 Prizes in all, totalling	£100 0 0

The above Prizes are given for collections of Wrappers only, which are the outside coverings of Standard Milk tins and easily removed. The Wrappers when collected should be made into a neat parcel, the sender's name and address written legibly enclosed therein, and the parcel then addressed clearly and posted to STANDARD DAIRY COMPANY, LIMITED, 90 Pitt-street, SYDNEY, so as to arrive on or before the 15th June, 1911. The competition closes on that date, and the names of the prize-winners will be published on the 24th June, 1911, and remittances sent to successful competitors. A collector may win one prize only.

The herds supplying our Condenseries are Australia's finest dairy breeds, fed on beautiful verdant pastures. The milking is done under the Company's inspection, absolute cleanliness and care being the motto. The milk is scientifically purified and pasteurised on the dairies, and receives up-to-date treatment at the Condenseries. Everything that science can suggest in every detail is effected to produce a high-class product in a rich, wholesome, and pure state for the consumer; and that our methods are successful is evidenced by the highest awards being obtained at the Franco-British Exhibition against the world's milks, and at Australian Exhibitions. The public throughout Australia have confirmed this judgment by their extensive patronage.

STANDARD CONDENSED MILK is more economical than fresh milk; being pasteurised, it is safer for infants and all domestic uses, and is always on hand. Used in tea, coffee, or cocoa, it gives a better flavour, and when mixed with cold water it makes a delicious and nourishing beverage; for all culinary purposes it takes the place of fresh milk with advantage.

Purchase a tin from your Grocer to-day—see that the Wrapper is attached—and commence collecting at once for one of our valuable prizes.

BEWARE of inferior and cheaper brands. BE SURE you get the right article:—STANDARD BRAND. Every Tin is guaranteed under the Pure Food Act.

CONGO ROOFING.

CONGO is a dense, tough, water-proof felt made rot-proof by impregnation with an antiseptic non-volatile compound. It does not change in character in hot or cold weather, being pliable at all temperatures. During the ten years of service which it will give CONGO should be painted twice.

CONGO ROOFING can be laid without skilled labour, and the work can be done very quickly and easily. Anybody who can drive a nail can make a good first-class roofing job with Congo. Its great flexibility aids in this because it makes the roofing easy to fold and fit at awkward corners of the roof. Sample of Congo sent free on request.

COCKLE'S PILLS.

CONSTIPATION CONQUERED.

There lies the vital secret where so many diseases and ailments are concerned—Constipation must be conquered, or normal organic action, freedom from liver and kidney troubles, and from stomach and bowel disorders, is not possible.

Cockle's Pills conquer Constipation of the most stubbornly aggressive kind; because they strengthen and stimulate and revivify the organs, which they cleanse and regulate with such consummate ease and efficiency. The whole system is freed from the wholesale disturbance due to the constipated tendency, from blood impurities, from effete matter, from lurking disease. Yet Cockle's Pills act so gently and pleasingly that the most delicate persons like them.

LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT OF AUSTRALIA.

(Before the Chief Justice, Sir Samuel Griffith, Mr. Justice Barton, and Mr. Justice O'Connor.)

A COMMISSION DISPUTE.

Ryan v Horton.

This was an appeal from a decision of the Full Court setting aside a verdict for the plaintiff Ryan, and ordering a new trial.

Mr. Langer Owen, K.C., and Mr. Windeyer (instructed by Messrs. M'Lachlan and Murray), appeared for the plaintiff in support of the appeal; and Mr. Loxton, K.C., and Mr. Rolin (instructed by Messrs. Iceton, Faithfull, and Maddock) for the defendant Horton, in support of the judgment of the Full Court.

In the original action Michael Joseph Ryan, a stock and station agent, of Molong, proceeded against H. Horton, a landowner, to recover £826 10s, claimed to be due as commission for services rendered in connection with the sale of the Boomey station to Major Claude Smith. The case was heard before Mr. Justice Sly and a jury, when a verdict for £770 16s was returned for the plaintiff, being full commission on the sale of the land only.

In giving judgment,

The Chief Justice said that this was an action in which commission was claimed to have been earned by the plaintiff as agent for bringing about a sale of the defendant's estate to Major Smith. The defence was a denial of the authority, and of the effect of the work done by the plaintiff. The trial of the action took place before Mr. Justice Sly, and his Honor told the jury that there were only two questions for their decision; whether the plaintiff was employed by the defendant, and whether the sale was brought about by the plaintiff's instrumentality. Counsel for both sides agreed that these were the only two questions for decision. The jury found both questions in favour of the plaintiff, and returned a verdict for £770. On appeal the Full Court set the verdict aside on the ground that the attention of the jury had not been sufficiently directed to a certain portion of the evidence. The only objection that could be made, the Chief Justice said, was that the learned Judge at the trial did not lay sufficient stress upon that particular part of the evidence, but that was not a ground for a new trial, and the only point now was whether the jury could find that the sale was brought about by the plaintiff's instrumentality. He thought there was evidence on which the jury as reasonable men could properly come to that conclusion, and thought, therefore, the verdict ought to be restored.

Mr. Justice Barton and Mr. Justice O'Connor concurred.

The appeal was accordingly allowed, and the rule nisi discharged with costs, respondent to pay the costs of the appeal.

HOTEL COMMISSION.

THE USAGE OF TRADE.

Allan v Resch's, Ltd.

Mr. Ralston, K.C., and Mr. Watt, instructed by Messrs. Buchanan and Smithers, appeared for the plaintiff in support of an appeal against a nonsuit; and Mr. Delohery, instructed by Messrs. Bradley and Son, for the defendant company to oppose. The action, which was tried before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury at the last nisi prius sittings, was brought by George Allan against the defendant company to recover the sum of £500 paid by plaintiff to defendant for the purchase by the former of the City Hotel, Kent and King streets. The stipulation in the agreement was that the purchase should only be completed if the plaintiff obtained the transfer of the license, and in this he failed owing to objection taken by the police. The defendant company, however, contended that another condition of the agreement was that if the sale fell through for the reason stated the agent's commission should be deducted, which defendant said amounted to £50. Plaintiff, however, denied this, and said that even if such a condition did exist, the commission charged was too large, and not according to the usage of trade. The defendant company paid £450 into court, and pleaded not indebted as to the balance, and upon the close of the plaintiff's case he was nonsuited, his Honor holding that under the contract the defendant company was entitled to deduct the £50 as commission. Plaintiff now appealed, mainly on the grounds—(1) that his Honor should have declined to nonsuit plaintiff, inasmuch as on the contract between the parties and the evidence given, the defendants were not entitled to deduct more than the usual commission fixed by usage of trade; (2) that his Honor should have declined to nonsuit plaintiff, inasmuch as on the contract between the parties the defendants were not entitled to deduct more than a reasonable remuneration to the agent employed, and such sum did not amount to £50, nor exceed £10 10s, and it was for the jury to determine; (3) that his Honor should have held that the onus of proving the amount the defendants were entitled to deduct under the contract was on them.

The Chief Justice (Mr. Justice Sly and Mr. Acting Justice Ferguson concurring) said that in his opinion evidence was admissible in order to enable the jury to estimate the ordinary market value of the services of the commission agent in the circumstances stated in the case. It seemed to be inconceivable that the defendant could rely upon part of the evidence, and that the jury should not have an opportunity of saying what charge was deducible from the principal sum paid by the plaintiff. No doubt the learned Judge, in the hurry of nisi prius, must have paid more regard to that portion of the evidence which spoke of the usual rate of commission being 5 per cent. than to the earlier evidence that in the circumstances of the case the commission would be a nominal one.

Nonsuit set aside, and a new trial granted, with costs of the appeal; costs of the previous trial to be costs in the cause.

A DISPUTE AS TO LAND.

Scanlon v Campbell.

Mr. Pickburn and Mr. Barton, instructed by Mr. W. V. W. Thompson, of West Maitland (by his agent, Mr. J. C. Webster), appeared for the appellant (defendant), and Mr. A. Thomson, instructed by Messrs. Cope and Company, for the plaintiff, in support of the verdict. The action, which was tried before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury of four on March 22 last, was brought by Margaret Scanlon against Sarah Louisa Campbell, to recover possession of certain land at Allandale, in the Hunter River district, to which the plaintiff claimed to be entitled by documentary title dating back to 1870, when she purchased the land at a sheriff's sale. It was contended on behalf of the defendant that there was no evidence of any entry by plaintiff before 1910, and she therefore relied upon the Statute of Limitations. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, and defendant now appealed on the grounds (1) that the verdict was against evidence, and the weight of evidence; (2) that on the undisputed facts proved in evidence the defendant was entitled to a verdict; (3) that there was no evidence of any dispossession of the defendant by the plaintiff before the expiration of the period fixed by the Statute of Limitations; (4) that there was no evidence that the entry on the land by the surveyor was made with the authority of the plaintiff.

The case stands part heard.

A BURWOOD PICTURE SHOW.

ALLEGED NUISANCE.

Archer v Burrell and others.

Mr. Maughan, instructed by Messrs. Dowling and Tayler, appeared for plaintiff, William Archer; and Mr. Harvey and Mr. O'Reilly, instructed by Messrs. Dawson and Herford, for defendants, William Burrell and others, trading as the Commonwealth Picture Company.

This was a motion for an injunction to restrain defendants from making or allowing to be made, noises arising from the band, the audience, or the engine, and from so carrying on their exhibitions, as by reason of noises or the congregation of crowds, to cause a nuisance to plaintiff and his family.

A number of affidavits were read, including one by plaintiff, William Archer, who stated that he owned and occupied a cottage and premises known as Oaklands, at Railway-parade, Burwood. Burwood was a residential suburb, and Railway-parade was a residential street, and until the matters complained of, there had been no noises in or near the street. The defendants carried on a business under the name of the Commonwealth Picture Company, as proprietors and managers of cinematograph exhibitions, and about 12 months ago they leased and went into occupation of, and were now occupying a piece of land adjoining plaintiff's eastern boundary, and on it had erected a high hoarding, built of wood, and covered with galvanised iron. A band, consisting of piano, bass reed, and violins, commenced playing about 7.45 p.m., and continued doing so, with short intervals, until about 10.30 p.m. The continuous and monotonous nature of the music, which could be heard in plaintiff's house almost as plainly as in defendants' premises, had become so irritating to the nerves of plaintiff and his wife and family, that they were practically unable to occupy, during the exhibitions, any of the rooms situated on the eastern side of the house, and they had to keep all their doors and windows closed. There was also a constant whirring or humming noise arising from the engine, which, though not so bad as the band, had a most irritating effect. Prior to the starting of the exhibition each night large crowds congregated in the vicinity of defendants' entrance, to the inconvenience of plaintiff and his wife and family, and his visitors when going from or entering his residence at night time. He had been compelled by reason of these crowds to leave the footpath and walk out in the roadway. At times, also, the congregation of these crowds created rowdyism of a nature offensive to a residential neighbourhood. The charge for entrance to the exhibition was 6d and 3d. The attendance averaged about 1000 people, and at times between 2000 and 3000 people were present, many being unable to gain admittance. The audience consisted to a great extent of young people, who arrived early, and occupied the best seats. For about a quarter of an hour they created most offensive noises by shouting to their friends, whistling, laughing, and making "cat calls" prior to the commencement of the exhibition. During the exhibition songs were sung by an employee of the defendants, as part of the performance. The audience created great noise from time to time by laughing, clapping, whistling, applauding the pictures and songs, and by hooting them if they did not meet with approval. Defendants had erected notices requesting the audience not to applaud, but these notices were not complied with. Defendants threw the words of the chorus of some of the songs on to screens, and the audience joined in singing same. During the exhibitions stones were frequently hurled on to the iron roof of plaintiff's cottage, and into his premises. On one occasion a nephew of plaintiff, while in the back garden, was struck in the face by a stone thrown from defendants' premises during an exhibition. Up to about two months ago plaintiff ran a horse in the back portion of his premises. It was frequently struck by stones thrown from defendants' premises. Boys frequently climbed the trees growing at the rear of plaintiff's premises, and also climbed on to the roof of his stables, from which they could see the pictures. He had had to complain to the police about them. Defendants had recently erected a brick wall, 14ft high, close to plaintiff's eastern boundary, and during the exhibitions boys climbed from the back seats on to this wall, and sat there during the exhibition, and made insulting remarks to any persons they saw on plaintiff's premises. He had for some months endeavoured to get defendants to abate the nuisance, but it was still as bad as ever. The erection of the wall had practically made no diminution in the volume of sound which reached plaintiff's premises. He was 76 years of age, and his wife was the same age. They had borne the nuisance until it had such an effect on their nerves as to be almost intolerable.

Other affidavits were read in support of plaintiff's assertions.

On the other hand, quite a number of affidavits were read traversing almost every statement of plaintiff, and asserting that the exhibitions were properly and quietly conducted, and that in effect plaintiff had no cause for complaint. There was no hooting, the boys did not climb the wall, and no stones were thrown from defendants' premises into plaintiff's.

At the suggestion of his Honor the parties conferred with a view to a settlement, but they were unable to agree, and the hearing of the case proceeded.

The case stands part heard.

SEVERANCE OF TRUSTS.

Re William Tunks, late of St. Leonards, deceased.

Mr. C. W. Harriott, instructed by Mr. James P. Jones, appeared for William Henry M'Lean and David William Solomons, trustees of the estate of the abovenamed deceased, and for the beneficiaries under the will.

This was an application for an order severing the trusteeship of the estate by appointing Messrs. William Henry Tunks, jun., and Richard Thomas Eady, as trustees of certain property situate at Ryde belonging to the estate, and Messrs. M'Lean and Solomons as trustees of the remainder of the estate.

The application was granted.

IN DIVORCE.

(Before Mr. Justice Gordon.)

BUCHANAN v BUCHANAN.

A DIFFICULT QUESTION.

DECREE GRANTED.

Mr. E. M. Mitchell, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, appeared for the petitioner. Respondent did not appear. This was a suit brought by Ethel Buchanan (formerly Hunt) against Harry Buchanan, for dissolution of the marriage on the ground of respondent's misconduct with a woman name Ida Wilmot. The petitioner and respondent were married at San Francisco (California) on February 22, 1901, at the Calvary Presbyterian Church, petitioner being at that time 20 years of age, and respondent 35. A statement of the petitioner's case has already appeared. The suit was before the Court a few days ago, and was then adjourned to enable his Honor to consider, among other things, whether the petitioner, having absented herself from the respondent for a considerable time without his consent, was justified in now coming to the Court for relief in consequence of the misconduct of the respondent, as charged in the petition.

Further evidence on behalf of the petitioner was called, and Albert Slattery, a stage carpenter, stated that he first knew respondent about the beginning of 1900. At that time the respondent was an actor. After 1900 witness lost sight of him for seven or eight months, and at the end of that time he met him in Sydney, when respondent told him that he had married a Miss Hunt. Witness also gave evidence as to respondent's relations with another woman, not the petitioner. The woman referred to was not going under the name of Mrs. Buchanan, but under her theatrical name.

His Honor, in delivering judgment, said there were several matters in the case which called for vigilance and reasonable inquiry on the part of the Court, and as far as he could he had investigated them. There was no doubt that the respondent was guilty of misconduct with Ida Wilmot between September 6, 1908, and May, 1910, in New South Wales. The next question was whether, at the time of the institution of the suit the respondent was domiciled in New South Wales. Even now the evidence on that point was not as satisfactory as he could wish, but he thought that there was sufficient to establish that respondent was domiciled in Sydney when petitioner commenced her suit for divorce. The next question was whether the petitioner, by absenting herself from the respondent for eight years without his consent, had not disentitled herself to relief; but after hearing the argument of counsel for petitioner, and the cases cited by him, he thought his contention was correct. Undoubtedly the cases showed that if a wife, under circumstances such as the present, had recourse to the Court, and obtained a decree of judicial separation, she was not debarred by reason of that decree from suing for divorce on the ground of the husband's subsequent infidelity. He could see no difference in principle between such a case and the present, and therefore the fact that the petitioner left her husband without his consent, on first learning of his misconduct, did not now debar her from relief.

Decree nisi, returnable in six months.

DUAL APPLICATIONS.

SOCIETIES OF ENGINEERS.

Mr. Milner Stephen (instructed by Mr. C. A. Coghlan) appeared for the Amalgamated Society of Engineers (New South Wales district), for the institution of a board for engineers in the employ of the Chief Railway Commissioner.

Mr. Coyle (instructed by Mr. P. K. White) appeared for the Australasian Society of Engineers; Mr. J. S. Cargill (Solicitor for Railways and Tramways) for the Chief Commissioner; and Mr. Croft for the Amalgamated Railways and Tramways Association.

Mr. Coyle asked that the present application should be allowed to stand over until the hearing of the general application on Friday next. The grounds of objection to the application being proceeded with, were based on the fact that the Australasian Society's application was before the Court, when the Amalgamated Society came along and wanted a board. At that time the Australasian Society waived its rights, in so far as the Amalgamated Society was not properly before the Court. The present application was merely an endeavour to have the matters of the two societies tried together. This application had been made as late as Monday, and the Australasian Society had not been served with a notice.

Mr. Cargill said that at the present time there were employees in the railway service embraced by the classes mentioned in the application. These men were already working under various awards.

Mr. Coyle: The members of my society have not had an opportunity of discussing this application, as we have not yet been served. The application was put in on Monday, but prior to this it should have come before a meeting of the members of the Amalgamated Society. Now there was actually a meeting of this society on Tuesday. Surely the motion should have been placed before the meeting prior to the application being made.

Mr. Milner Stephen: The general meeting alluded to was called on a different matter altogether.

Mr. Coyle: The other society may or may not want a board, but it is an absolute certainty that we do.

His Honor allowed the application to stand over till the hearing on Friday.

COLD STORAGE AWARD.

In the matter of the Cold Storage and Ice Manufacturers' (Country) Board, for the nomination of a chairman, Mr. H. de B. O'Rielly, barrister-at-law, was appointed.

SUMMONS FOR PENALTY.

Mr. Croft appeared for the secretary of the Metropolitan Board of Water Supply and Sewerage Employees' Association, in a summons for penalty against the Water and Sewerage Board for an alleged breach of the award in regard to Alexander Fraser, employed as a vent-shaft man.

Mr. T. K. Waldron (Messrs. Dawson, Waldron, and Glover) appeared for the defendants.

It was pointed out on behalf of the association, that Fraser was entitled to 11s 4d a day under the award.

The defence submitted that the man was not embraced in the section of the award, as intended by the association. He was a second-class leading vent-shaft man, and did not come under the category of a first-class vent-shaft employee.

His Honor found in favour of the association. Second-class leading men, his Honor said, came under the heading of leading vent-shaft men in the award.

A nominal fine of 1s was imposed.

COKE-WORKERS' BOARD.

An application for the constitution of a board was made by the Cokeworkers' Association of New South Wales.

His Honor recommended to the Minister the constitution of a Cokeworkers' (Western) Board for the industry of all persons employed in coke works carried on in connection with any of the western collieries, and at any other coke works in the western districts, excluding all persons under existing boards or awards. One member to represent each side. Similar provision was made for the northern districts.

The constitution of the boards being agreed upon, the matter was then allowed to stand over till May 26, so that certain persons engaged in the industry might be notified of the constitution of the board, in order that they may appear on May 26 to nominate a representative.

DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Judge Murray.)

QUARRY AT CURL CURL.

Judgment was reserved in the case in which Mary Mulroney proceeded against the Warringah Shire Council for damages. The statement of claim set out that defendants broke and entered certain land belonging to plaintiff at Curl Curl, Manly, blasted and carried away certain stone, and thus reduced and damaged the value of the land; secondly, that defendants took away and disposed of certain stone belonging to plaintiff; and, thirdly, that defendants converted the stone to their own use. Plaintiff claimed £70 under each count, but not more than £70 in all.

The defence submitted that the land on which the quarry was situated was outside the boundary of the original Crown grant, and, therefore, plaintiff was not entitled to claim.

Mr. G. W. Ash appeared for plaintiff; and Mr. L. Armstrong for defendants.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Backhouse.)

Mr. H. Harris, Crown Prosecutor.

MISSING CHAIRS.

Francis William Herman Seaton was charged with stealing, or receiving, two chairs at Petersham, on February 15, the property of William Henry Sherrell. He pleaded not guilty, and was defended by Mr. Frawley. The Crown case was that the missing garden chairs were traced to the possession of the accused.

The jury acquitted the accused on the direction of his Honor.

SENTENCES.

Claude Humphries, found guilty of inflicting grievous bodily harm upon Ernest Alfred Plummer, a tram conductor, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment with hard labour, in Goulburn Gaol, the friends of the accused to be at liberty to petition on the following day for release on license.

Richard Raymond, found guilty of false pretences, was sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour in Goulburn Gaol, for 12 months, then to find a surety in £50 for good behaviour for two years, and in default of finding surety, to serve another 12 months' hard labour. His Honor stated that, if friends would come to the accused's assistance, he would be prepared to recommend his release after serving a few months' imprisonment.

George Charles Mackel, who pleaded guilty to bigamously marrying Elizabeth Charlotte Brooks, was sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour in Goulburn Gaol for 12 months. Leave was given to petition for release on license at once.

Bernard Schdroski, who pleaded guilty to stealing jewellery, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment with hard labour in Darlinghurst Gaol. Leave to petition was allowed after three months.

DAMAGED WINDOW.

William Beale pleaded not guilty to a charge of maliciously injuring a plateglass window, the property of Rowland Hill Ducker.

The Crown case was that the window was broken twice, and accused was heard to say in a hotel that he had smashed it once, and would do so again. The defence was an alibi.

The jury found the accused guilty, and he was remanded for sentence.

APPEAL COURT.

(Before Judge Rogers.)

APPEAL DISMISSED.

Richard Chantler appealed against the order made on February 15, at the Central Police Court, by Mr. Maitland, D.S.M., for the payment of 15s a week to his wife, Adelia Chantler, for maintenance for a period of six months. The appeal was dismissed, and the order confirmed with £3 3s costs.

MOTION TO OUST ALDERMEN.

A NOVEL POSITION.

ENFIELD SANITARY RATES.

Yesterday, before Mr. Acting Justice Ferguson, sitting in Chambers, Mr. O'Reilly, who was instructed by Mr. R. E. Begg, appeared on behalf of William Arthur Walker, land agent, in support of a motion under section 72 of the Local Government Act, 1906, by which the respondent Josiah William Richards had been called upon to show cause why he should not be ousted from the office of alderman of the municipal council of Enfield, on the ground that at the time of his nomination he had not paid certain sanitary rates. Mr. P. J. Clines appeared for the respondent, to oppose the motion. The case was before his Honor on Wednesday last, when the facts were stated, and the hearing was now resumed.

Mr. O'Reilly submitted that the council had made a charge for sanitary purposes in pursuance of the powers conferred upon it by section 103 of the Act. It was admitted that the charge in this particular case has not been paid either to the contractor or to the municipality, and, therefore, there was admittedly a charge due by respondent, which had not been paid seven days before the nomination. The position was an extraordinary commentary on the way in which the affairs of the municipality were conducted.

His Honor: That is to say, allowing a contractor to make an arrangement with the ratepayers outside the council.

Mr. O'Reilly said that even if the contractor Olsen was the agent of the council, section 179 of the Act provided that these sanitary fees or charges should be paid into the funds of the council, and, therefore, the provision of the contract allowing Olsen to collect the charges for his own remuneration for the work was ultra vires; and the only contract they could make which would be intra vires was that payment should be made to the council in the terms of the Act of Parliament. He cited Sanderson v Borough of Tamworth, 2 Commonwealth Law Reports, page 214.

Mr. Clines, on the other side, argued that the charge was not due to the council, but to Olsen, under the council's contract with him. The respondent had been duly elected as alderman, and the present motion was an attempt to oust him on a bare technicality. That being so, the applicant was bound to establish his case beyond reasonable doubt, and he had not done so. The contract between the Enfield Council and the contractor Olsen was intra vires, and in support of that he cited section 86 of the Local Government Act. It was usual for the council to enter into such contracts in the past, and it was similar to that involved in the case of Sanderson v Borough of Tamworth. He submitted that the council had power to waive any right to receive these sanitary charges, and to contract them away to the contractor, and, apart from that consideration, he submitted that there was no evidence that any fees were payable by respondent to the council.

The further hearing was adjourned till Monday next. The case of Walker v Marlow was also adjourned.

AN UNLICENSED MOTORIST.

Before Mr. Payten, S.M., on Friday, at the Water Police Summons Court, James Cunningham, of 145 William-street, was proceeded against for having on October 15, 1910, not being a person exempted by the regulations for motor traffic, did drive a motor car in King-street, he not being licensed so to drive. It was stated that defendant drove a big car in the street, and nearly knocked Detective-Inspector Jones down. He then drove off without stopping. Defendant had no license, and had been evading service of the summons. A fine of £1 was imposed, with 6s costs, or in default seven days' imprisonment.

MORE ELECTRIC LIGHT FOR MANLY.

The demand for electric light and power has kept pace with the progress of Manly. Now one of Sydney's largest suburbs, and as a seaside resort comparing with any other place in the world, electric current has entered largely into the public and private lighting, and numerous buildings require current for lifts, etc. A new company, to be called the Manly Electric Supply Co., Ltd., is taking over the existing plant, and with a promise from the Manly Council for the new company to have the sole privilege to supply electric light and power for the next twenty years, along with a considerable private demand, a large quantity of current will be required. The capital is £20,000, divided into 20,000 shares of £1 each. 4000 shares go to the vendors as part payment, 1500 shares are offered for public subscription, payable 5/ per share on application, 5/ per share on allotment, and the balance in calls at intervals of two and four months. The public subscription list is about to be closed, and application must be made at once to the Brokers of the Company, Messrs. Titmus and Quinan, and Mr. R. S. Hill, 100 Pitt-street; the Auditors, Messrs. Johnson and Johnson, George and Wynyard streets; the Secretary, Alexander Spence, 1 and 4 Imperial-buildings, 16 O'Connell-street; or the Bank of Australasia. The estimated profit per annum is 12 per cent. on £15,800 called up capital. The Directors are all well-known Sydney business men.—Advt.

THE ALLIANCE HOTELS, Ltd.—List closes next Friday. After then shares at a premium. Office, 32 Elizabeth-street.—Advt.

AN INVENTOR'S STILL.

DEFENDANT FINED £50.

At the Redfern Police Court yesterday, before Mr. Smithers, S.M., Donald M'Pherson, of Alexandria, was charged with having upon his premises at Park-street, Alexandria, an illicit still, and his son, Kenneth M'Pherson, was charged with having the still under his control. Mr. J. W. Abigail appeared for both defendants, who pleaded not guilty.

Inspector Donohoe, of the Customs Department, stated that on April 28 he went to M'Pherson's house in Park-street, Alexandria, and said to him, "I understand there is an illicit still here," and he replied, "No, there is not." Witness made a search, and found the still in the loft of a shed at the corner of the yard. It was an illicit still. The defendant Kenneth M'Pherson then came on the scene, and the defendant Donald M'Pherson, in reply to a question as to what the article was used for, replied that his boy had been experimenting. The boy showed witness a kerosene tin on the ground, and said he had been experimenting with sugar and molasses. Witness examined the contents of the tin, and found it to be wash. Witness arrested both defendants. The still could be used for making spirits. The wash was made from sugar and molasses. Neither of the defendants had a license in any way.

For the defence, Kenneth M'Pherson stated that he was a printer by trade, and employed his spare time in experimenting. He produced a number of books from which he studied, and from which he got his ideas in experimenting. He had made acetylene gas and electric batteries. He had invented a dynamo for electric lighting. He had tried to make a mould for phonographic records. He had made a powder for copper-plating. He had an improvement for the exhaust box of a motor car. He used the apparatus in court for making acetic acid. The stuff in the kerosene tin was made from black sugar, malt, and molasses. It fermented by being left alone. He made white vinegar. His father had seen the apparatus, and so had the neighbours, and the neighbours had come in and looked at it. It was made after the still pattern. He put some of the wash through, but only got acetic acid. He never distilled whisky or spirits out of it. The entire lot only cost him about 10s. He had had the apparatus for about three weeks, and did not know that it was a still.

Donald M'Pherson gave corroborative evidence about his son doing experimenting work. The place was all open, and the still or whatever it was could be seen from across the road. Witness never asked his son what he was doing with it. To the magistrate: Witness was a vinegar brewer. Several neighbours gave evidence that they had seen young M'Pherson experimenting. One lady said she got an electric shock from one of his inventions.

The magistrate said he would dismiss the case against Donald M'Pherson, but he found the son, Kenneth M'Pherson, guilty of having the still under his control. He was fined £50, costs 6s, in default imprisonment for two months.

GREAT CHANGE FROM CHANGE OF FOOD.

The brain depends much more on the stomach than we are apt to suppose until we take thought in the matter. Feed the stomach on proper food, easy to digest, and containing the proper amount of phosphates, and the healthy brain will respond to all demands. A notable housewife in Buffalo writes:—

"The doctor diagnosed my trouble as a 'nervous affection of the stomach.' I was actually so nervous that I could not sit still for five minutes to read the newspaper, and to attend to my household duties was simply impossible. I doctored all the time with remedies, but medicine did no good.

"My physician put me on all sorts of diet, and I tried many kinds of cereal foods, but none of them agreed with me. I was almost discouraged, and when I tried Grape-Nuts I did so with many misgivings—I had no faith that it would succeed where everything else had failed.

"But it did succeed, and you don't know how glad I am that I tried it. I feel like a new person. I have gained in weight, and I don't have that terrible burning sensation in my stomach any more. I feel so strong again that I am surprised at myself. The street noises that used to irritate me so, I never notice now, and my mind is so clear that my household duties are a real pleasure."

There's a reason.

"Now, why was this great change made in this woman?"

The stomach and the brain had not been supplied with the right kind of food to rebuild and strengthen the nerve centres in these organs. It is absolute folly to try to do this with medicine. There is but one sure way, and that is to quit the old food that has failed and take on Grape-Nuts food, which is more than half digested in the process of manufacture, and is rich in the phosphate of potash, contained in the natural grain, which unites with albumen and water—the only three substances that will make up the soft grey filling in the thousands of delicate nerve centres in the brain and body. Grape-Nuts food is a sure road back to health in all such cases.

MR. LLOYD-GEORGE'S BILL.

UNEMPLOYMENT AND SICKNESS.

LONDON, May 4.

In the House of Commons, to-day, Mr. Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, introduced the bill dealing with insurance against sickness and unemployment.

The bill provides for compulsory deductions from wages of 4d per week in the case of men, and 3d for women, down to 1d.

Employers contribute 3d and the State 2d.

The Chancellor explained that the voluntary scheme will admit members on payment of 7d weekly, but those over the age of 45 will pay more. All will receive medical attention.

The Government is to devote £1,500,000 to assist the building of sanatoriums for consumptives, and a further million yearly for the maintenance of patients.

Sick allowance for men is fixed at 10s weekly for the first three months, 5s the next three months, and 5s thereafter if permanently disabled. The benefits in the case of women are slightly less.

The Chancellor expects that the surplus after 15½ years will permit of old-age pensions being paid at 65 years of age, and increased pensions will be paid those who work after they have reached 65 years of age.

THE CHANCELLOR'S SPEECH.

LONDON, May 5.

The House of Commons was crowded last night, when the Chancellor of the Exchequer rose to introduce the bill dealing with insurance against sickness, invalidity, and unemployment.

Mr. Lloyd George was greeted with general cheers. His voice was fairly strong, and he occupied two hours in unfolding the details of the measure, which is to be known as the National Insurance Bill, and which, he pointed out, is to come into operation on May 1, 1912.

The Chancellor paid a high tribute to Mr. John Burns, President of the Local Government Board, for the services he had rendered in connection with the scheme.

SICKNESS AND INVALIDITY.

In the course of his explanation of the measure, Mr. Lloyd George said that for the first year the employers would contribute £9,000,000 towards the sickness insurance, the workers £11,000,000, and the State £1,742,000. The State in the second year would contribute £3,359,000, and in the third year £4,563,000. The first year's benefits would amount to £7,000,000, and they would rise gradually to £20,000,000 in 1916.

He pointed out that accidents were not included in the scheme.

The Chancellor said that county health committees would be formed to administer the sanatoriums.

A maternity benefit of 30s would be allowed, with a provision that the woman should not return to work within a month of the birth of her child.

No sick pay would be allowed a man or woman when their illness was due to their own misconduct.

The scheme, he pointed out, would apply to all men and women who were not liable for income tax, and it was estimated that there would be 9,200,000 men and 3,900,000 women compulsory, and 1,000,000 voluntary contributors, the latter including waiters, cab-drivers, and boys and girls under the age of 16 years. Special arrangements would be made for soldiers and sailors.

Mr. Lloyd-George went on to say that the sickness funds would be collected by means of cards, whereto the employers and workmen would affix stamps, which the workers would send to various approved benefit societies having local committees, such as the Foresters and Oddfellows. Workmen who were not members of such societies would be collected into a body called the Post Office Contributors.

UNEMPLOYMENT PROPOSALS.

Dealing with the unemployment proposals, the Chancellor said that these would deal only with engineering and building trades, embracing 2,400,000 workers. The employers and the workmen would pay 2½d each weekly, the State bearing a fourth of the total cost. There would be special abatements in the case of employers paying their men by the year.

Unemployed engineers would receive 7s weekly for 15 weeks, and unemployed members of the building trade would receive 6s weekly for that period. Workers would receive nothing when dismissed for misconduct or when there was a strike or lock-out.

The men's contributions would amount to £1,100,000, and the employers' to £800,000. The cost to the State would begin at £750,000.

The claims would be made through the labour exchanges, which would offer work, and there would be a Court of Referees to decide whether a man must take a job or not.

Trade-unions insuring men against unemployment would be allowed to pay the benefit and receive the amount the State offered.

The two schemes, said Mr. Lloyd-George in conclusion, would not involve any additional taxation, but there would be no remission.

OPPOSITION ASSISTANCE.

On behalf of the Opposition, Mr. Austen Chamberlain promised goodwill and assistance, but he reserved his criticism of the measure.

HOW THE BILL WAS RECEIVED.

LONDON, May 5.

The Unionist members of the House of Commons are delighted with those provisions of the bill that deal with sickness and invalidity. They are, however, less emphatic in their approval of the provisions regarding unemployment, believing that they will add to the cost of manufacture; and the view is expressed that they should be accompanied by some form of protection against goods produced under other conditions.

The Liberals are enthusiastic regarding the whole scheme.

The members of the Labour party generally approve the bill, but express regret that the unemployment insurance has not been made more general.

The House also adopted the new rubric permitting the consecrated elements to be taken from open Communion to sick persons in their homes.

The House of Laymen does not propose to touch the Prayer Book, but suggests an appendix of special services.

CORONATION COMMUNION.

BISHOP OF HEREFORD CRITICISED.

LONDON, May 5.

In Convocation the Rt. Rev. Herbert Ryle, Bishop of Winchester, raised as a matter of urgency a debate upon the invitation of the Rt. Rev. John Percival, Bishop of Hereford, to the Nonconformists to join in the Coronation Communion at Hereford Cathedral.

The Bishop of Hereford defended himself.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Randall Davidson, disapproved of his action; but eventually the subject was allowed to drop.

The matter was hotly discussed in the Lower House.

AERONAUTICS.

AN ILL-STARRED AIRSHIP.

"MORNING POST" DIRIGIBLE WRECKED.

LONDON, May 5.

The Lebaudy airship, bought for the nation by a fund organised by the "Morning Post" has been wrecked at Farnborough, on her first trial since her accident on October 26 last.

There was a large crowd present to witness the trial, and the airship ascended in a perfect calm.

After the flight had lasted an hour the wind freshened, and as the airship was descending she got completely out of control.

The soldiers on the ground failed to catch the towing ropes, and women and children ran screaming from the airship's path, but the trailing ropes tripped scores of them.

The airship just missed the balloon factory, and fouled a clump of trees, when the gas-bag burst with a report that could be heard a mile away.

The airship is a complete wreck, and is now enveloping a three-storied house.

The crew of seven had miraculous escapes, none experiencing anything more than a severe shaking.

The Lebaudy airship, which has come to such an untimely end at Farnborough, was purchased last year with the money raised under the auspices of the "Morning Post" National Airship Fund. She had a gas-capacity of 353,155 cubic feet; was 337ft in length, and 39ft in diameter. There were three ballonnets, with a capacity of about 27,550 cubic feet, one in the centre, and one at each end. The two end ballonnets were to enable the navigator to direct the ship to some extent in the vertical plane by the simple operation of increasing the quantity of air in one of them, and so depressing that end of the vessel. There were horizontal and vertical surfaces for assisting stability, and the usual adjustable vertical and horizontal rudders. She was driven by two Panhard-Levassor motors, each of 135-h.p., actuating two propellers. The car could carry 20 persons. This airship was far larger than any previous airship of the Lebaudy type. She made a successful voyage from Moisson to Aldershot on October 26, but the envelope was accidentally ripped open in the shed after the voyage.

PREFERENCE.

SIR JOHN FORREST'S VIEWS.

LONDON, May 4.

Sir John Forrest in the course of an interview with a representative of the "Morning Post" said he was inclined to believe that the question of preference had reached a stage at which it might be dealt with by the Dominions in conference among themselves, rather than by a conference with British representatives.

If the Dominions, he said, first agreed upon what they were prepared to offer there would not be much "banging, bolting, and barring of doors."

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

CABINET STILL DIVIDED.

LONDON, May 4.

The Premier, Mr. Asquith, announced in the House of Commons that he had received the resolution passed by the Australian Senate, declaring that female suffrage had acted beneficially.

He said he regretted that the minds of the members of the Government were still divided regarding the expediency of introducing female suffrage.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

ACCEPTS CONSERVATIVES' PROPOSAL.

TASMANIAN PREMIER'S VIEWS.

LONDON, May 5.

Sir N. E. Lewis, Premier of Tasmania, who has just arrived in London, in an interview with a press representative, declared that the most important duty of the Imperial Conference was to evolve a scheme for laying a solid basis for Imperial defence.

The local defence of Australia, he declared, was part and parcel of a well-considered scheme applying to the Empire.

In the course of the interview the Tasmanian Premier detailed the resources of his State, laying particular stress upon her mining fields.

H.M.S. INVINCIBLE.

A SERIOUS MISHAP.

WEIGHT BUCKLES FRAMES IN DOCK.

LONDON, May 5.

H.M.S. Invincible was docked at Portsmouth on Tuesday for a complete overhaul, and when the full weight of the cruiser rested on the wooden blocks her steel frames strengthening her double bottom suddenly buckled and collapsed. The ship's weight bent the frames like a bow, bulging them out on either side.

When the vessel was refloated and examined serious injuries were disclosed.

H.M.S. Invincible, which is known as a single calibre Dreadnought cruiser, has a displacement of 17,250 tons, and was launched in 1907. Until the Indefatigable came on the scene she was the fastest cruiser in the navy. Her designed i.h.p. is 41,000, and her designed speed 25 knots, but she has travelled up to 28.6 knots. Her length is 530ft, beam 78.5ft, and draught 26ft. She carries eight 12in guns, sixteen 4in guns, and five torpedo tubes. She cost £1,768,995.

THE PARKER EXPEDITION.

EXCITEMENT IN JERUSALEM.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST EXPLORERS.

LONDON, May 4.

One of the promoters of the archaeological expedition under Captain Montagu Parker regards the story of the transfer of treasure and relics from Jerusalem as a fabrication, as the workings of the party are half a mile from the Mosque of Omar.

A private letter states that the secrecy observed in connection with the digging operations by the explorers aroused an outbreak of fanaticism.

The attendants at the Mosque of Omar tried to lynch the Sheikh Khalil, believing that he, being in charge of the sacred places at night, was bribed by the explorers to allow them to enter.

Reuter's correspondent at Constantinople says that the Porte has appointed a special commission to investigate the matter.

There was great alarm on April 21, caused by reports that the Mosque had been profaned. The Governor's life was threatened.

Everything is now quiet.

UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN.

THE PEACE CONVENTION.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. JAMES BRYCE.

OTTAWA, May 5.

Mr. James Bryce, British Ambassador is at present on a visit to Earl Grey Governor-General of Canada.

In an interview yesterday, in regard to the proposed Peace Convention between Britain and the United States, he declared that satisfactory progress was being made. President Taft, he said, had been much gratified with Britain's reception of his proposals.

Mr. Bryce expressed the hope that the Anglo-American arbitration would prove a lesson to the whole world.

The Ambassador refused to discuss the question of reciprocity between Canada and the United States, but said that the Americans had not made it a party question to the extent to which the Canadians had done.

ANGRY MINERS DUMP COAL.

BOSTON TEA PARTY RECALLED.

VANCOUVER, May 5.

Emulating the "Boston Harbour Tea Party" of 1773, a mob at Cordova, Alaska, enraged at the non-settlement of the Alaskan coal lands cases by the Washington legal authorities, threw hundreds of tons of Canadian coal into the harbour, declaring that, while millions of tons of Alaskan coal were unmined, foreign coal would not be used in the country.

The Alaska Steamship Company owns the coal, having imported it from British Columbia.

The Mayor of Cordova has called upon the Governor for help to suppress the mob.

GENERAL CABLE NEWS.

LONDON, May 4.

The death is announced of Mr. Walter Savill, senior, of the shipping firm of Shaw, Savill, and Company.

The balance-sheet of the Trust and Agency Company of Australasia, Limited, shows a profit of £57,825. The sum of £2512 has been carried forward.

The "Financial Times" attributes the general firmness of tone in regard to shares in land companies in Australia to the result of the recent referendum.

The Prince of Wales will be invested with the Order of the Garter on June 10.

The directors of the Central and West Boulder Gold Mines, Ltd., propose to reconstruct the company. The basis of the new company will be 250,000 shares at 10s instead of £1, with a new liability of 2s per share.

TORONTO, May 5.

The Appeal Court of the Methodist Church has decided against female representation of Methodist Congregations at the General Conference. The British Columbia district brought the matter forward as a test case.

MOTOR MISHAP.

FOLLOWING AN EIGHT-OAR CREW.

ALMOST A TRAGEDY.

An accident—which almost became a tragedy—occurred on Thursday afternoon on the Parramatta River, while the crews were practising for the interstate eight-oar race. As it was Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Shepherd, Mr. Dawson, visitors from Victoria, and an engineer were thrown into the water, and were rescued just in the nick of time.

The motor launch Max was following the Victorian crew, the coach being on board, when it collided with the steam launch Eva, belonging to the Public Works Department, but lent for the occasion to the Rowing Association. The force of the impact was such that the Max, which was struck near the stern, reeled right over, took in a quantity of water, and for a few seconds threatened to capsize. The three passengers and the engineer were thrown into the stream. The Max managed to right itself, but glided out of reach of those struggling in the water. Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Shepherd could swim, but the three gentlemen kept Mrs. Shepherd afloat until the Eva returned to their assistance. They were hastily taken on board, and the launch returned to town, and Mrs. Shepherd, who was suffering from shock, was attended to by a doctor. The gentlemen beyond a drenching were little the worse for their misadventure.

Yesterday on inquiry it was found that Mrs. Shepherd had almost recovered from her immersion.

THE STRUGGLE FOR LIFE.

MUSHROOM CLUMP.

BURSTS ON ASPHALT FOOTPATH.

"Mushroom growth" is not usually associated with great strength. There are exceptions. One interesting one was to be seen in Loftus-street yesterday, perhaps to-day, if the typical small boy has not happened along. He nearly always does. Right beneath the window of the New South Wales Mortgage, Land, and Agency Company's office a clump of mushrooms in its struggle for life has forced and bulged up the asphalt on the footpath near the wall, until the former cracked and burst.

It seems incredible that a clump of mushrooms should possess such force, even although it was at the edge of the asphalt, near the wall. Yet it had done so. We are informed that some three months ago exactly the same thing happened, and a clump of fine mushrooms actually matured. New asphalt was then laid.

But the mushrooms were not beaten. Is this a new problem that the civic authorities have to face?

EDUCATION METHODS.

WESTERN AUSTRALIAN SUGGESTIONS.

PERTH, Friday.

The first annual conference of the school board has passed resolutions demanding a rather wide extension of the Education Department's sphere.

The demands include the appointment of an agricultural and horticultural instructor for the school districts, special moral instructors in sex physiology, to be given by approved voluntary instructors, and also that in certain districts certain school-rooms be provided for aboriginal and half-caste children.

CO-OPERATIVE CONCERNS.

UNION VENTURES UNSUCCESSFUL.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

The ventures of local unionists into business, particularly with regard to a bakery and wood yard, have not been successful, and matters have been seriously considered at several recent meetings of various unions.

What occurred is being kept quiet, but it is an open secret that the unionists will have to pay a special levy to keep the concerns going, or the concerns will collapse. The co-operative union concerns have, from all available accounts, proved a failure.

BURNING A BOOK.

"NOT FIT TO CIRCULATE."

IN GREAT DEMAND BY PUBLIC.

WELLINGTON, Friday.

The burning of a book belonging to the School of Arts by Mr. C. H. Barton, ex-M.L.A., was brought under the notice of the committee in a report by the secretary. He explained that Miss Barton had obtained some books in the usual way, and on returning them to the librarian found that one entitled —— was missing. Miss Barton explained that her father had got hold of the book, and, declaring it not to be a fit book to be in circulation, ordered it to be destroyed immediately. As it happened, there were two copies of the book in the library, and after the incident he endeavoured to get it in order to see if there was any reason for Mr. Barton's action, but the demand on it was so great that he could not obtain the book. Mr. Brade, another member of the committee, said he had the book, and was pestered out of his life on account of others wanting it. Eventually it was decided to draw Mr. Barton's attention to the rule providing that any member mutilating or defacing a book should pay the cost, and also to point out to him that the proper course to pursue if he discovered anything wrong with a book was to report the matter to the committee, and leave the committee to deal with it.

BATTLE OF CARNE'S HILL.

LIGHT HORSEMEN IN ACTION.

ENEMY DRIVEN BACK.

LORD AND LADY DUDLEY INTERESTED.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

BIVOUAC, MOUNT CREAR, Friday.

The first day's operations in the big two days tactical scheme have been brought to a conclusion with honours on all sides, and the troops are at present bivouacked in the vicinity of Mount Crear, about a mile north-west of Narellan, on the Camden tram line. The operation order was kept a close secret until late last night, and when it was issued it proved indeed a surprise-packet to all concerned, as it took them over a good deal more country than has been set them as a manoeuvring ground in recent years.

Shortly stated, the operation order presumed that the main body of a strong hostile force was bivouacked three miles west of Liverpool. Its outposts commanded the country in the vicinity of Hoxton Park, and along the banks of the Sydney water supply canal.

It was also reported to the General Officer Commanding our local force that the enemy were in a strong position at Carne's Hill, and from that vantage point were able to command the three main roads to Liverpool, which town they intended to besiege. The enemy's advance guard was represented by the 1st A.L.H., under Lieut.-Col. Cox, C.B., and it was this regiment which had made good Carne's Hill. Colonel Onslow, the brigadier of the 1st Light Horse Brigade, was in command of the advance guard of the local army, and was acting under instructions from the General Officer Commanding the main body, which was bivouacked at Cunningham's on the Illawarra-road, about two miles south-east of Liverpool. This was the disposition of the troops this morning, and in order to dislodge Lieut.-Col. Cox from his strong position Colonel Onslow set out from camp with the 2nd and 3rd Light Horse Regiments shortly after 8 o'clock. They marched through Liverpool in faultless column of route, but exception was taken to this proceeding by the Inspector-General. Major-General Kirkpatrick, on the ground that Colonel Onslow was presuming when he allowed his men to march through Liverpool in a manner which would have rendered them helpless in the event of attack by reason of having been cut off. Major-General Kirkpatrick, in commenting on the march from the camp, said that although Colonel Onslow knew that Liverpool was not yet invested by the enemy, still he had no knowledge that the enemy had not covered the ground from Carne's Hill to Glenfield, and if this had been the case they could have got over the ford across George's River at this place and made good the Liverpool camp position. Colonel Onslow in order to effectively stop any further encroachment on the part of the enemy sent out orders that a general advance should be made on Bringelly and Hoxton Park, Carne's Hill, and the Great Southern roads were selected as the approaches. The second Regiment of Light Horse was ordered to advance via Hoxton Park and Cowpasture-road, thence across country to Carne's Hill, while the 3rd Regiment received instructions to march on Bringelly, via the Great Southern-road, Denham's Court, and Trig 405. Thus simultaneous attacks from three different quarters on the Carne's Hill position were arranged. Colonel Cox appreciated his solid position, but, in order to make assurance doubly sure, he sent out squadrons to take positions at the Trig 405, and along the Cowpasture-road. The determination came too late, however, for, although it was backed up by a splendid rush on the Trig 405, the officer commanding the Thirds got in before the enemy's squadron, and held the Trig safely. The squadron then had to fall back on Carne's Hill. The squadron sent out to hold the Cowpasture-road, for the enemy was similarly unsuccessful. After making good the country towards Hoxton Park, they were cut off by the Seconds, and, though not captured, they were practically put out of action for the time being, as they had to retire across country to the west of the canal, and come up to the Carne's Hill base from the rear along the Bringelly-road. During the engagement which ensued when the opposing forces got into touch with one another a squadron of the Seconds got into trouble when making across country from the Carne's Hill-road, towards the Trig 405. This strip was covered by the enemy's guns, and, had the step been taken in actual warfare, all who had this exposed themselves would have assuredly gone under.

The "cease fire" was sounded shortly after 12, and a hurried lunch partaken of. During the afternoon the Third Regiment took over the defensive, and from thence on till the conclusion of the day's operations, they filled the role of an enemy's rear guard, fighting a retreating action as they fell back on Camden. The regiment was given a start of 15 minutes, and the 1st and 2nd Regiments in advance guard role started in pursuit. Both sides kept in touch until Mount Crear was reached, and here the bivouac was arranged. The Army Service Corps, under Captain A. G. O'Donnell, filled a neutral part, and, assisted by the auxiliary transport, brought the blankets and other necessaries from the Liverpool camp to the bivouac.

Lord and Lady Dudley were interested spectators during the manoeuvres, and witnessed the operations from the vantage point at Carne's Hill.

TELEPHONE SERVICE.

NEW MOVE AT THE EXCHANGE.

The 31 sets of instruments available for use in connection with the automatic telephone system installed for experimental purposes in the G.P.O., have been placed in position, and everything is now ready for a careful test which will be watched by the departmental experts.

The test is of a preliminary nature. The various sections in the post-office have been connected, and the automatic principle will take its trial alongside the ordinary method of "calling."

Mr. Young, Deputy Postmaster-General, stated yesterday that though the board had provision for 100 subscribers, there were only 31 sets of instrument available, but that this number would be quite sufficient for giving the new system a fair trial. The test would be confined to the post-office, because of the difficulty in connecting with the ordinary exchange, but if this preliminary test were found to be satisfactory, the system might be tested under outside working conditions.

In reply to a question as to the progress being made with the transfer of subscribers from the magneto to the common battery board, Mr. Young said that the work was being steadily pushed ahead, but as the transfer had to be made without bringing the service to a halt, progress was necessarily slow. So far as could be seen, there was till three years work ahead before all the subscribers could be placed on the common battery, and meantime there was involved the heavy work of conducting two exchanges in the one room. However, as the number of subscribers on the magneto board became fewer and fewer, the service should become better and better. Mr. Young added that steps were being taken to give telephone attendants a more detailed knowledge of what was required of them, and in revised regulations about to be issued points suggested by complaints to the department were emphasised. It was proposed to make supervision over telephone attendants stricter, and in this way to make the service, from the public standpoint, more prompt and efficient.

AFTER SIXTY YEARS.

"MY NATIVE LAND."

MOST WONDERFUL PLACE IN THE WORLD.

GENERAL SIR CHARLES BURNETT'S OPINIONS.

"It is an absolutely wonderful place," said General Sir Charles Burnett, in the course of an interview, yesterday, at the Hotel Australia.

"I am proud of my native country, and I am glad to be back amongst you after all these years. The place has altered beyond recognition, but when in Melbourne I was able to pick several places out. It is a wonderful country, and the possibilities ahead of it are simply enormous. I am quite sure Australia will become a great factor in the world."

General Sir Charles Burnett has an interesting and picturesque personality. He was born in Woolloomooloo 68 years ago, and at an early age went to reside at St. Kilda, Melbourne. After spending some years in the southern State he was sent to England to be educated at Sandhurst for a military career. The last appointment held by Sir Charles Burnett was the western command in Great Britain, which he took over in 1907, and retained until a short time ago, when he retired from the service. He then determined to visit his native land, and it is with this object that he is in Sydney.

The General has had both an active and romantic career. He has served with distinction in many wars, both India—where he saw 25 years of military service—Afghanistan, Ashanti, and Egypt. He was present at the bombardment of Alexandria. He was on active service in Ashanti in 1873-4, in the Afghan campaign in 1876-8, and was at the defence of Kandahar in 1879-80. For all engagements he received medals and clasps, and on two occasions was mentioned in despatches. Subsequently he was the British military attache with the Japanese Army in the Russo-Japanese war.

AN ECHO OF THE FUTURE.

"I think Sydney Harbour one of the finest places I have ever seen in my life," continued Sir Charles. "That is saying a good deal, because I have seen very many fine places. But Sydney is a beautiful place, the scenery is exceptionally fine; in fact, it is a wonderful city set on a lovely harbour. I believe the harbour would take the whole of the fleets of the world. I regard Sydney—taken as a city, pure and simple—as a very fine, go-ahead place. But what it is to-day is only the echo of what it will be in the years to come. Nobody who has gone about the world and seen most things, as I have done, would wonder at its progress. I am not surprised at the strides it has made; it could not have been otherwise—it is its future that astonishes me. I am thinking about what it is to become. That is the most wonderful thing of all. Perhaps the greatness of its future is not fully realised, but I, who have seen so much of the world, can appreciate to some extent what it will be.

UNBOUNDED POSSIBILITIES.

"This country is endowed with great capabilities, and its possibilities are unbounded. If Australia is rightly directed she must become in the future a great factor in the settlement of the destiny of the world. No, it is not the present that is to be wondered at, but the future. The climate is magnificent. All that is wanted is to open up the land and get it settled. I am quite convinced that Sydney, as one of the ports of the great territory of New South Wales, will be a truly wonderful place in the years to come. As I said before, I have seen most beautiful places in the world, but Sydney is, in my opinion, the most beautiful of all. My admiration for it leads back to the question of its future, and so the future of this great continent. I am sure—and this is not a hasty opinion—that Australia, if properly looked after and wisely directed, will be capable of anything. This is, I assure you, a very pleasant thing for an old Australian to be able to say, and it is decidedly comforting to be able honestly to give such an opinion. After all, it is my native country, and the pleasing thing is that it comes up to the fulfilment of my affection for it.

PIONEER DAYS.

"It was my uncle, James Burnett, who explored the Burnett and Darling rivers. In recognition of his work in this connection he was made a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London. The Burnett River was named after him. He suffered terrible privations, and died shortly after his return. The hardships he had experienced in his exploration work were directly responsible for his death.

"I have been absent a long time, but you see I am closely identified with the country. It may be interesting to note that my brother founded the Blackheath Football Club, and that I played in the first match in 1859 or 1860. I am not quite sure if it was my brother who introduced the game of football into New Zealand, but I know that he was instrumental in its advance.

"During my short stay in Sydney I have seen some of the citizen soldiers. Those I have seen have struck me most favourably. I hope to have the opportunity of seeing them more closely before I leave the country.

"When I was in Melbourne the other day I was struck with the great changes which have taken place. When I left the country for England there were no houses between the city and St. Kilda, and where the Governor's House is now was Canvas Town, a place full of Chinese. Arriving at Melbourne, I went to Church-square, near Burnett-street, where I formerly lived. The old house was still there, but the rest of the city was altered out of practically all recognition. Of course, some of the streets I could trace, but the changes had been too great for me to do this to any extent.

"SAFETY OF AUSTRALIA.

"I hear that there is a rumour—or, at least, a fear—that some day there will be a Japanese invasion of this country. I know the Japanese pretty well, and I have a great admiration for them. I believe them to be a straight, upright, and honourable race. Personally, I do not believe that they have the slightest intention of coming here. They possess Formosa and Korea for expansion. In view of this extent of territory for surplus population, there is no reason why they should come here. I was in Manchuria with the Japanese, and have a great respect for them. I think Australia is quite safe, so far as the Japanese are concerned.

"I leave for New Zealand on Wednesday, but I intend returning to Sydney. I am a great sportsman, and I want to witness your races. I have heard a lot about the good racing that can be seen out here. Formerly, I was steward of the Western Indian Turf Club, consequently I am keen on the sport. I have always had strong sporting instincts. When at Sandhurst College I was captain of the cricket eleven and of the football team."

During his term of service in India Sir Charles Burnett was at one time in command of the Poona division, and subsequently he was appointed Commander-in-Chief of Madras.

A MALAY TRAPPED.

OPIUM SECURED.

HAUL REPRESENTS £480.

In addition to the eighty tins of opium which the Water Police captured on Thursday night, a further haul was made early yesterday morning, bringing the night's total up to 122 tins.

Constable Bishop, watching one of the ships at the Quay, saw a Malay loitering in a suspiciously aimless way, and inquired his business. Receiving an evasive reply, the alien was searched. He had nothing. As, however, the Malay was leaving, Bishop heard a noise almost at his feet, and replying to it saw a hand extended through a space between the planking of the wharf. In the hand was a tin of opium, which the officer took. The hand was put up again and again, until the 42 tins had been secured. Bishop made an attempt to seize the passing hand at the finish. As he did there was a splash in the water, and the man was seen swimming quickly in the direction of the North Shore ferry landing. Bishop left Customs-officer Atkinson in charge of his haul while he, with Constable McMaster and Customs Officer Haines, made a careful but resultless search of the wharfs. The value of the opium (122 tins) would be about £480.

Money advanced upon all securities. N.S.W. Mont de Piete D. and I. Co., Ltd., 74 Castlereagh-street, 74, Sydney; and 17 Hunter-street, Newcastle. Eustace Bennett, G. Mgr.—Advt.

GOLF ABROAD.

FRENCH PLAYER'S SUPERIORITY.

SCOTTISH PROFESSIONAL ARRIVES.

"Golf in England is at a higher level at present than ever before in the history of the game."

So says Mr. R. B. Martin, a prominent Scottish professional golfer, who has just arrived in Sydney.

The English professionals, too, says Mr. Martin, are easily ahead of their Scotch brothers as exponents of the game. But the latter he expects to soon reassert their supremacy.

Mr. Martin, who is 40 years of age, and of sturdy build, found the Scottish winters too severe, and has brought his wife and family to Sydney's more congenial climate, and hopes to secure an engagement with one of the clubs.

Though not a brilliant player, Mr. Martin has a splendid reputation as a teacher, and has had many of the leading players in the old country through his hands. He has been chief professional at various clubs in Scotland, including Kirkcaldy, Rosyth, and Morton Hall clubs.

Mr. Martin looks upon Arnaud Massy, the French professional, as the finest golfer the world has ever seen, and absolutely unapproachable as far as cleek play is concerned. Braid he considers the finest British player, though Taylor knows more about the game than anyone else.

He does not think that sufficient inducements can be held out to either Braid, Taylor, or Vardon to come to Australia, though Massy might be induced to come.

Mr. Martin has taken an active part in the politics of professional golf, and is the founder and late secretary of the Scottish Professional Golfers' Union, for which organisation he did a great deal of valuable work. He was primarily responsible for the initiation and carrying through of the many successful competitions promoted by the union, as also for the conduct of the Scottish professional championships at Barry, Cardross, Montrose, and Lossiemouth.

On the subject of standardisation of golf balls, a matter which is a burning question in England, Mr. Martin expresses the opinion that the golf ball is incapable of very much improvement, and that standardisation is quite unnecessary.

SHORTAGE OF DOMESTICS.

GOVERNMENT REPORT.

LARGE IMPORTATION RECOMMENDED.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

Misses Minchin and Walker, who were appointed by the Government to report upon the domestic servant problem in South Australia, have presented the result of their investigations.

In the course of a long report they state, "As the result of personal interviews, and by other means, we have collected 653 signed statements, 431 being from employers, and 222 from employees. The difficulty of obtaining and retaining servants is very great. The reasons given are various, but all point to insufficient supply, such as 'girls preferring factory life,' 'prosperity of the State,' 'farmers' daughters being kept at home instead of going to service,' and 'farmers having become employers.'"

Summarising their conclusions, Misses Minchin and Walker said: (1) There is overwhelming evidence that the supply of girls for domestic service is very far short of the demand. (2) No guarantee can be obtained or expected from individual employers without a knowledge of the capabilities of helpers, but there is no doubt that several hundreds of at least such girls would be eagerly sought for on arrival. (3) Domestic servants are, as a rule, well treated, receive good to large wages, plenty of holidays, and are, for the most part, well housed. (4) Many girls offering themselves for service are entirely untrained, and require teaching the rudiments of their work before they are of any use to employers. We recommended: The importation of a large number of carefully selected domestic helpers, and that training in domestic work and cookery should be part of the educational course for every girl in the Public schools. We would express regret that opportunities in this direction provided by the School of Mines are not more fully availed of by girls generally.

MR. TUDOR'S VISIT.

CUSTOM'S MINISTER RECEIVES DEPUTATION.

A POTENT INVENTION.

THE ASTONISHINGLY BIG VOTE.

Mr. Tudor, Minister for Customs, arrived in Sydney yesterday by express from Melbourne. He spent the greater part of the day in receiving callers, including 10 deputations, who brought under notice various matters chiefly connected with the interpretation of departmental regulations. One deputation represented firms interested in meat-canning. It was agreed that it was in the interests of all that the regulations dealing with the meat export trade should be strict, and should be binding equally upon all in the trade. Another deputation, interested in the sugar industry, stated that the Colonial Sugar Refining Company controlled, by a system of rebates or bonuses, the sugar trade of the Commonwealth, and was practically in a position to compel people to trade with it. Consideration of the representations made was promised.

One of Mr. Tudor's callers expressed the utmost faith in the virtues of a medical appliance which it was claimed would cure smallpox, cancer, plague, and practically all the ills that flesh is heir to, if used in time. The Minister had seen fit to prohibit the importation of literature dealing with this "invention," and the object of this visit was to prevail on him to withdraw his veto. Mr. Tudor does not see his way to do so.

Touching on political questions Mr. Tudor said he was somewhat surprised at the heavy vote against the referendum proposals of the Government. Nothing had yet been decided as to what future action would be taken by the party with regard to the amendments, but he assumed they would be resubmitted at the next general election. It could not be denied that those opposed to the amendment of the Constitution had made a supreme effort to secure the defeat of the Government proposals, and had not spared expenditure to that end. He himself had on two occasions been approached by canvassers and urged to vote against the referendum.

In reply to a question as to what the Federal Government was doing for the celebration of Coronation Day, Mr. Tudor said a sum of £2000 was to be divided among the States for expenditure as State Ministers saw fit, and the Government would be glad to co-operate with the States in making military displays. When informed that Mr. Carmichael, the Acting Treasurer, expected to receive from £80,000 to £100,000 from Commonwealth Customs revenue before the end of June, Mr. Tudor said he did not know what amount would be due, but whatever it was he assumed it would be paid over before the end of the financial year.

This afternoon Mr. Tudor will follow the interstate boat race, and to-morrow night he will leave by express for Melbourne.

OBSTRUCTING A TRAIN.

STONES ON THE RAILS.

BRISBANE, Friday.

A Toowoomba wire states that as a train which leaves Allora about 1.30 p.m. was approaching Hendon on Thursday the driver noticed some stones on the rails at a point known as Kates' Crossing. He was, fortunately, able to bring the train to a standstill before it reached the obstruction. The stones were removed, and the train arrived safely at Hendon. The matter was subsequently reported to the police, who are now making investigations.

STUNG BY A JELLY-FISH.

BRISBANE, Friday.

On Good Friday while some picnickers were bathing at Pioneer Bay a lad named Albert George was stung by a jellyfish. He became unconscious, and died within half an hour. The fish is described as consisting of thin blubber, with long threadlike tentacles which adhered to the lad's chest, stomach, and arms.

OVER THE CITY.

MAGNIFICENT FLIGHT.

CIRCLING THE POST-OFFICE CLOCK.

AVIATOR'S VIEW.

Some years ago visionary prophets foretold that the day would come when men would fly over the city of Sydney, and circle the Post Office clock. Yesterday afternoon the vision crystallised into actual accomplishment.

Hammond, on his Bristol bi-plane, all unnoticed by the vast majority of Sydney people, sailed over the city and the harbour, and returned safely to Ascot, after the finest flight he has yet done in New South Wales.

But his great feat was not quite without witnesses. Now and then a pedestrian gazed aloft and soon, in the main thoroughfare, excited groups of citizens were gazing and gesticulating at the birdlike structure that glided gracefully over a thousand feet above their heads.

It was an unpremeditated movement, a sudden decision on the part of the flying man. He found himself aloft with the engine going splendidly, and conditions atmospheric absolutely perfect. So he decided to obtain an aviator's eye-view of Sydney Harbour.

He started northward, reached the Heads, followed the channel like an ocean-liner making for the Quay, then flew up George-street, circled round the Post Office clock, glided back to have a glimpse at the warships, flew up to the railway station, and then "home" to Ascot. It took 40 minutes to do the round trip.

The aviators—for Mr. Hammond had his mechanician, Mr. Frank Coles, with him—enjoyed the finest panoramic view of Sydney Harbour that has ever been vouchsafed to a living soul. Balloonists have gone up a few hundred feet and have gone into raptures over the prospect. But no one had yet seen the whole glorious panorama of the harbour city and its waterways under such ideal conditions.

While the machine was gliding over the metropolis the crowd at Ascot was guessing his whereabouts. Been up twenty minutes! Where's he got to? everybody was asking everybody else, and trying to make out where the tiny black speck had vanished to. "Randwick!" "The Harbour!" "Manly!" were some of the answers. Presently an apparently stationary speck was seen; it grew larger; then it could be seen approaching, and at last the mutter of the whirling-motor could be heard, telling of smoothly-running engines and great speed. Handkerchiefs were fluttering, hats waving, and the crowd inside and outside the grounds cheered madly as the biplane sped nearer, and with a superb curve swept round to the right over their heads. A long graceful turn, and the tail planes rose and the machine gently alighted, 40 minutes and 20 seconds after the wheels left the ground."

This was easily the longest flight Mr. Hammond had made in New South Wales.

Mr. Coles, one of the mechanics, who accompanied Mr. Hammond on his flight, when seen by a "Herald" reporter just after landing gave the following details of his trip.

"When we got clear of the trees and out over the bay we turned north and ran up the coast, keeping well inland. There was practically no wind up where we were, and the conditions were practically ideal for flying, so we kept on going steadily north. We flew over Coogee and Bondi, and kept right along the coastline until we were running along above the tramline at Watson's Bay. When fairly over the Heads we turned in and followed the course of the harbour till we were over the shipping. Here we had a magnificent view of the whole city and the harbour. We ran in towards the Post Office, passing the tower on the right side, and turning headed for the harbour again. It was exactly 27 minutes to 5 as we repassed the Post Office clock, and very shortly afterwards we were over the warships. Here we wheeled again almost in a figure eight, and flew along George-street up to the Central Railway Station. From the station we headed for Ascot, and landed as you saw us. Yes, a very fair flight; we averaged about 45 miles an hour all the way, and kept at a height of between a thousand and two thousand feet the whole time."

OTHER FLIGHTS.

Previous to the long flight, Mr. Hammond made a short trial flight of about ten minutes' duration, in which he circled over the grounds, attaining a height of about 1500 feet.

When the outburst of enthusiasm over the long flight had died down, Mr. Macdonald, chief mechanic in charge of the Bristol biplane, made a most successful flight.

Mr. Macdonald, who, though only 21, is a certified pilot of the Royal Aero Club of Great Britain, handled the machine most skilfully. Leaving the earth in a swift upward sweep, unlike Mr. Hammond, who rises much more gradually, he flew swiftly away to the south. Turning northward, he rose rapidly, and wheeled in a long curve back over the racecourse. When about 50 feet from the ground, Mr. Macdonald shut off his engine, and glided to earth in a long, graceful swoop, the prettiest evolution yet seen in the display. He was in the air about 12 minutes, and reached a height of about 1200 feet.

It is understood Mr. Macdonald will make a flight along the coast at 9 o'clock this morning, when he will take a photographer with him.

HIS LAST FLIGHT IN N.S.W.

It is understood that Mr. Hammond's arrangement, so far as flights in Australia are concerned, has now expired; but further flights are to be seen here, Mr Macdonald taking up the running, or, rather, the flying. It is the latter's intention to make a number of cross-country flights.

AUSTRALIA'S NAVY.

THE NEW RESERVE.

ENROLMENT OF CADETS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Navy orders published on Thursday deal principally with the naval reserve and the enrolment of cadets. Senior cadets now serving in the naval volunteer cadets who reach the age of 18 in 1911 may, if suitable, be entered into the naval reserve (M), that being the section to which the naval militia is transferred. Trainees under the universal service scheme will be known as naval reserve (O), which will be subdivided into junior cadets, senior cadets, and adults. Senior cadets reaching the age of 18 in 1912 and subsequent years will be advanced to the adult section of the naval reserve (O). The training of adults in the naval reserve (O) will commence on July 1, 1911. The following shows the minimum number of cadets to be enrolled at the centres named by the military officer in consultation with the naval officers:—Thursday Island 25, Cairns 25, Townsville 25, Rockhampton 50, Bundaberg 25, Maryborough 25, Brisbane 300, Newcastle 200, Sydney 800, Melbourne 800, Port Fairy 50, Portland 50, Hobart 100, Launceston 100, Adelaide 300, Albany 50, Fremantle 300. Total, 3225.

The administration and instruction will be carried out by a special staff of officers and petty officers, organised by the Director of Naval Reserve, Captain Tickell, in the following districts:—Brisbane (with sub-districts of Thursday Island, Cairns, Townsville, Rockhampton, Bundaberg, Maryborough, and Brisbane), Sydney (with sub-districts of Newcastle and Sydney and suburbs), Melbourne (with sub-districts of Port Melbourne, Williamstown, Geelong, Port Fairy, and Portland, headquarters at Williamstown), Hobart (with sub-districts of Launceston and Hobart); Port Adelaide (with sub-districts of Adelaide, Port Adelaide, and Largs Bay); Fremantle (with sub-districts of Albany and Fremantle).

Before July 1 next a district naval officer will be appointed to each district. The term naval commandant will cease to be used. A commissioned or warrant officer will be appointed to each sub-district. The following additional duties are allotted to the district naval officers:—Recruiting for permanent naval forces, general responsibility for coast line within the district, including signal arrangements; responsibility for the efficiency of examination service at ports where the navy is required to carry it out; and naval intelligence for the district. The Protector and Gayundah will be employed as sea-going training ships, under the orders of the director, Captain Tickell, who has been appointed naval representative on the war railway council.

MISSING BOATING PARTY.

BRISBANE, Friday.

Advice was received on Thursday at Cairns from Port Douglas to the effect that the Nada had reached there, after an unsuccessful search of the shores from Cairns for the missing flattie Valda. No information had been received of the Cleveland, with the police party, but it was expected after searching round Double Island they would proceed to Upola Bank. Thick rainy weather will make the task of the seach boats difficult.

INTERSTATE ROWING.

THE EIGHT-OAR CHAMPIONSHIP.

SIX CREWS COMPETING.

ENTRIES FOR THE SINGLE SCULLS.

This afternoon the historic Parramatta will be en fete, for the most important rowing events of the year—the interstate eights and single sculls—will be decided. In England the great annual contest is the eight-oar race between Oxford and Cambridge, which has been taking place since 1829, when curiously enough a foul occurred, and the race had to be re-rowed. Regarding this afternoon's event it may be stated that there is not another rowing function of the same standard in the world, and in point of interest to Australians equals that of the old-world event.

These interstate contests were first established in 1878, when New South Wales and Victoria met on the Yarra, the southerners proving victorious. In 1885 Tasmania first took part in the race, but it was not till 1890 that three or more crews began to compete regularly.

It is six years since the event was last rowed on the Parramatta, when the Victorians proved successful, and thus completed a sequence of twelve victories. Since then, however, they have won only once, whilst Tasmania and New South Wales have each gained two victories.

In this afternoon's event six crews will compete, and as they sweep down the river struggling for supremacy the spectacle should prove a magnificent one.

In the single sculls Tasmania, Victoria, and New South Wales will be represented respectively by C. McVilly, H. R. Stevens, and J. R. Towns.

Steamers are advertised to leave Point Macquarie at 2 o'clock sharp. Three will follow the racing, and a fourth, which is set apart for the schools, will be moored on the course.

A large number of visitors will view the racing, among them many prominent supporters of rowing, also veteran oarsmen, and among the latter will be Mr. M. J. Slack, of Queensland, who was the first holder of the sculling championship, and who was first or second in the seven years he took part.

A dinner will take place at Sargent's, Market-street, this evening, at 7.15, and there will be a harbour picnic to-morrow, the steamer leaving at 11 a.m. The party will land at Clifton Gardens, and have luncheon there.

The training of the crews ended on Thursday afternoon, when there was a great deal of interest taken in the final preparations. The most fancied crews are New South Wales, Tasmania, and Victoria. These three are expected to provide an excellent race. Of the others South Australia seems the best, but is using a boat too small for the crew, which is a heavy team, and inclined to press her with the weight of the men both at the beginning and after blades have been released. The work on Thursday showed that New South Wales was as good as their numerous friends could wish, and a win may be reasonably looked forward to. Victoria has improved, and if not forced to a high rate of stroke, but allowed to grip and swing at, say, 32 to 34 per minute, may be expected to account for Tasmania.

Of the scullers, McVilly, with his fine reach and free rowing, will be a worthy opponent, and should the least muscular trouble come to Towns then Tasmania will carry the honours away. The only award for a win in these championships is a certificate of the value of five shillings, but winners always highly prize the memento. The scullers will start at 3 p.m., from near Ryde Bridge, and finish at the 2½ miles mark just past Gladesville Wharf. The eights will start at 4 p.m., the course being from near Ryde Bridge to Searle's Monument.

The following are the names and weights of the eight-oar crews in the order in which positions have been drawn for them at the start:—

COMBATING TUBERCULOSIS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

With the object of devising practical and uniform methods for combating tuberculosis a conference of principal medical officers was held in Melbourne about two months ago. The report setting out their determinations has been issued for presentation to the various State Governments.

The decisions of the conference were published from day to day, and an interview with Dr. Ashburton Thompson, covering the whole of the proceedings, was published in the "Herald" of March 11.

MYSTERY SOLVED.

BRISBANE, Friday.

The Commissioner of Police has been at some pains to investigate the circumstances connected with the finding of a pickle bottle at Ocean Beach recently, which he thought might probably have been launched on the waves by some shipwrecked people to the south-west of New Caledonia.

After communicating with the other States, however, a solution of the supposed mystery has been reached near home, and contained in a story by Robert Williamson, a jockey, residing at Ascot. On being communicated with by the police Williamson stated that some two years ago he visited Ocean Beach in company with F. Hartigan and L. Hudson. One picked up an empty pickle bottle, and in it Hudson placed a piece of paper bearing the names of the three members of the party. The names on the paper and description of the bottle tally with that found as reported.

ACROSS AUSTRALIA.

CYCLIST'S LONG JOURNEY.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Leaving Fremantle on April 4, F. White arrived at the General Post Office at 20 minutes to 10 o'clock to-night, having taken 31 days 12 hours 40 minutes to cover the intervening 2000 odd miles, which time is 5 hours 20 minutes shorter than that accomplished last year by F. Birtles.

White is attempting to reduce the record from Fremantle to Sydney, over which Birtles took 36 days 15 hours. Hence he yet has five clear days in which to cover the remaining 577 miles to Sydney. He will continue his journey to-morrow at 6.30 a.m.

ERRORS IN CENSUS AGES.

A large number of letters are being received by the Commonwealth Statistician, Mr. G. H. Knibbs, Melbourne, correcting the ages given in census papers. These corrections will be kept strictly confidential, and will materially improve the census returns. It is understood that the Commonwealth Statistician will not carry the inquiry into misstatements of age any further until sufficient time has elapsed for corrections to be made. In no case where the age or other replies are rectified will the matter be further pushed. Persons amending their replies are asked to write merely name, address at time of census, and correct date of birth and age, or marriage, etc.

HOSPITAL SATURDAY ARRANGEMENTS.

THE RECORD EXPECTED.

"If we have a fine day, and if the street collections are as large as they ought to be, considering the prosperous times, it's more than likely that the objective of the executive, viz., to distribute £10,000 this year, will be realised," said the secretary of the Hospital Saturday Fund yesterday.

Last year's collection was the highest in the history of the movement. Including the industrial subscriptions, and also a special donation of £400 from Mr. Brunton, it totalled £8491 4s 6d.

The year previous to that had the benefit of the proceeds of a lecture by Sir Ernest Shackleton. The fund has had no windfall of that kind so far. It is anticipated that this year the industrial collections will very much exceed last year's figures.

In the city to-day there will be 80 standholders, with about 1000 helpers. In the suburbs there will be 119 standholders, with 2250 helpers. The executive committee has done away with the customary stands with calico covers. In the place of them there will be large cards hung up to denote the base of each division of collectors. Several of the ladies, however, have arranged to provide their own decorated stands. Nineteen bands have handed in their names, and they have been provided with places in city and suburbs. Martin-place, Wynyard-square, and Hyde Park will be filled with the strains of music through the day. Refreshment room, hotel, and cafe proprietors are furnishing an important service as of old in making provision for refreshments for a certain number of ladies each. The ladies will be given cards, initialled by the proprietors, so that the various establishments will know how many to provide for, and overlapping will also be prevented.

Two particular features of the day will be contingents of the members of the companies now performing in "The Woman in the Case" at the Criterion Theatre, and "The Bad Girl of the Family," at the Adelphi Theatre. The stand of the former will be at the corner of Pitt and Moore streets, opposite the General Post Office. Miss Mabel Trevor and Miss Elinor Foster will preside, and sell bouquets and buttonhole flowers. The other will be stationed at the corner of Harris and George streets, in front of the Bank of New South Wales. Here Miss Buckley (Mrs. George Marlow) and Miss Ferguson will be in evidence during the day, and will, with other ladies of the company, provide some special attraction. They will work as far as Abercrombie-street, along George-street West, and back as far as Regent-street. In the evening their stand will be removed to the vicinity of the Adelphi Theatre.

The Bank of New South Wales will have its head office and 22 branches open to receive the cash—the branches till 6 p.m., and the head office in George-street until the last box comes in. The takings will be posted up at different times of the day and night.

It was arranged in the course of the preparation that collectors should be admitted to the University, as has been the case during the last couple of years. The time was fixed for Thursday morning. The collection here was to be under the aegis of the Undergraduates' Association. This year the committee at the last moment received from the secretary of the association an intimation that the Professorial Board had declined to allow the collection. The members of the executive were naturally surprised that this should come to them so late, as it had been previously intimated that they were ready to enter into whatever arrangement would be suitable to the authorities at the University. However, there was no time for anything in the way of further negotiations, and the institution will not this year be recorded as a contributor.

Among other attractions that will help the fund is the performance of "The Grey Kimona" at the Criterion Theatre this afternoon. Admission will be at the usual prices. On Monday a popular concert, in which an array of leading artists will take part, will be held at the Town Hall, under the management of Mr. H. N. Southwell. A uniform price of 1s will be charged for all seats, and if the hall is filled the fund will receive an addition of about £150.

At the League football match, at the Sports Ground this afternoon, a special party of ladies will work the whole of the patrons of the game, the executive having arranged for their admission.

Inclusive of last year, the amount distributed by the Hospital Saturday Fund amounted to £75,850. The executive hopes that the 20 charitable institutions which participate in the distribution will have the benefit this year of a record collection.

WORK OF THE HOSPITALS.

GREAT RECORD FOR LAST YEAR.

The following tables are explanatory in themselves of the great work accomplished in the five leading hospitals of Sydney last year. Added to that there is a record of splendid service rendered in the Women's Hospital at Paddington, which is distinct from the general hospitals. No less than 5173 women and infants were nursed in that institution, and as a training ground for the important work of turning out efficient nurses for obstetric nursing a record was accomplished. But, apart from the five hospitals named, the suburban hospitals largely assisted in swelling the volume of work.

ATTEMPTED INTIMIDATION.

BOARDING-HOUSE KEEPER WARNED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

An attempt has been made to intimidate an employee at T. Robinson and Co.'s harvester works. A young man engaged at the works, who lives at a boarding-house at Fitzroy, was to-day shown an intimidating letter which had been received by his landlady. It contained insulting and filthy accusations. The letter, which was addressed to the keeper of the boarding-house, stated:—

"Dear Sir or Madam,—I wish to inform you of the danger you are running in boarding a young man in the name of Mick (Christian name), working at Roberson and Co., Spotswood. . . . He is also a non-unionist, and will be the cause of any outrage which might occur at your house, such as throwing explosives, which the union are about to use. Take warning and get rid of a —— scab.—Yours, etc., A Clean Heart and Mind."

The police are investigating the complaint.

PERSONAL.

The death occurred at his residence, Raglan-street, Mosman, yesterday, of Mr. John Hy. Wilkinson, eldest son of the late Colonel A. Wilkinson, for several years Mayor of West Maitland. Deceased was in former years a prominent amateur oarsman, having been actively identified with the old Mercantile Rowing Club, and was also a member of the first intercolonial eight which rowed for the State against Victoria. He leaves a wife, but no family.

Mr. Harry Rickards and his general manager, Mr. John C. Leete, were entertained at dinner on Thursday night. The toasts of the guests were proposed by Messrs. J. D. Fitzgerald, N. Nielsen, Phil. Sullivan, J. A. Ross, M. Emanuel, Percy Hunter, W. F. Corbett, W. Gordon, and Dr. W. Smith. Mr. Rickards, Mrs. Rickards, Mr. J. C. Leete, and Mrs. Leete leave for England to-day by the Mooltan.

Among the passengers leaving to-day by the R.M.S. Mooltan for London, via ports, are Messrs. P. and P. F. Ransford, and Mr. E. Shirley Chapman.

On Thursday last, on the application of Mr. Kemp, barrister-at-law, his son, Mr. Wilfred Foxton Kemp, was admitted to the Full Court as a solicitor.

LABOUR TROUBLES.

PRINTING TRADE.

TROUBLE IN TASMANIA.

HOBART, Friday.

There is a prospect of trouble in the printing trade of Tasmania.

A few weeks ago the Typographical Society demanded from the master printers an increase on the minimum wage paid to compositors, machinists, and stereotypers, from £2 12s to £3 per week of 48 hours. After consideration, the masters printers agreed to meet the society half way, consenting to an increase to £2 16s per week. This was refused by the executive of the society, who insisted on immediate reconsideration and acceptance of the demand. The master printers then suggested that the society should accept a compromise of £2 16s per week till the meeting of Parliament, pending the appointment of a wages board, to which the whole matter should be relegated, the master printers agreeing that the award should be retrospective as from June 1. They further agreed to pay any differences in wages should the board decide against them, and only requiring that the employees should abide by the decision, with a proviso that if the wages board made any reductions the employees would not be required to refund the difference.

This proposition was submitted to a full meeting of the members of the Typographical Society at Hobart on Wednesday evening, when a large majority of the members considered the offer should be accepted, leaving the settlement to the executive of the society. To the surprise of the master printers, who understood the differences had been satisfactorily adjusted, a further demand was made upon them to-day—immediate acquiescence, or threatening an extremist course. The demand is now for 44 hours at £2 16s per week, or 48 hours at £3, the first to be retrospective as from May 1, and the latter to come into force from October 1.

The position is most unsatisfactory, as in addition to jobbing offices, it affects linotype operators and other newspaper hands, as they are members of the same society.

HOBART, Friday.

The printers' trouble culminated this morning in an intimation being sent to all newspaper and jobbing offices that unless the men's demand was acceded to the men would not return to work after lunch.

This arbitrary action on the part of the Hobart Typographical Society meant the stoppage of the newspapers as well as the printing offices, forcing the master printers to accept the position under protest. The hope was expressed that an early appointment of a wages board would lead to a more just and reasonable consideration of the conditions than had been given by the Typographical Society.

ENGINEDRIVERS' CLAIMS.

PREFERENCE TO UNIONISTS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the Commonwealth Arbitration Court today Mr. Justice Higgins continued the hearing of the case brought by the Federated Engine-Drivers and Firemen's Association against the Mt. Lyell Mining Company and other respondents.

Mr. Mitchell resumed his concluding address on behalf of the claimants.

Regarding the claim for preference to unionists, Mr. Mitchell said there was evidence that the claimant organisation had 2700 members.

Mr. Justice Higgins: On those figures it seems probable that you have a majority outside the State railway service. As a matter of common sense, I ought to take into account whether you have or have not a majority of men in the industry. Will you tell me how the unionists would be injured if you did not get preference?

Mr. Mitchell: The unionists have got improvements in pay and conditions, and non-unionists who have not shared in the cost and trouble of getting that come in and get the same benefits. I have in my mind's eye employers at Queenstown who would say, when a billet is to be filled, "This union has given us a lot of trouble. We'll take the non-unionist."

Mr. Justice Higgins: Have you ever known of successful proceedings for a breach of a preference clause?

Mr. Mitchell: Yes: in New South Wales. Whether it is of effect or not, it will tend towards industrial peace.

Mr. Justice Higgins said the object of the Act was industrial peace, and in order to obtain such peace the Act spoke of facilitating settlements and agreements between bodies of employers and employees. So for industrial peace organisations should be encouraged?

Mr. Mitchell: Yes.

Mr. Justice Higgins: Would it be encouraging organisations by saying that a man might stand out and not be hit if the organisations were worsted, but could get the benefit if they won.

Mr. Mitchell: I say no.

Mr. Justice Higgins said that on the other hand it was undesirable to restrict the power and discrimination of employers unless such was absolutely necessary to the preservation of peace. He had always required very strong evidence before interfering with the employer's discrimination, especially in their choice of men who would best suit their purposes. The basis of the minimum wage was the enabling of an employer to get the men he considered most suitable for his operations.

His Honor said there was no statement before him in this case to show antagonism on the part of employers towards unionists. He believed their statement, "We will not make any difference between unionists and non-unionists. We will go for the best men." Up to the present there had been no friction. If it was shown, however, that after the award the employers were acting unfairly towards unionists, a variation of the award could be asked for, and he would use the powers given him to prevent that. It was not his business to speak about men running with the hare and with the hounds, so to speak. He had only to deal with the Act and public interest.

Mr. Mitchell: Your Honor's remarks will be as good as preference.

In conclusion, Mr. Mitchell said this case had, with a day for inspection, lasted 31 days, and they were on the eve of an award for the whole of Australia. The cost to his organisation was about £300. To get an award for a section in New South Wales, from a wages board had taken 15 months, at a cost of £700.

It was announced by Mr. Mitchell that an agreement with the British Broken Hill Company was in course of preparation, and that he expected to be able to lodge it in the registrar's office on the following day. Agreements between his organisation and the Northern Colliery Proprietors of New South Wales case was adjourned sine die.

BISHOP CAMIDGE DEAD

GREAT CHURCHMAN.

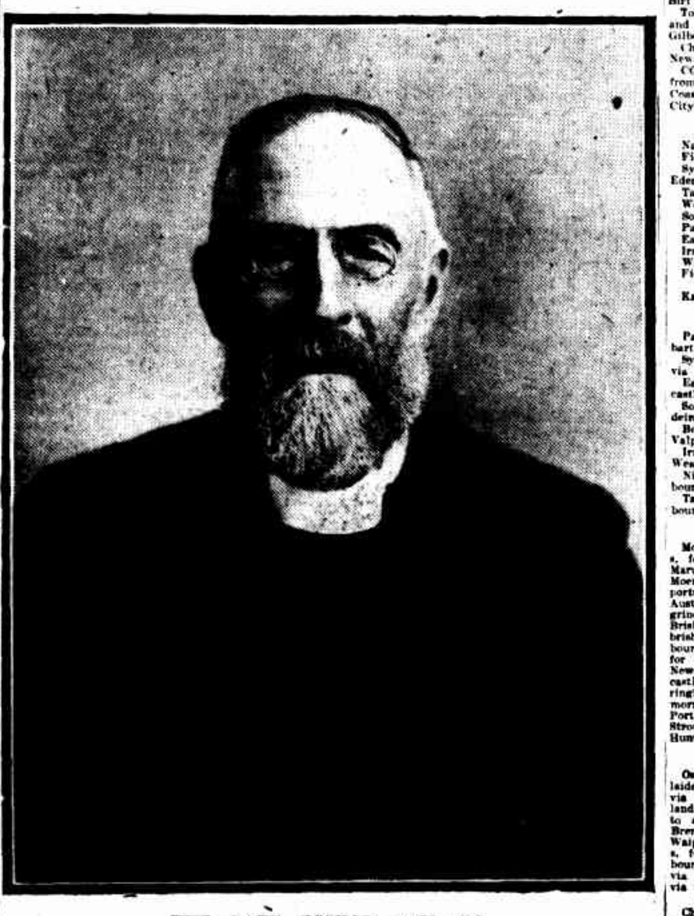
SUDDEN AND PAINLESS END

SENIOR BISHOP OF AUSTRALIA.

The Bishop of Bathurst, Right Rev. Dr. Camidge, died at Bathurst yesterday morning. He died suddenly, and without pain, just as he was on the point of setting out on a journey. Even up to the last he kept at his work, and only those who know the extent of his diocese, which embraced an area of 73,000 square miles, and extended as far as Bourke, can properly appreciate the great work he did over a period of just on a quarter of a century. He was, indeed, one of the great workers of the Church, setting an example to younger men, and he died, as he had wished to die, in harness.

Bishop Camidge was the senior Bishop of the Church of England in Australia, and he was a fine stamp of the earnest Christian gentleman. He was a great ecclesiastical authority, and at meetings of Synod he was recognised as a leader of thought. As a Churchman, he had High Church leanings, but there was nothing in any way extreme about him.

In years past the late Bishop took part in all the leading functions at St. Andrew's Cathedral. There still remain in the Cathedral choir one or two who were present at his enthronement, and, among other things, he is remembered for the active interest he showed in the movement initiated by the late Bishop Barry for a daily choral service at this Cathedral, on the lines on the services held daily in the cathedrals of England. For Bishop



THE LATE BISHOP CAMIDGE.

Camidge loved music—he loved the grand Church music of men like Stainer and Martin and Bridge. He came of a musical family. His grandfather was a noted organist, whose compositions are often heard in our churches. And, as he loved music, he also loved art, and it has been said of him that he was an art critic of no mean order.

As a country Bishop he was a striking success. He displayed remarkable devotion to the needs of his diocese, an enthusiast to the end. In charitable and philanthropic movements, and in all matters affecting the welfare of the people, he was always to the front. He will be missed by the clergy and laity alike, the distinguished Churchman, the courteous Christian gentleman.

"EXTRAORDINARILY SUDDEN."

THE TOLLING BELLS AT BATHURST.

BATHURST, Friday.

The tolling of the cathedral bells this morning announced the death of the Anglican Bishop of Bathurst. It was extraordinarily sudden. This morning Canon Thompson, Bishop Camidge's domestic chaplain and registrar of the diocese, visited Bishopcourt, and saw Dr. Camidge at about 9.45. They went into the latter's study, and whilst the Bishop was reading a letter to the Canon he suddenly fell back in his chair, and within five minutes life had departed. He suffered little or no pain.

Dr. Busby was immediately summoned, and on his arrival life was pronounced extinct. The Bishop had his travelling bag packed in readiness for his departure to Canbelego by the midday train. After rising in the morning the Bishop ate a hearty breakfast, and then walked around the garden for exercise. Three days ago he told one of the cathedral wardens that he felt in the best of health. But in the cathedral a few weeks ago, whilst officiating at a wedding ceremony, he fainted.

Only a few days ago the late Bishop appointed Archdeacon Oakes Vicar-General and Administrator of the diocese, Archdeacon Dunstan, of Mudgee, who is ill in Sydney having resigned the position. The last act of appointment by Bishop Camidge was the electing of Mr. W. C. Richardson to the office of warden in place of Mr. T. C. K. McKell, who is leaving the district.

The Bishop felt so well on Thursday that he presided at a meeting of the Diocesan Council.

The clergy as a whole will regret the Bishop's death. One conspicuous quality of the deceased pointed to by members of the clergy was an absence of anything in the nature of extremity.

The windows at the stores of John Meagher and Co. were immediately draped on the announcement of the Bishop's demise.

It was only in October last that the late Bishop celebrated his jubilee, on which occasion he was presented with an illuminated address and photographic album. A fund, known as the Bishop Camidge Jubilee Commemoration, was forthwith established, through which it was hoped to obtain £1000 for the furtherance of the interests of the Church in the diocese.

The funeral will take place on Monday at 2 o'clock. The interment is to be made in the Kelso cemetery, in which is the oldest church this side of the Great Dividing Range. A special service will be held on Sunday and on the day of the funeral in All Saints' Cathedral, at which the Archbishop of Sydney will most probably be present.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

SON OF THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.

The Right Rev. Charles Edward Camidge, D.D., was born at the vicarage of Poppleton, York, on October 2, 1837. He was the son of the Rev. Charles Joseph Camidge, vicar of Wakefield. The Bishop married Louisa Carow, daughter of Mr. E. F. Sanderson, of Endcliffe Grange, Sheffield. He was educated at St. Peter's School, York, and graduated from Wadham College, Oxford, attaining his B.A. degree in 1859, and that of M.A. in 1861. Dr. Camidge was ordained deacon in 1860 and priest in 1861 at York, and then elected curate of Sheffield 1860-1, and curate of Wakefield 1861-8, where his father was vicar. He was vicar of Hedon from 1868 to 1873, rector of Wheldrake 1873-7, the vicar of Thirsk 1873-87. He held the office of cannon of York and rural dean of Thirsk from 1883 to 1887. In 1882 he accepted the position of prebendary of York, and he was made proctor of the archdeaconry of Cleveland in 1886.

Dr. Camidge was appointed Bishop of Bathurst in succession to the Right Rev. Dr. Marsden in 1887, and he reached Bathurst from England in January, 1887. He was consecrated at Westminster Abbey on October 18, 1887, by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Right Rev. Dr. Benson, and Bishops Thorold, Bardsley, Perry, and Marsden.

The Bishop has rightly been described as a hard worker, for since his taking charge of the Bathurst diocese, which extended as far as Bourke, but which only embraces 40 clergymen, he had made an effort to come into contact with every corner of it. The diocese covers such an extensive area—73,000 square miles—and involves so great an amount of work, that at the last Anglican Synod held in Bathurst the question of subdivision and the appointment of a coadjutor was considered.

Pending the appointment of Archbishop Wright, Bishop Camidge acted as Primate of Australia for several months, he taking that office by virtue of seniority. On the arrival of Dr. Wright from England the Bishop was officially congratulated and thanked for his services.

Bishop Camidge was a prominent Freemason, and was Past Grand Chaplain in the Grand Lodge of New South Wales.

His publications include "A History of Wakefield and its Industrial and Fine Art Exhibition" (1866), and "Controversies with Cardinal Moran."

ARCHBISHOP'S APPRECIATION.

THE CONTROVERSY WITH CARDINAL MORAN.

"We all sorrow greatly for the loss we have sustained by the death of the Bishop of Bathurst," said Archbishop Wright to a "Herald" reporter last evening. "Personally, I held him in the highest honour, both for himself and his devotion to his work. He was a man of most sterling integrity and very fixed purpose, very courageous, and never tiring in his labours. He had an enormous diocese, and took huge journeys by train. In his later years his physical strength did not allow him to do as much by road as he used to do in the old days, but he did as much as he could.

"Bishop Camidge was a Yorkshireman, and his name was familiar to me in Yorkshire, though he had left that part of England before I entered it. He preceded my predecessor in St. George's, Leeds, in two parishes, Wheldrake and Thirsk, and he preceded the Archbishop of Melbourne in another parish. He was curate at Sheffield when I was born. For nearly a quarter of a century Bishop Camidge had laboured in the Bathurst Diocese. While he was acting as Primate he took infinite pains. He had a great amount of correspondence, and some difficult negotiations to carry through, but he did it all with the same method and persistency that always characterised his work. He was a very frequent preacher in Sydney in previous years. He was present with us at the last general synod in October, when he read the lesson at the principal service, and even at that age his voice retained its great strength.

"I think that controversy of his with Cardinal Moran was a most important part of the work he did. He maintained the position of the Church of England with remarkable skill and success.

"Bishop Camidge was fond of music to the end of his days. He was fond of art also. And he was fond of his garden, and had taken great pains with the development of Bishopcourt gardens in Bathurst. As to his business methods, I think that many of the dioceses have learnt a good deal from him. For myself, I can say that I found his counsel always very valuable.

"Apart from all this, he took a great interest in public matters, and I am quite sure he will be missed by very many friends. Before he came out to Australia he was thought a great deal of at home, and I know the late Archbishop of York never wanted him to leave England. But, having come here, he thoroughly entered into Australian life, and identified himself with all the best interests of the country."

APPOINTMENT OF A SUCCESSOR.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE SYNOD.

BATHURST, Friday.

For the election of the late bishop's successor a special synod will be called after the prescribed 30 days' notice has been given. This synod will probably sit in June, and in the interim the Ven. Archdeacon Oakes, of Kelso, will administer the diocese.

The synod will elect a committee consisting of four clergymen, appointed by the clergy, and four laymen, elected by the laity, who, with the president of synod, will form the committee, which will confer with the metropolitan and other bishops of the province, and proceed to elect the new bishop.

RESOLUTION OF SYMPATHY.

At a meeting of the King's School committee—the first church meeting held since the death of the Bishop of Bathurst was announced—it was proposed by Archdeacon Gunther, seconded by the Rev. W. Mort, "That his Grace the Archbishop be asked to send a letter expressive of the committee's great regret at hearing of the death of the Bishop of Bathurst, warm appreciation of his work, and deep sympathy with the church in the diocese."

BARQUENTINE OBERON BECALMED.

Victoria, s, from Auckland, at 6 p.m. on 1st inst., experienced moderate south sea for 24 hours, thence fine weather and smooth seas with light winds to arrival. In lat. 34.19 S, 171.33 E, the four-masted barquentine Oberon, of Poisgund, was passed becalmed. The Oberon left Newcastle on April 20 for Callao.

MAKURA BREAKS A RECORD.

The Canadian mail steamer Makura broke the record standing to the credit of the Maheno between Sydney and Hololulu of 12 days 22 hours. Captain John Gibb stated on arrival at Honolulu that there was no special object in going after a record beyond opening up the Makura to see what she could do. Heretofore she had always made the journeys under six boilers, but on the trip mentioned she opened up her eight boilers, and succeeded in arriving at Honolulu two days ahead of time, averaging 16.6 knots an hour.

TIMBER FROM WANGANUI.

The barquentine Ilma, from Wanganui, New Zealand, on April 5, had a fine-weather passage. She brought 300,000ft of timber, consigned to Messrs. A. D. Pike and Co., and went to an anchorage at Johnstone's Bay.

STEAMER ILFORD.

AN OCEAN INCIDENT.

The steamer Wonganella from Ocean Island, loaded with phosphates for Melbourne and Adelaide, came into collision with a fishing boat (manned by licensed men—Messrs. J. Romeo and T. Wilson) off the Sydney Heads yesterday. The wash from the steamer filled the boat, but the fishermen stuck to their task of baling, and managed to make Watson's Bay safely.

The steamer Ilford, which left Vancouver 43 days ago, had head winds, which caused delay; otherwise the passage was featureless. Captain Thorpe intends to have the vessel docked here after the discharge at Flood's wharf of 600 tons of Mexican barley. As already explained in the "Herald," the Ilford put into Noumea for bunker coal.

BRISBANE'S GROUNDING.

CAPTAIN GETS REDUCED CERTIFICATE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

At the meeting of the Marine Board to-day, Captain Jas. PROPOSED AMALGAMATION OF THE SAVINGS BANKS.

Mr. J. A. Hendry writes:—

Sir,—As one who for 27 years has dealt with both Savings Banks, I dissent from the view of your correspondent "A Depositor" that the Government should amalgamate the two institutions. If he does not like the Barrack-street Bank's limited sphere of operations, let him confine his custom to the State Bank. That other folk are content with the Trustees' Bank is ...

WALPOLE ISLAND PHOSPHATES CO.

FACTS THAT DEFY CRITICISM.

At Walpole Island there are 500,000 tons of phosphate rock in sight, besides 200,000 tons of alluvial guano.

The value is over 60 per cent. tricalcic phosphate, which is good marketable grade when it is considered that Surprise Island guano, of from 35 to 37 per cent., is quoted in official lists at £4 per ton.

The directors have definite estimates from well-known firms, showing that 21,000 tons per annum can be easily shipped at the cost stated in the prospectus.

The promoters are taking only about one-half the purchase money in shares, and are also purchasing a considerable number of contributing shares.

There is a very large and increasing demand for this product throughout N.Z., the Commonwealth, and other markets.

The company about to be formed in Sydney and New Zealand is issuing for subscription 160,000 shares at 5/ each. The list will soon be closed.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Metropolitan sportsmen will this afternoon have the choice of horseracing at Canterbury Park or pony and galloway racing at Ascot, the May meeting of the Victoria Amateur Turf Club takes place at Caulfield, the autumn reunion of the South Australian Jockey Club commences at Morphettville, and the Maitland Jockey Club holds its May meeting at Rutherford.

Racing will be resumed on the suburban courses this afternoon, when Canterbury Park will be the rendezvous, and the bill of fare to be discussed is an interesting one, foreshadowing good sport. The transit service includes special trams from the Central Railway Station, starting at 11.37 a.m. (horses), 12.16, 12.22, 12.34, 12.39, 12.44, 12.57, 1.5, 1.14, and 1.19 p.m., while the ordinary service on the Belmore line will also be available. The track is first-class going, and the sport commences at 2 p.m. with the Hurdle Race, in which Lemonwood, Emerald Isle, and Argument may get home in that order. Grist, Adjacent, and Maltster Maid read as well as anything in the Flying Handicap, and they may pass the post as named. The Reckoning, Merei, and Salladay may fill the places in the Stewards' Mile, while Prince Yattendon, Belle Vive, and Gladys D. may get home in that order in the Park Stakes. Grist, Merei, Rose of Lancaster, Loyal Blue, and Posaune should have the settlement of the Canterbury Handicap among them, and if reserved for it Merei may win from Posaune and Loyal Blue; while Locomotion, Marnghi, and Hilda Merv may occupy the situations in the Shorts Handicap.

Pony and galloway racing will be the attraction at Ascot this afternoon, when a seven-event programme will be played out, with every prospect of good sport. The customary transit service will be in vogue, special trams running from Circular Quay to the racecourse gates, and the ordinary service to Botany will also be available. The track is excellent going, the first race is timed to start at 2.15 p.m., and the results of the racing may be anticipated as under:—Fourteen-two Handicap: Acushla, Last Chance, Dublin Lad. Fourteen Hands Handicap: Archeress (if started), Dominion, Game Lady. Maiden Handicap: Olivine, Miss Voyou, Loreen. Ascot Handicap: Havoc King, Bessie Brown, Amaranth. Fourteen-one Novice Handicap: Wisdom, Adventuress, L.D. Thirteen-three Handicap: Lady Norah, Typhoon, Miss Lily. Approved Stakes: The Lady Flora, Hessian, Master Merv.

The railway arrangements in connection with the May meeting of the Wollongong Jockey Club on Tuesday next are announced.

The Victorian jockey G. Woodburn, who was engaged to ride for Mr. R. W. Clancy, in the Hurdle Race at Canterbury Park, to-day, received a telegram yesterday advising him of serious illness in his family, and he left by train last night for Melbourne. It is more than probable that Mr. Clancy will not start any of his jumping team at Canterbury Park to-day.

Ulmarra Racing Club (May 20) and Delungra Jockey Club (May 6) race meetings have been granted registration by the A.J.C.

Quentin leaves by steamer to-day for the north, to fulfil his engagement in the Brisbane Thousand, to be decided a week hence, and his trainer, P. Nolan, travels overland to the northern capital early next week.

The following scratchings were recorded yesterday in connection with the Canterbury Park May meeting:—Hurdle Race: Nonda. Flying Handicap: Denmanto. Park Stakes: Voldon. Canterbury Handicap: Sourabaya. All engagements: Melyra.

The New South Wales Trotting Club announces the programme for the meeting to be held at Epping on the 15th inst. The prize money totals £200, distributed over five events, the principal of which is the Epping Handicap of £60. Entries will be received by the secretary, Mr. R. C. Hungerford, up to 8 p.m. on Monday next, the 8th inst.

Terragong has been struck out of all engagements in connection with Tattersall's Club May meeting.

VICTORIAN SPORTING NOTES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The V.R.C. committee to-day upheld the appeal of the jockey W. Smart against the decision of the Williamstown stewards, who disqualified him for three years, on the ground of foul riding at Williamstown on February 11. The case has excited a large amount of interest, principally because it was thought by many racing men that Smart was innocent of the offence with which he was charged. The opinion in racing circles is strongly in favour of the decision of the V.R.C.

Yarrabar has been scratched for the Hurdle Race, to be run at Caulfield to-morrow.

POLO.

WALGETT, Thursday.

Warren defeated Walgett at polo by 5 goals to 2.

GOLF.

Although there are no suburban interclub competition matches on the programme to-day, there are several interesting club fixtures. The following is the list:—

Bonnie Doon Golf Club, bogey match.
Cammeray Golf Club, handicap bogey; continuous bogey competition begins.
Concord Golf Club, special handicap stroke for members on 36 handicap for Mr. J. Lee's trophy; handicap stroke for Mr. J. Nettleton's trophy.
Dobroyde Golf Club, match play, Nelson trophy.
Hunter's Hill Golf Club, mixed foursomes.
Killara Golf Club, semi-final championship; bogey handicap.
Manly Golf Club, Autumn Medal Handicap, 18 holes. Autumn Medal Record from scratch, 18 holes.
Parramatta Golf Club, Bowman Cup, 2nd round.
Drummoyne Club's Teams' Match, vice-president's and bogey.
Leura Club's mixed foursomes.

ROYAL SYDNEY G.C.

The following will take part in the teams' match to-day:—1.30, C. H. Reading v W. S. Laidley; 1.33, C. W. Rundle v R. E. Bailey; 1.40, R. L. Massie v C. W. Harriott; 1.43, J. Garland v C. NEW SOUTH WALES v BALLARAT.

NEW SOUTH WALES TEAM ALTERED.

The first interstate match between New South Wales and Ballarat will be played on the Warringah green this afternoon. Alterations have been made in the composition of the New South Wales team, as five new players have been selected in place of others who are unavailable. The rinks, as readjusted, are as follow:—

Kennan (Warringah), Rigg (Victoria Park), Francis (Strathfield), Thorpe (City).
Hind (Manly), Elder (Balmain), Leitch (Redfern), Brogden (Redfern).
Dunwoodie (Marrickville), Burton-Smith (Mosman), Bridgewater (Warringah), Denyer (Warringah).
Crawley (Chatswood), Captain Norton (North Sydney), N. Hopson (Ashfield), J. Harrison (Ashfield).

THE BALLARAT TEAM.

The Ballarat team was last night chosen as follows:—

Figgs, Trickett, Sayers, Williams.
Wightwick, Welters, Treadwell, Minster.
Bolster, Morrell, Sartori, Berry.
Riegelhuth, Dr. Spring, F. Halls, W. Trounan.

ASSOCIATION DEADLOCK.

The president and secretary of the Waverley Club have called a meeting for Monday evening, at the Royal Hotel, to consider the present deadlock in the affairs of the association, and to consider a resolution supporting the action of the committee in unanimously expressing confidence in the officers, and asking for a withdrawal of their resignations. It is proposed to make it a thoroughly representative meeting, and those present are to be left free to take whatever action they think fit. But the desire of the promoters is to have every club represented by its president or secretary, or in their absence by two delegates appointed with full power to speak and act on behalf of their respective clubs.

BALLARAT v REDFERN.

The Ballarat bowlers played their first match yesterday afternoon on the Redfern bowling green. They were the guests of the local club, and were welcomed by the president, Mr. John Leitch, Dr. Spring, president of the visiting team responded. Mr. Leitch and a number of local ladies entertained the visitors at afternoon tea. During the progress of the match a pleasant diversion took place. Hammond, the flying man, hove in sight in his machine. The players stopped, and the whole company watched with interest the flight. As the aviator gracefully crossed over the green the whole company gave three cheers as loudly as possible. The game ended in a narrow win for the visitors by four points. Scores:—

KURRING-GAI CHAMPION.

The final for the championship of Kurring-gai Club was played on Wednesday, with the following result:—W. M. Alderson beat A. Nettleton, 25-9.

The winner had previously defeated Messrs. Clarke, Read, Spence, and Silby.

BASEBALL.

The inaugural baseball field day of Australia will be held at Petersham Park this afternoon. Over 200 entries have been received. The first event will start at 1.30, and as the novel programme is rather lengthy competitors are requested to be in good time for the competitions in which they have entered.

If time and light will permit, it is intended to run two practical events incidental to the game. A bunt and run to first base, with compulsory slide, to be judged on the best performance, and fungo hitting, which is synonymous in cricket to hitting sixers. Mr. M. A. Noble has been appointed an additional judge, and Mr. R. Callaway master of ceremonies.

CROQUET.

ROYAL SYDNEY GOLF CLUB.

The following is the draw for this afternoon for the handicap singles:—

1.45: G. H. Gordon (1) v Mrs. Hemsley (10).
1.45: F. G. Lassetter (1) v Mrs. Rich (7).
3: L. Henderson (scr) v Mrs. Warren (10).

LAWN TENNIS.

NEW SOUTH WALES CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNAMENT.

CAMPBELL BEATS PARKER.

The tournament was continued yesterday, when the championship was advanced to the final stages. There were many exciting matches, but the event which attracted the greatest notice was the flight of the Hammond aeroplane, which passed directly over the ground. The players all stopped to watch this unprecedented incident at a tennis meeting in Australia.

The most notable item of the tennis programme was the defeat of Parker by Campbell. Although Campbell had pressed Parker hard in the Mara Buckley and interstate contests, Parker was expected to win in a best of five sets match. Campbell, however, went off with a rush, and kept up his forcing tactics so well that he won in straight sets. This is one of Campbell's best performances in singles, although he has more than one defeat of Heath to his credit. Parker was lacking in dash. He has had too much tennis lately, and is evidently getting stale in consequence. Rice also had a win in straight sets, his opponent being Fisher, the New Zealander. The first set was played at high pressure, Fisher making the pace very hot. He got in for the volley whenever practicable, but was frequently driven back by good lobs. After Rice had won his set he had matters all his own way. Fisher tired rapidly, and Rice was able to pass him easily as his speed slackened, so that the remaining two sets were won by the New South Wales man without the loss of a game.

Fisher and Parker disposed of Poidevin and Barbour in the doubles championship. The first two sets went rather easily to the former pair, who hold the South Australian championship. Poidevin and Barbour did better in the third, but this was in a measure due to Fisher and Parker being tired after their singles matches.

Miss Stewart had her hardest match in singles so far when she met Mrs. Parbury in the ladies' singles championship, the second set being most stubbornly contested. Mrs. Parbury kept a splendid length to Miss Stewart's backhand, and made an excellent showing against the brilliant Victorian. In the same event Miss Collings beat Miss Blain, who made a good resistance in the final set, but was outplayed in the second.

The following were the results:—

State Singles Championship.
H. Rice beat F. M. B. Fisher, 9-7, 6-0, 6-0.
A. Campbell beat H. A. Parker, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1.

State Doubles Championship.
Fisher-Parker beat Poidevin-Barbour, 6-3, 6-1, 9-7.

Misses C. and F. Stoltenhoff beat Mrs. Colquhoun-Mrs. Barry, 6-3, 6-3.

Schoolboys' Championship.
J. O. Anderson beat Vickery, 6-1, 6-3.
Jeffries beat La Touche, 7-6, 6-0, 6-4.
R. Spencer beat Inglis, 6-0, 6-7, 6-4.
M'Donald beat Cohen, 6-3, 7-5.
Carr beat Jeffries, 8-6, 6-1.

Schoolgirls' Championship.
Miss Smith beat Miss Beavin, 6-4, 6-3.
Miss M'Donald beat Miss Rose, 6-3, 6-0.
Miss Ritchie beat Miss Marshall, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.
Miss Perry beat Miss Ashbury, 6-3, 7-5.

The tournament is to be concluded to-day, and an attractive programme has been arranged. The singles championship will be decided by the meeting of Campbell and Rice. It will provide a contest between two players of totally different styles, Campbell being a volleying specialist, and Rice by choice a ground-stroke man. This match is to be played at 1 p.m., and will be followed at 3.15 by the doubles championship, in which the opponents in the singles will join forces against Parker and Fisher. This should provide a splendid exhibition, as Campbell and Rice are the Australasian doubles champions, and Parker and Fisher recently won the South Australian doubles championship. Fisher is also one of the holders of the New Zealand doubles championship. In the challenge pairs, ladies' singles, and ladies' doubles championships the finals will have added interest from the fact that in each case they will be fought out by representatives of New South Wales and Victoria.

The following is the programme for to-day:—

Singles Championship.
Final: Rice (N.S.W.) v Campbell (Vic.), Court 7, 1 p.m.

Weigall-Parbury v Shepherd-Lee.
Manning-Purves v Verge-Simpson.
d'Apice-Verge v Morton-McLaurin.

BILLIARDS.

LINDRUM v WILLIAMS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A feature of to-day's play in the match between Lindrum and Williams was an unfinished break of 489 made by Lindrum in the evening session. He had had only one visit to the table before this in the evening, and he then carried his afternoon's unfinished break of 141 to 318. He, therefore, had only one cue during the evening session, which gives him an average of 666.

The principal breaks were:—Lindrum, 188, 209, 140, 318, and 489 unfinished; Williams, 96 and 123.

BOXING.

PICATO AND DOUGLAS.

Frank Picato and Arthur Douglas are to meet at the Stadium to-night. Picato has a fine American record, and this will be his first bout in Australia. Particulars are advertised.

THE LANG-LESTER MATCH.

Next Saturday night will see the consummation of the match between Bill Lang and Jack Lester for the heavyweight championship of Australia. The men are in thorough condition, and interest is very keen. The prices of admission are advertised. Seats may be reserved at Proudfoot's in Castlereagh-street, or at Eastway's in George-street.

STATE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The State amateur boxing and wrestling championships promoted by the Sydney Sports Club will be commenced at the Gaiety Athletic Club to-night. The draw for the various divisions is appended:—

Heavyweight Division.—A. E. Airs beat J. Savage in one round (police stopped contest).

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

There will be the customary Saturday afternoon extra performance of "Jack and the Beanstalk" at Her Majesty's Theatre to-day. This spectacular extravaganza, with its vivacious ballets, beautiful transformations, and specialty features, amongst which the Pantzer acrobatic troupe ranks high, is drawing great audiences.

CRITERION THEATRE.

"A Woman in the Case," which is drawing packed audiences at the Criterion Theatre, will be performed for the last time there next Friday evening, and the final matinee will accordingly take place on Wednesday. Mr. George Willoughby's Company will appear at Goulburn, Yass, Wagga, and Albury on their way to Melbourne, where they open next Saturday.

Mr. George Willoughby has received a letter from Mr. Weedon Grossmith, stating that the new farcical comedy, "Baby Mine," which is in its second year in New York, is doing enormous business at the London Criterion. Mr. Grossmith thinks it will rival "Charley's Aunt," and heartily congratulates Mr. Willoughby upon acquiring it for Australia.

"THE GAY GORDONS."

"The Gay Gordons," by Seymour Hicks, to music by Guy Jones, will be produced at the Criterion next Saturday by the Clarke-Meynell English Comic Opera Company, in which 18 new principals will appear. Some reference to Miss Florence Imeson and Miss Nell Finnis is made in our "Music and Drama" column, and the long list of newcomers includes Mr. Frank Lincoln, who has played the part of Angus Graeme upwards of 1000 times in the big provincial centres, besides occasionally replacing Mr. Hicks in London; Mr. Tom Graves, another well known comedian; Mr. Fred. Winn (stage manager), Mr. Albert Vernon (conductor), Messrs. David Jefferson, W. L. Montgomery, Frank Compton, Alfred Derry, Carleton Stuart, Misses Nellie Corens, Kathleen Starling, Evelyn Aburn, and others. Miss Maggie Knight will reappear. The plan will open at Elvy's on Monday.

HOSPITAL SATURDAY MATINEE.

This afternoon the new Japanese play, "The Grey Kimona," will be performed at the Criterion Theatre in aid of the Hospital Saturday Fund. Mr. F. Wynne Jones will conduct a double chorus and a strong professional orchestra, and Misses Amy Murphy, Pressy Preston, Messrs. R. B. Orchard, Gordon, Woods, and others, who ensured the success of the original production, will reappear. The plan is at Elvy's.

THEATRE ROYAL.

At 1.45 to-day the curtain will rise at the Theatre Royal upon an extra matinee performance of "Our Miss Gibbs," and the popular Gaiety piece will also be rendered on Wednesday afternoon. Wednesday night will form the farewell, completing a run of 230 representations, when Messrs. J. C. Williamson will hand over half the gross takings to the Sydney Hospital Centenary Fund. Seats may be reserved at Paling's at 10s, where also early gallery tickets are now available.

"THE DOLLAR PRINCESS."

Dr. Leo. Fall's fascinating Viennese opera, "The Dollar Princess," has been chosen for the return of J. C. Williamson's New Comic Opera Company to the Theatre Royal next Saturday. An exceptionally strong cast will appear, as follows:—Miss Olive Godwin as Alice Conder, Miss Lottie Sargent as Daisy, Miss Florence Young as Olga Labinska, Mr. Reginald Roberts as Freddy Fairfax, Mr. Frank Greene as John Earl of Quorn, Mr. Langford Kirby as Dick Conder, Mr. W. S. Percy as Bulger, and Mr. Bert Gilbert as Harry Q. Conder. The plan will open at Paling's on Monday.

"A GREAT BLOW FOR THE BAND."

It was at Wasenburg that a French captain of Chasseurs, upon witnessing the Bavarian musicians being decimated by shell fire, coolly made the now historic remark that it was "a great blow for the band."

Not quite so disastrous, but certainly more perturbing, was an experience met with by Mr. John Philip Sousa during his visit to Capetown a few weeks ago, en route to Australia. A huge Kaffir, engaged in connection with the baggage arrangements for the band, by some devious means, obtained access to the music-box and annexed therefrom a big parcel of original manuscript band parts, which he was subsequently discovered endeavouring to sell in the streets. In fact, he had already disposed of a number of the parts to his fellow Kaffirs at fancy prices. After much difficulty the band parts were ultimately recovered, but the Kaffirs parted with great reluctance, their view very evidently being that as the band created such an enormous sensation in South Africa the manuscript dispensed very "big medicine." Some idea of the seriousness of the matter can be gained from the fact that many of the pilfered parts belonged to "The Federal March," christened by Sir George Reid, and which Mr. Sousa is presenting to Australia, also portion of the recently composed "Coronation March," the replacing of which would have entailed an enormous amount of work, orchestrated as it is for Mr. Sousa's complete band of 60.

No such trouble should assail the "March King" in Sydney, where after a morning reception at the Town Hall he will open his season there on the evening of Monday, May 15. The plan will open at Carnegie's Piano Warehouse, King-street, on Monday morning next, where elaborate arrangements have been made to cope with an unprecedented rush for seats.

ADELPHI THEATRE.

"The Bad Girl of the Family" at the Adelphi Theatre is attracting large houses nightly, and the approach of the sixth week shows no diminution in the attendances. Last Saturday large numbers were again turned away, and the booking for this Saturday is also large.

The ladies of the Marlow Company will have a special stall to-day for the hospital collection at the corner of George and Harris streets. It will be typical of "The Bad Girl." The stand is being artistically arranged.

"Under Two Flags" will be the next Adelphi production, in which, with a view to spectacular effects, Cigarette's famous ride with horses on the stage, and the great desert scene, will form special features. As regards other Marlow enterprises, one of his companies (directed by Mr. George Darrell) has recently produced "A Girl's Temptation" in Brisbane. Another company will continue touring New Zealand with "The Bad Girl" until August. Two English artists under engagement to George Marlow, Ltd., are on their way to Australia. These are Miss Louise Hampton and Mr. Cecil Mannering. Both have played the leading roles in several dramas recently purchased by the Marlow management. Miss Hampton, who is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Hampton, supported her parents as a juvenile actress, both in classic roles and in melodrama, and is a favourite at the London Standard Theatre, where she recently starred in "The Girl Who Wrecked His Home" for nearly 400 nights.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

This afternoon and evening the new programme will include Reichen's wonderful dogs, newly arrived by the Osterley, which caused no end of laughter and astonishment upon their introduction at the Tivoli Theatre last night. Mr. Harry Rickards will bring forward Cadwall and Verne, new English artists, in their musical sketch "Early Closing Day," and a star attraction will be the Seven Perezoffs, comedy jugglers, who will stage "An Animated Night at Maxim's." Brown and Robinson will reappear for a short farewell season, and a strong programme will include Peggy Pryde, Black and White, Miss Ray Jones, Miss Ruby Tointon, and others.

NATIONAL AMPHITHEATRE.

The new programme at the National Amphitheatre this afternoon and evening will include Hassan, the Indian magician. One of the most startling things done by Hassan is the lifting of a weight of from 60lb to 65lb by his eyebrows. Owing to their popularity, Armstrong and Verne, who were to have left for Newcastle, will remain on for another week. Artists appearing for the first time, or making a reappearance, are—George Banveen, comedy musician; W. Dagmar, Olga Pennington, the National Duo, the Rowell Sisters, and Sandy Donaldson. Harland and Rollison, Watts and Lucas, the Tit-bits Trio, and Walter Whyte are all in the new bill.

The first of a series of Sunday night concerts and pictorial exhibitions will take place to-morrow night at the National Amphitheatre under direction of Mr. Shepard, by special approval of the Hon. the Chief Secretary. The doors will open at 7 o'clock.

LYCEUM.—SPENCER'S THEATRESCOPE.

This afternoon and evening the programme of new star films at the Lyceum will still retain as the crowning attraction Mr. Chas. Spencer's elaborate series of "The Fatal Wedding," every important detail in which, including the marches and dances of the Tin Can Band by upwards of 100 children, has been vividly and dramatically reproduced. This series, which is crowding the house, will be supplemented by several exciting new stories, and the Grand National Steeplechase of 1911 as a bonne bouche for sportsmen.

WEST'S AT THE GLACIARIUM AND PALACE.

The last two performances of West's Pictures will be given at the Glaciarium and the Palace Theatre this afternoon and evening. The former house will then be devoted to ice-skating, while West's will open on Monday a few yards nearer town at the newly-improved Princess Theatre (late the Bijou) with an entirely new London programme, including the Interstate Oar Race, Oxford and Cambridge Boat Race, and the present Trial of the Camorrists in Italy. To-day's programme will include "Bobbie and the Redskins," Liverpool Grand National Steeplechase, 1911, "Seth's Temptation," and "Tommy Gets a Trumpet."

This evening the management will show the contesting crews of the interstate race completing their last stages of training, specially taken by West's experts yesterday afternoon.

"WHAT TO DO WITH OUR GIRLS."

This is the last day of the Demonstrational Exhibition at the Town Hall. A varied and interesting programme of displays has been arranged, including cooking, gardening, soil analysis, dairy work, bee-keeping, kindergarten, Norland nursing, university settlement work, medical mission work, pottery-making, life-saving, children's ambulance work, and foil fencing. There will be a lecture entitled "The First Line of Defence Against Microbes," by Dr. Greig-Smith. The exhibition will be open from 2 till 10. At 3 o'clock the New South Wales branch of the Queensland Silk Society will meet to arrange details of the new society.

MISS THELMA HANLON.

Amateurs of music will regret to learn that Miss Thelma Hanlon met with an accident a few days ago near Picton while driving. The vehicle overturned, and the young soprano was pinned beneath it. Her left arm and side were crushed, while the after effect of shock has proved somewhat severe. Miss Hanlon is progressing slowly, but hopes to reappear in public some weeks hence.

RANDWICK MUSICAL SOCIETY.

This evening the Randwick District Musical Society will open their second season, at the Randwick Town Hall, with a choral and orchestral programme, which will include selections from "Faust" and "Martha." Miss Edie Hunt and Mr. Reg. Riemenschneider will be amongst the assisting artists.

HOSPITAL SATURDAY CONCERT.

On Monday evening next a concert will be given at the Town Hall, organised by Messrs. W. H. Paling and Co., Ltd., in aid of the Hospital Saturday Fund. A strongly-attractive programme has been arranged by Mr. H. N. Southwell (hon. manager) in the cause of charity, as, in addition to the State Military Band, under Captain Bentley, A.R.C.M., and the St. Cecilia Choir, under Mr. Hector Fleming, the list of artists will include Mme. Slapoffski, Misses Iris de Cairos Rego, Emilie Lambert, Millie Gallagher, Messrs. Ernest Truman, Bryce Carter, and Harold Whittle. The plan is at Paling's.

LAWRENCE CAMPBELL RECITALS.

Messrs. Nicholson and Co. will direct Mr. Lawrence Campbell's 1911 season of [illegible] and Dramatic Recitals, commencing in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Monday evening next, when that popular entertainer will present much matter that is new in his sketches and monologues. Plans for subscribers and the general public are open at Nicholson's, and already the booking has been heavy. The series will continue on Monday evenings, May 15, 22, 29, June 5 and 12, and the entertainer will be supported at the opening concert by Miss Josie Miles, Miss Lilian Frost, and Mrs. Shaw Mayer.

MISS LILY MACKENZIE SETON.

Miss Lily Mackenzie Seton, soprano pupil of Mrs. Reginald Quesnel, will give a vocal recital in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Tuesday next, when she will sing "Les regrets de Leonore" (Le Tasse), by Godard, and "L'extase de la Vierge" (La Vierge), by Massenet, and also Alfred Hill's "Home, Little Maori Home," with invisible chorus and orchestral accompaniment, specially arranged by the composer for this occasion. The soprano will be supported by Miss Gertrude Palmer and Messrs. Cyril Monk, Carl Gotsch, and the St. Cecilia Choir.

MISS RUBIE HENRY'S CONCERT.

Miss Rubie Henry, contralto, will give a vocal recital in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Wednesday next, when she will sing "Oh, My Heart is Weary," "Che Faro," and modern pieces of interest, and will be supported by Miss Queenie Fenton, Miss Alice Kelly, Mr. Harry Neil, Mr. Warwick Armstrong, and a double quartette from the Garcia School of Music. The plan is at Nicholson's.

CONCERT AT MANLY.

On Wednesday evening next Miss Lilian Frost will give an organ recital at the Manly Presbyterian Church, at which she will render pieces by Bach, Humperdinck, Kahn, Truman, and Gounod. Miss Rica Nitzschmann and Mr. Warwick Mackenzie will be the assisting artists.

SATURDAY POPULAR CONCERTS.

Another attractive programme has been arranged for Mrs. Haffenden-Smith's next popular concert, which will be held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Saturday next, under the direction of Messrs. Nicholson and Co., Limited. Miss Bessie Beattie, Mr. F. Mowat Carter, Signor Zanelli (late of the Grand Opera Company), and the eminent tragedian, Mr. Walter Bentley, have been specially engaged; and Misses Gertrude Palmer, Aileen Neill, Mab Fotheringhame, Katie Rappeneker, E. Murden, and Messrs. J. Coleman, Sid B. Brown, and Master Jack Moran will also appear. The plan opens to-day at Nicholson's.

MR. NICHOLAS J. GEHDE'S CONCERT.

Mr. Nicholas J. Gehde will direct a concert at the Town Hall next Saturday evening, when he will repeat the best features of his Good Friday Night entertainment, in addition to new items. Mr. Gehde's original "Storm Fantasia" will be repeated. Misses Vera Parker, Elsie B. Peerless, Lilian Frost (organist), Irene McPherson, Ivy Allen (violinist), Messrs. Maurice Chenoweth, Ernest Archer (N.Z. tenor), Roy Allen, R. Irvine (flautist), 16 Cathedral Chorister Boys, and the Meistersingers' Double Male Quartette will assist. The plan is at Paling's, as notified.

WALTER THOMAS MILLS.

Next Saturday evening Walter Thomas Mills, orator, and celebrated as the author of "The Struggle for Existence," will give the first of a series of short lectures at the Protestant Hall. The subjects brought forward will be the burning social and political questions of the hour, such as socialism and evolution. The plan and day sales will open at Cole's from this morning. The subject of the first lecture will be "What is Socialism?"

AUSTRAL STRING QUARTET.

The 1911 season of the Austral String Quartet will open in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Thursday, May 18, under the direction of Nicholson and Co., Limited. The quartet will consist of Messrs. Cyril Monk, Alfred Hill, S. Vost Janssen, and Carl Gotsch. Several important works will be performed, conspicuous amongst which, at the opening concert will be Mr. Alfred Hill's "String Quartet in B Flat." The assisting artists at the first concert will be Madame Cecelia Waldron and Mr. Laurence Godfrey Smith. The plans for subscribers and the general public are open at Nicholson's.

MISS JOSIE MILES' CONCERT.

Messrs. Nicholson and Co., Limited, announce that Miss Josie Miles will give a farewell concert in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Tuesday, May 16, prior to her departure from Sydney. A strong committee has been formed, in recognition of the fact that Miss Miles has given her services freely to many charitable movements, and in this way is entitled to public support, in addition to her ability as a singer. The assisting artists will be Miss Bessie Beattie, Mr. Cyril Monk, Mr. Charles Larsen, and George S. Holburn. The plan opens at Nicholson's to-day.

THE "WALTER BENTLEY" RECITAL.

On Thursday, May 18, the students of the Walter Bentley College of Elocution and Dramatic Art will give a costume entertainment in St. James's Hall. Scenes from "The Taming of the Shrew" (Mr. Bentley as Petruchio), "The Lady of Lyons," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," the farce "The Spectre Bridegroom," and the Scottish play "The King and the Miller," with Mr. Bentley as Jock Howieson, will be performed. Tickets may be had at the college, 554 George-street.

S. C. JEFFCOTT MEMORIAL.

A concert will be given in the interests of the memorial to the late S. C. Jeffcott at the Y.M.C.A. Hall on May 23, at popular prices, by leading artists. Great interest is being taken in the movement by pupils and friends. Donations have been sent from the country, and a number of tickets have been sold. The plan opens at Paling's May 16.

MISS MADGE HELLMRICH.

Miss Madge Hellmrich is shortly leaving for Europe, and a strong committee of her friends and admirers has accordingly been formed to ensure the success of a concert to this favourite singer. Mlle. Antonia Dolores has accorded her patronage to the send-off, which will take place at the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Wednesday, May 24.

MR. CHAS. ROBINS' CONCERT.

Mr. Chas. Robins will give a vocal recital, under the direction of Mr. Louis Grist on Thursday, May 25, at the Y.M.C.A. Hall. The baritone, who will sing the prologue from "I Pagliacci," will be assisted by Miss Ivy Allen, Mr. J. Knight (organist), Mr. George S. Holburn (humorist), and other artists.

SYDNEY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The second concert of the Sydney Symphony Orchestra's fourth season will be held in the Town Hall on Saturday afternoon, May 27, under the conductorship of Mr. Joseph Bradley. The orchestra will perform for the first time in Sydney Saint-Saens' "Symphony No. 3 in C Minor," for orchestra, grand organ and two pianos, with Miss Bessie Beattie first piano, Mr. Robinson second piano, and Mr. G. C. Hellemann at the grand organ, Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody in F Major, No. 1," Romanza from "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" (Mozart), and "Marche Marocaine" (Berlioz). Special attention is directed to the fact that the famous Sheffield Choir will appear at the Symphony Orchestra's third concert of the season, and that subscribers are entitled to reserved seats at the Sheffield Choir concert.

WIRTH BROTHERS' CIRCUS.

The last matinee of Messrs. Wirth Brothers' season is announced for to-day at Prince Alfred Park, where the mammoth circus will be seen for the last time this evening, with the Flying Gordons, the Adelia Sisters, the beautiful horses, and the wild beasts, all once more in the entertainment. Yesterday a highly successful testimonial matinee was given in honour of Miss Marizles Wirth. The plan is at Paling's.

LYRIC AND COLONIAL THEATRES.

Under the direction of J. D. Williams, the Lyric Theatre, the Colonial Theatre No. 1, and the Colonial Theatre No. 2, handsome George-street photoplayhouses thoroughly brought up to date, offer continuous picture entertainments from 11 a.m. until 11 p.m. All the latest romantic dramas, humorous stories, and realistic scenes at home and abroad are presented. A different programme at each theatre, and a complete change every Monday and Thursday, are features appreciated by the pleasure-loving public.

On Tuesday afternoon next Mr. J. D. Williams will set aside half the gross takings at all three theatres in aid of the Citizens' Fund for sending the Coronation cadets to England, and it is hoped that the public will cordially support such a generous offer.

STANDARD THEATRE.

At the Standard Theatre two performances nightly continue the rule, and is proving popular, as anyone arriving late for the 7 o'clock vaudeville entertainment can stay on and see "the missing link" without extra charge in the 9 o'clock programme. Among the new artistes announced for to-night are Addie Tromp, motto-balladist; Lovell and Nolan, comedy-sketch duo; Little Charlie, pocket comedian; and Laila Montey, danseuse.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.

At the Alhambra Theatre, Haymarket, continuous photo-plays offer entertainment of a varied character, the latest star films from Europe and America being shown with appropriate music and realistic effects. There will be a sacred pictorial concert to-morrow night.

EMPIRE THEATRE.

At the Empire Theatre, Oxford-street the latest moving pictures on romantic, humorous, and scenic subjects are varied by vaudeville items contributed by the Musical Sheppards, the six Brompton Girls, and other artists.

NORTH SYDNEY COLISEUM.

The roller-skating season has opened brightly on the immense floor space of the Ridge-street Coliseum, and in the theatre photo-plays and scenes from the world's doings are shown from 7.30 till 10 p.m.

AMERICAN PICTURE PALACE.

At the American Picture Palace continuous picture entertainments are available from 11 a.m. until 11 p.m., when the latest films on humorous, dramatic, and scenic subjects from abroad are screened.

MR. BERTRAM FLOHM'S RECITALS.

Mr. A. Bertram Flohm will give the first of this season's series of students' recitals at St. James' Hall on June 8, when a number of clever elocutionists will be brought forward.

TOWN HALL ORGAN MATINEE.

ADELPHI PICTURE CONCERT.

The regular Sunday sacred pictorial concert will be continued at the Adelphi Theatre to-morrow night, under the direction of Mr. E. J. Kilpatrick. The programme, which will be augmented by a complete orchestra, will embrace such star films as "The Doctor," "Belshazzar's Feast," "Solomon's Judgment," "The Message," "The Young Mother," "Pompei, the Dead City," and "Vicar of Wakefield."

AEROPLANE FLIGHT TO-DAY.

In view of the great interest taken by the public, and the probability of the bi-plane being a prominent feature in the first big war, the directors of Ascot Racing Club have made special arrangements for Mr. Hammond to make his final flight in Sydney on the Bristol, bi-plane this afternoon, immediately after the Ascot races. Mr. Hammond will be accompanied in his flight by Mr. Herbert Garratt, the chairman of directors of Ascot Race Club. Mr. Holman, Acting Premier and Attorney-General, has announced his intention of being present.

ATHLETICS.

A.A.A. COUNCIL MEETING.

THE AMATEUR STATUS.

On Thursday evening at the Sports Club was held the first meeting of the new council of the New South Wales Amateur Athletic Association, when the following were elected as the executive committee:—Messrs. H. G. Bell, R. Tuck, J. F. Maitland, J. W. Inglis, J. Dunn, and A. Wood. Mr. W. Jones was elected chairman of the council.

The question of the amateur status was once more raised, when Mr. M. M'Carthy (Catholic Club Harriers) gave notice of the following motion:—That the hon. secretary of the Association be instructed to write to the hon. secretary of the Sporting Federation, to the effect that this meeting of delegates to the N.S.W. A.A.A. Council is of opinion that the Rugby League Footballers should be placed on an equality with Rugby Union players as far as the amateur status is concerned.

The matter will be considered by the council at the next meeting.

HUNTER'S HILL HARRIER A.A.C.

The committee of the above club have decided to open the season with a 220 yards handicap on Saturday next. Handicaps will be published later.

The Marrickville Harriers will hold 100 yards and 1 mile handicaps this afternoon.

EAST SYDNEY A.A.C.

Entries for the above club's 2½m open road race on May 13 close with the hon. secretary of the A.A.A. at the Sports Club on Monday night, the 8th instant.

PLEASE NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

The Dependable Atlas is a HEAVY DUTY Engine, especially for cruisers and working boats. It is not built for speed alone, but for steady, hard work as well.

Local records have proven Atlas Engines to be faster than other engines of the same class and rating, when running in boats of equal size, but we still sell the Atlas as a heavy duty engine.

Buying the Dependable Atlas is simply good, sound business dealing. You get an engine that has been made to prove every claim we make for it, before you are allowed to purchase. On that basis, how about securing a demonstration at once?

5 to 500 h.p.

ATLAS OIL ENGINE COMPANY, 220 CLARENCE-STREET. (Near Town Hall).

ARE YOU A K-W OWNER? You will never know the real pleasure of motor boating until your engine is equipped with guaranteed ignition apparatus.

That's the K-W kind. It is commended to you as years ahead of any other apparatus built.

A little book, "The Vital Spark," gives our reasons. You will appreciate them. Send for the book. It's free.

BICYCLES AND MOTOR CARS.

IN ONE'S MOUNT LIES THE SECRET OF ENJOYABLE MOTOR CYCLING

And if the mount you choose is a "Triumph," there is no doubt about the amount of enjoyment you will get from it.

This is the best of all motor cycles. In hill-climbing events, petrol consumption tests, long-distance racing, record-breaking runs with side-car attached, and high-speed town-to-town work, there is no cycle on the market that can show the high averages that the "Triumph" has secured.

In addition, it is a remarkably economical machine in operation. The engine, being so reliable, needs practically no attention, and even the very roughest treatment has, in many instances, failed to impair its durability, dependability, and flexibility.

We're ready to prove our statements in regard to this machine, and if you will call we will put one through its paces.

For those men who cannot call during the daytime we keep our Pitt-street Depot open till 9 on Friday evenings. Will you come along then?

BENNETT & BARKELL, LTD., Sole Agents for "Triumph" in N.S.W., 204 Pitt-street, and Castlereagh-street, Sydney.

CLEMENT-BAYARD MOTOR CARS.

Purchasers of these famous Cars have advised us as under:—

FROM CREMORNE: "My 11-16 h.p. Bayard has done over 14,000 miles in 2½ years, the greater part of which were over country roads, and it has not cost me sixpence for repairs, and has never been to a repairer's."

INVERELL: "Our 11-16 h.p. Clement Bayard has done PERFECTLY 70,000 miles, many of which were over the ranges, and it is still going well."

MUSWELLBROOK: "Yesterday we ran the car from Bylong to Muswellbrook, 70 miles, over the ranges, again, and she came through tip-top, five in car. She ran through splendidly. One wants to know what the climbing over these ranges is like to understand what the trip is. We have had four other makes of car all steps. This car is the ONLY ONE that has never stopped, and with a good load on, too."

Sole Agents: Office, FAIRFAX and ROBERTS, The Oldest Jewellery House in Sydney, 23 Hunter-street.
Garage: STANTON COOK, LTD., Motor and Electrical Engineers, 22 Underwood-street, off 37 Pitt-street.

CLEMENT-BAYARD MOTOR CARS. 1911 MODELS.

An ideal Car for family and touring purposes is the Clement-Bayard, 12/16-h.p., 4-cylinder Car, £475.
It takes hills with a load better than most 20/25-h.p. Cars.
It gets, if anything, quieter the longer it is run. It is lighter (though stronger) than most Cars.
It is made of the most durable of metals. It is handsome to the eye, and carries five.
It is the simplest of all cars to drive. There is nothing to do but steer. Any sensible man can maintain it. The oiling, the timing, etc., are all automatic.
CLEMENT-BAYARD are famed, the world over, for RELIABILITY.

The price of this ideal Car is £475. It has extra high clearance.
These Cars are now ready for delivery. Each Car is guaranteed for 2 years.
Another Model now ready for the road is the 10/15-h.p., 4-cylinder, with double phaeton side entrance body, £375.
We also have on the water the latest production in the form of a "six" 15-h.p. Car coming, at a low price.
"CLEMENT-BAYARD" CARS are made by Mr. A. Clement in his great works at Levallois, Paris, where 2000 men are constantly employed. He is recognised as one of (if not the) leading Motor Engineers of Europe, and all his latest triumphs appear in the 1911 Motor Cars to hand.
When the British Government wanted huge motors for the three great War Dirigibles, now building, they went to the "Clement-Bayard" Works for them.
When a Nation's very existence might depend on a Motor, must be ensured, and that is the characteristic of "Clement-Bayards." In addition to this, they are famed for great strength (yet lightness), and power to stand up against hard, continuous wear, and yet they are extremely light on tyres and naphtha.

RELIABILITY

Call and allow us to explain the reason why our prices for Cars generally, Commercial Lorries, and High-wheel Buggies will be found to be 25 per cent. lower than the usual Sydney quotations.

THE F.I.A.T. WINS ON ROUGH ROAD WORK!

Although so luxuriously easy in action, the F.I.A.T. is a splendid machine for rough country work. It is fitted with flexible springs to absorb all road-shock, has five-bow cape cart extension hood, G.L. patent folding glass wind-shield, two powerful acetylene head lamps with separate generator, one tail and two oil sidelights, and body can be built to suit purchaser's own requirements. Four-cylinder, 12-15 h.p., £600; four-cylinder, 15-20 h.p., £700; four-cylinder, 15-25 h.p., £750; six-cylinder, 20-30 h.p., £900.

THE K.R.I.T.—A DAINTY RUNABOUT.

Every comfort that a small car can have is secured when you purchase a K.R.I.T.

It's a low-priced Vehicle, and as good as it looks. Has a remarkably high mileage per gallon of fuel, and is silent, free from vibration, and thoroughly reliable.

Make an appointment for a trial trip.

GARRATT'S, LTD., 173-5 Elizabeth-street. 148-50 Castlereagh-street.

TYRES OF RELIABILITY.

The fact of our possessing the confidence of such a large number of motorists throughout Australia is positive proof that stand out prominently as Tyres of necessity, because of their wonderful service over rough roads.

"DUNLOPS" have no equal for sound wear and reliability.

AUTOCAR CLUB OF TASMANIA.
RELIABILITY AND PETROL CONSUMPTION TEST
AND [illegible] HILL CLIMB WAS WON RIGHT OUT BY A

12-20 H.P. HUMBER CAR

In competition with a [illegible] the leading Cars of the day.
The little HUMBER [illegible] way she flew up the hill was the talk of Tasmania, especially as she was competing in full touring rig against cars stripped to the chassis.
The Humber went through the two days trials (244 miles) without a single mechanical trouble whatever. No adjustment of any kind was made or a spanner or a tool of any kind used throughout the test. No other car in her class can boast of such a fine performance, although much more powerful, and costing nearly double the money.

THE TWO-SPEED "SPEEDWELL" MOTOR CYCLE.

If this splendid motor cycle had nothing to recommend it but its bevel gears or absence of all belt troubles, it would be sufficient to place it before all other motor bicycles for comfort and reliability; but there are other interesting features—its short wheel base points to ease of steering, its lightweight and low gear make it safe and sure in sand, which is dangerous, and mud, which is treacherous. The Magneto is in such a position that it is possible to ride through water on the road without short circuiting. The shaft transmission with the gear drive encased and running in grease is simply a luxury, and makes motor cycling a positive pleasure. Call and let us show you other points of this machine. We shall be glad to serve you.

NEW CARS AT ANGUS'.

THE "FLANDERS" (20-H.P.) AND THE "E.M.F." (30-H.P.)

A FOREWORD:

For half a century we have made and imported the highest class of vehicles used in Australia. We go always after the best in its class. We never have handled, and never will handle, second-rate goods. Since adding the sale of motor cars to our long-established business we have made great headway, notably with the magnificent "ARMSTRONG-WHITWORTH" car. Most of these superb vehicles (ordered from the greatest engineering firm in Great Britain) have been bespoke before arrival, and stand unchallenged to-day as the finest examples of motor-mechanics ever seen in the Commonwealth. In commercial motors our "ARROL-JOHNSTON" (of the type used by Shackleton on the South Polar ice) is doing fine work all over N.S.W., users writing us in enthusiastic terms of its qualities as a saver of time, labour, and expense. Again, we say, we always go after the best in its class.

THE TWO NEW CARS.

These are from America. From the 55-year-old and world-famous house of Studebaker. They are submitted now as representing the best brains in the automobile industry of the States. Enormous capital has been sunk in the enterprise, enabling Studebaker's to put forward two cars that, while moderately priced, are of splendid construction, and equipped with latest improvements, while costly experimentation has given place to standardisation throughout.

The "FLANDERS" is a 20-H.P. MAGNETO-EQUIPPED, 4-CYLINDER RUNABOUT, designed and manufactured respectively by men at the summit of their profession—Flanders and Hewlett, the latter renowned as manufacturer of some of the highest-priced cars in the State. The "FLANDERS" is backed by Studebaker's 55-years' reputation, and most Americans in N.S.W. will tell you what a guarantee that signifies! The "FLANDERS" was secured by us to meet local conditions. It has extra-high clearance, very quick turn, will stand wear and tear, runs smoothly and surely, and is particularly light on tyres. In addition, it is equipped with acetylene head lights and generator, side lights, folding glass screen and horn. Its low cost (£250) has only been made possible by the enormous number turned out annually, and we recommend it to our customers. Had we not been prepared to do this, we should not have taken the agency.

The "E.M.F." is a 30-H.P., 4-CYLINDER, 5-PASSENGER TOURING CAR, equipped similarly to the "FLANDERS." Perfect manufacturing organisation and long experience together enable the "E.M.F." like the "FLANDERS" to be turned out in huge numbers, and therefore at moderate cost. We have been fortunate in getting this agency. We are confident the "E.M.F." will sell fast when its qualities become known. All essential features of the high-priced car are in the "E.M.F." The workmanship is sound and honest; there is no cheap material, and we unhesitatingly recommend the car. Both Studebaker's name and our own go with these cars.

W. F. KAY, GRANVILLE.

You often read this column and wonder what is best to do. you want a good farm or home, but dislike the worry of making useless inspections.

If you thought you could go straight to what you want, you would not be long in making up your mind.

There is no straighter road than coming to this office, where you have the largest range of choice, and my advice is at your disposal.

Past buyers say they have never been sorry for taking this advice, and I enjoy their fullest confidence. That is the secret of my great success.

Perhaps I can help YOU. You can't go wrong in trying me.

FARM,
107 acres, which I can recommend with every confidence, because it is good all through, and will yield a splendid return if intelligently worked. The soil is first-class, with rich grass and cultivation paddocks, and about an acre of fruit trees and vines, besides ample water. The Cottage of 6 rooms is in excellent order; so are the outbuildings, and they comprise every kind for the successful working of the farm. There are 2 horses, besides a sulky, buggy, etc., and the school and P.O. are only 10 minutes from the door. Title, Torrens. Price £1100, half cash. 6½ miles rail, 25 miles city. If I were you I would have a look at it; you will find it just as good as I say, and perhaps better.

FARM,
97 acres, of a different kind to the above. It has 12 acres of healthy fruit trees (citrus) and about 50 acres of rich flats that will grow excellent lucerne. The house is of a superior kind, being built of brick with tiled roof, and has a very nice finish inside, containing 4 main rooms and hall, kitchen, laundry, etc., and all the furniture goes with it (it is good, too). The outbuildings are substantial and roomy, just what you would expect to see on a successful farm, and the whole place bears an aspect of prosperity and plenty. Five miles from rail, 35 miles from city. I have it on the book for £1500, but the owner sends me word that having bought a big grazing farm in Queensland he will take £1300 if I can sell it quickly, and will accept half cash. I have inspected this, and find it one of the best. You will say the same.

COUNTRY HOME.
An excellent Brick Residence, of 10 sunny rooms, large hall, kitchen, bath, etc., on 15 acres, only 1½ mile from train, 50 miles city, on the Southern line. Healthy air, pleasant surroundings, and all that goes to make life happy.
It seems peculiar that a place like this should be quoted at only £550, but if is so, and you who would like a property of this kind should see about inspecting it without delay.

W. F. KAY,
(And at Camden.) Granville.

MID pleasures and palaces though we may roam, There's no place like Kay's to purchase a home.

CAMDEN CREAMLANDS.

W. F. KAY OFFERS:

[illegible] ACRES, all cleared with the exception of 75 acres, left for shelter, heavily grassed and well fenced, divided into 12 paddocks, each separately watered; 3 road frontages, and the remaining side bounded by the city water canal. Superior Cottage of 6 rooms, kitchen, conservatory, bathroom, flower garden, lawn, etc., unlimited water supply. Complete range of outbuildings, including man's quarters, cowbails, yards, stables, dairy, pigstyes, etc. Lambs raised on this property have recently brought 14/ at Flemington, and cattle bred here have topped the market. This property is very suitable for a Dairy or Stud Farm, being only 3½ miles from rail, 30 miles city. Torrens Title, £10 10s per acre, half cash.

A HABERFIELD COTTAGE IS AN EXCELLENT INVESTMENT.
There is one investment which the fluctuations of the Exchange do not affect—a Haberfield Cottage to live in, with a garden to cultivate. These give a pleasure and a certainty that certificates and scrip cannot afford.
Tangible return for your money is given in the constantly-improving value of the property at Haberfield. As a suburb, it has progressed far beyond all anticipations, and to-day, with its many pretty homes, appropriately set in a "garden-like" surroundings, offers special inducements even from a speculative standpoint.
Make Haberfield your Bank. Put your money into it. Become the owner of a Cottage there. No financial crisis can then affect the money you have put into it, and the interest returned will be many times larger than that procurable from the same money placed in any other way.
A most Charming Cottage is ready for you to live in now. There are 20 new places in all to choose from, priced £575 to £1785. Look through them. Go over the suburb. Understand how Haberfield Cottages being built a large number at a time mean a corresponding reduction in the cost, and an improved and distinctive architecture, construction, and finish. Take electric trams this afternoon, alighting at O'Connor-street.

HOMEDALE.

The name conjures up a vision of restfulness, quiet, and comfort—a vision of cherry red roofs and snug, well-kept homes. It conveys a certain amount of natural charm—fresh, clear air healthy and beautiful surroundings. It suggests a contrast to the smoke-laden, brick and mortar confines of the city, and the contrast is well borne out at

HOMEDALE ESTATE, HURSTVILLE.

Here we have the natural charm—the fresh air—the elbow room of the country, combined with the accessibility and modern conveniences of a suburban residence. The red roofs are in course of construction, and before long the whole Estate will present a picture of comfort, beauty, and settled prosperity. Allotments are selling freely, and this estate promises to be one of the quickest sellers we have ever handled. Let us advise you therefore to take the first opportunity of visiting this property. It is only ten minutes' walk from Hurstville Station.

HOMEDALE ESTATE

is the picked residential spot of the district. Magnificent views of the George's River and Botany Bay can be obtained from the Estate. It is one of the highest positions on the line, and overlooks an extensive tract of the surrounding district. The allotments are level and practically ready for the builder. The roads are good and well made, and the drainage is of the best. Allotments, 66ft frontage, from 5/6 to 18/. Larger Blocks of about 3 Acres from £10 per acre. These are especially suitable for Poultry Farming, etc. Terms from £1 down, 10/ per month. Torrens Title. Plans, etc., from Dept. H.

BANKSTOWN HOME SITES, 6/6 FT.

GREENACRE PARK ESTATE, BANKSTOWN, on the Belmore Railway, has much to offer the homeseeker and investor. It is just thirty-five minutes from the heart of the city in what is destined to become one of the busiest suburbs of Greater Sydney. The extension of the railway from Bankstown to Liverpool will be the means of attracting a large number of residents, because Bankstown will be the first stop out and the last stop in for all Southern Trains. As a result, property values must increase considerably during the next decade, and the wise man will invest his savings now. With all these advantages—and many more—we can offer you splendid level Acre Blocks of rich soil, handy to Bankstown Station, close to stores and school, for £42 10. In other words, lots with a frontage of 132ft by the liberal depth of 330ft, for 6/6 ft. Give this matter a little thought, and you must agree with us that Bankstown land is a first-class investment. Torrens Title. Easy Terms: £1 down, and 10/ Month for each £30 of purchase money. Write our Dept. H. for Marked Plan and Booklets.

"THE BIRMINGHAM OF THE STATE."

Within eleven miles of the city is the flourishing Manufacturing Town of Auburn. This place has been going ahead rapidly for some time. The population has been increasing and many large manufacturing concerns have been making this their headquarters. Others are following suit, and building of all sorts is brisk. Before long Auburn promises to become the Birmingham of the State, and land values will show a very considerable increase before long.

DAY'S ESTATE, AUBURN,

is the best residential site in this progressive suburb. Five minutes from the station, and on good level soil, these allotments are excellent home sites, and are also first-class investments. Last Saturday we sold the bulk of the allotments by auction, and we are now offering the balance at auction prices. There is little to choose between them, one allotment being as good as another, and they are all good.

Frontages from 25 to 50 feet. Prices from 10s 6d to 14s 6d per foot. Title Torrens. Terms: Our usual easy ones of £1 down and 10s per month for every £30 purchased.

FISHING! BOATING! BATHING!

are some of the pastimes that recommend BY-THE-WATER ESTATE, COMO, to those looking for a bright, healthy spot to spend their week-ends. Accessibility is another big feature. Only 30 minutes from the City, and another 10 minutes' pull will put you right on the Estate. Over one hundred magnificent water frontages at 10s per foot, and on the easiest terms, from £1 down and 10s per month. Torrens Title. Send for Plans, etc., to Dept. H.

WHY NOT HAVE THE BEST?

When you build a home it is not the affair of a day or a month or a year—it is for a life time. The best available site, then, is not too good. Another consideration is that an allotment in a good locality is like a diamond—is always saleable at its full value. From all points of view the very best available home sites in Sydney to-day are on

KAMBALA HEIGHTS, BELLEVUE HILL.

This Estate is in Sydney's most select and exclusive suburb—25 minutes from the G.P.O.—on the 2nd section—is is elevated—close to Double Bay and Rose Bay, and yet above the fogs of the shore. Buyers are not required to build, but when they do a restriction of £500 prevents the building of any but high-grade homes. Deep 50ft Lots, 55/ a foot, 5 to 18 years' terms. Send to Dept. H for Marked Plan. TORRENS TITLE.

DOUBLE YOUR SAVINGS

by investing them in desirable real estate. Here is a splendid investment—one we can recommend—RIVERSIDE HEIGHTS ESTATE, AUBURN. This fine property is near the New Abattoirs at Homebush Bay, but far enough removed to be free from all the objectionable features of the works. Any lot you select at present prices will double your savings within the next year or so. The Abattoirs, when completed, will require over 1000 men in all departments. These men must have homes—many must be built on this estate. Choice Lots, from £22 each. Terms: £1 down, and 10/ monthly for each £30 of purchase money. Torrens Title. Plans and Booklet from Dept. RICH BLACK SOIL, and two feet deep in places. This is the sort of land that comprises ORANGE GROVE ESTATE, EASTWOOD. Soil that will grow anything, especially fruit. In fact, Orange Grove was formerly a big orchard, and has now lain fallow for many years. The ground has had a good rest, and is now ready to produce a big crop. There are a limited number of lots now remaining, and the demand for them is heavy. Secure one before they are all gone. They are the best around Sydney. Acre and half-acre blocks—areas available up to 5 acres. Torrens Title and Easy Terms. From £1 down, and 10/ monthly for every £30 purchased. Plans from Dept. H.

AN IDEAL GENTLEMAN'S COTTAGE RESIDENCE.
ONE OF THE MOST CHARMING HOMES
IN THE WESTERN SUBURBS.
Being sold solely on account of the owner going abroad, together with the beautiful Furnishings and Appointments if required.
This charming Cottage was built specially for the present owner, absolutely regardless of cost, and it was never intended that it should be sold.
It stands in the midst of beautifully laid-out grounds, in area about one acre, and is within easy distance of train or tram. Contains magnificent entrance hall and side hall, lovely drawing-room (25 x 16), beautifully decorated, splendid dining-room (26 x 16), richly appointed, best bedroom (26 x 16), with dressing-room and private bathroom opening off, fitted with porcelain bath, hot and cold water, marble basin, walls and floor tiled with very best quality of tiles, 5 other large bedrooms, maid's rooms, smoking-room, opening on to a charming conservatory, breakfast-room, second bathroom, with choice appointments, also with hot and cold water service. Large storeroom, butler's pantry, linen closets, glass and china closets, etc.
Wide verandahs front and side, with inlaid granite floor and marble nosings, also wide verandahs specially designed for sleeping out.
Brick motor garage, detached laundry, man's room, stables, aviaries.
It is impossible, within the limits of an advertisement, to adequately describe this fine property. I can, however, recommend it to anyone on the outlook for such a residence.
Inspection by card only, or buyers will be driven to inspect.

ARE YOU COOPED UP
in a small, stuffy office, breathing impure air and inhaling dust and germs all day long? If so, get into immediate communication with our Dept. H for particulars of the BANKSTOWN FARMLETS ESTATE, Bankstown. These fine little farms are just over two miles from the station, in a progressive locality. The soil is excellent, and splendid results may be had from market gardening, orchards, or poultry farms. This is much more profitable than the office, and much more healthful. Five-acre lots are priced at from £12 per acre. Rickard's Easy Terms, from £2 down and £1 month. Torrens Title.

YOU DON'T KNOW SYDNEY HARBOUR

MONTROSE, ROSE BAY.

Like a map it is spread out. Rose Bay stands boldly to the fore; then, in order, to the left, are Point Piper, Darling Point, Potts Point, the Domain, with the City spires beyond; on the right the eye catches Bradley's Head, Cremorne, Kirribilli, Milson's Point, Blue's Point, with the innumerable intervening Bays and jutting headlands, the light and shades varying with each cloud that is wafted o'er. Fort Denison, Clark Island, and Garden Island are prominent in the centre. Each vessel, from the large ocean-going palace to the small sailing craft, which passed up and down, is in full view.
